Maps

Introduction to Maps

While navigation is rarely an issue in Dragon Age II, plundering its countless locales of their finest treasures can be a demanding task. Help is at hand. This chapter reveals the locations of all noteworthy collectibles, including rare and unique items, locked chests and codex entries.

Before you continue, take a moment to familiarize yourself with the icons we will use throughout this chapter. As many points of interactivity (such as area exits and merchants) appear on the in-game maps, we instead focus exclusively on the countless collectibles that do not – which will make the process of tracking down treasures much easier.

Icon	Meaning	Notes
	Standard container	These can be opened by any character and include things like regular chests, but also piles of bones, corpses, furniture and so forth – in other words, any possible source of loot.
	Locked chest	Locked chests can only be opened by a rogue. There are 4 types of locks (basic, standard, complex and master), each requiring the rogue to have a minimum amount of points in the Cunning attribute (respectively 10, 20, 30 and 40).
	Rare item	Rare items include gifts, armor upgrades for companions, Codex collectibles, side quest items, and crafting ingredients or recipes. Note that some Codex collectibles are available in several areas: picking one up will deactivate the others that appear in different locations.

As a rule, all collectibles are removed from maps and replaced by new items at the beginning of each act. There are also certain collectibles that will only appear during a specific quest.

Make sure you do not miss these items during the corresponding window of opportunity, as you will not be able to collect them later on. For maximum clarity, all collectibles are represented in color-coded sets on our maps, with their availability conditions (such as act or quest restrictions) clearly stated on each map's legend.

Most maps in the game are unique and used only for a given location. For example, the Hightown map is only ever used for the Hightown district. However there are a few "generic" maps that can appear on multiple occasions in different quests, each time with a new description.

When this occurs, you will always find the name of each instance of a map clearly labeled. If in doubt, simply refer to the map section of our eGuide.

The Dialogue System

Hawke's performance in conversations is almost as important as his or her prowess in battle. In this section, we look at what each conversational option entails and how you can shape Hawke's personality. You can find advice on key quest conversations (and the branching story paths that you can negotiate) throughout the mighty Quests chapter.

Dialogue Options

Icon	Description	Notes
	Diplomatic	Core dialogue choice for the Diplomatic personality type. Very rarely causes offense, likely to engender friendship increases.
	Helpful	Part of the Diplomatic personality type. Generally appears when Hawke is poised to volunteer his services to help someone or if sympathy or understanding is called for.
	Humorous	Core dialogue choice for the Humorous personality type. Rarely causes offense, tends to be a fairly "neutral" option where companions are concerned, though Isabela and Varric sometimes respond favorably.
	Charming	Secondary dialogue choice for the Humorous personality type.
	Aggressive	Core dialogue choice for the Aggressive personality type. Most likely to cause rivalry increases with companions.
	Direct	Secondary dialogue choice for the Aggressive personality type.
	Combat	Used to initiate combat immediately. The actual result (and effect on companion rivalry and friendship) depends on the context. Cutting short a conversation with a demon or brutal slavers to attack without compunction could be viewed favorably by those present; executing a misguided yet hapless pawn in a larger scheme might invite ire.
	Call on companion	Invites the specified companion to intervene in a conversation. These often lead to a unique (and, usually, non-violent or profitable) solution to a given situation. May also lead to a friendship increase.
	Flirt	Engage with a companion in an amorous or suggestive manner. Flirting is the only way to instigate a potential romance.
	End romance	Used to reject a romantic proposition from a companion or end an existing romance. Will often lead to a rivalry increase.
	Yes	Accept a proposal or offer as put forward by another character. Usually leads to new quests.
	No	Reject a proposal or offer as put forward by another character. Be very wary when rejecting potential quest opportunities: you may not get another chance.
	Choice	Appears when Hawke can choose from multiple responses that all address the situation in different ways. May lead to rivalry or friendship, your guide should be your knowledge of the person in question.
	Special Choice	This rare dialogue option represents a "unique" choice that may lead to a special outcome. These appear in accordance with Hawke's personality, with Diplomatic, Humorous and Aggressive types all having their own opportunities appear at set points in the story.
	Pay/Extort	Used to pay or bribe people or to enquire about a possible quest's rewards. May also be used to press for further payment at the conclusion of a quest or even blackmail or extortion in certain instances.
	Lie	Attempt to lie in order to extricate Hawke from a difficult situation. A rare option, this may not always lead to the desired result.
	Investigate	Choose this option to open a sub-menu where you can ask questions to learn more about a given topic. These may in turn offer further queries and even unlock otherwise unavailable dialogue options in other conversations.

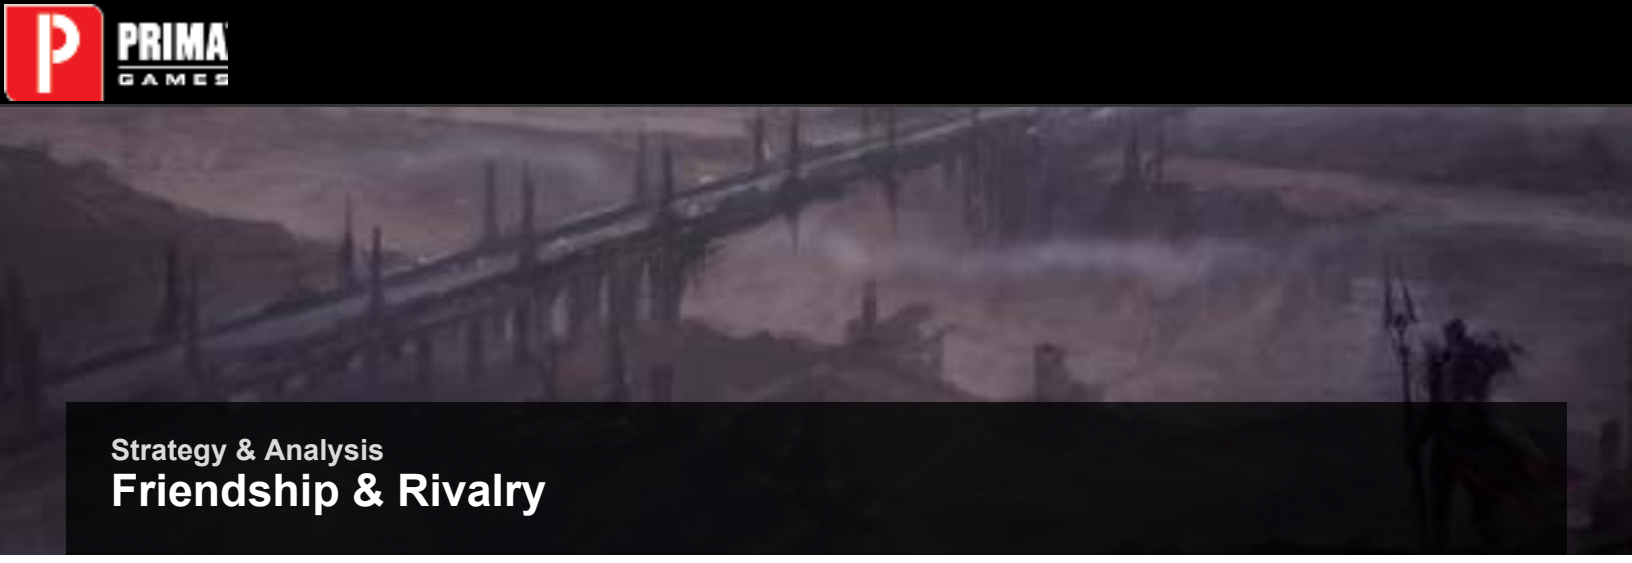
Hawke's Personality

Though it may not be apparent at first, Hawke can exhibit one of three personalities based on the dialogue choices that you favor.

- Diplomatic/Helpful: Light blue or green highlight
- Humorous/Charming: Purple highlight
- Aggressive/Direct: Red highlight

The first dialogue choice you make sets Hawke's personality. If your first pick is a Diplomatic option, for example, Hawke's voice will adopt the Diplomatic tone in the next dialogue line that follows. As you keep choosing similar options at the dialogue wheel, they "stack". If you were to decide to change your personality later on, it would take more than twice the amount of (either Humorous or Aggressive) dialog lines to activate that version of Hawke's voice. The idea behind this system is to ensure a consistency in Hawke's delivery throughout each Act. After a certain number of specific dialogue choices, Hawke's personality is effectively crystallized.

At the start of each Act, Hawke retains his or her established personality, but the "stack" of previous personality choices is reduced. This gives you a window of opportunity to change your dominant tone.



Strategy & Analysis

Friendship & Rivalry

Hawke's relationship with his companions is measured on a 200-point scale that ranges from rivalry to friendship. You can study a visual representation of his current standing with his cohorts in the active party at the Character menu screen.

- No matter if you are speaking to them directly or addressing a third party, companions will react to your conversational options in accordance with their own unique personality.

- We offer advice on major relationship shifts throughout the Quests chapter in the Companion Guidance sections that fall at the end of each quest fact sheet. Using these, you should find it easy to engineer a full friendship or rivalry.

- Completing companion quests and increasing the relationship gauge to the 50% and 100% thresholds in either direction will unlock special mid-stage and final-stage companion conversations that serve to advance and formalize Hawke's relationship with his associates.

- Another way to further a relationship is to find and deliver "gifts", a small selection of items that will usually increase friendship. We reveal the locations of these items in the Quests and Inventory chapters.

- Developing the relationship gauge to +100 in either direction will "freeze" it in perpetuity and (Bethany and Carver excepted) unlock a special ability on a talent tree unique to friendship or rivalry with the relevant companion. At this stage, further relationship adjustments are disabled: short of dismissal, betrayal or late-game plot developments, that companion will be completely dedicated to working with Hawke (as a friend or rival).

- Don't assume that developing a rivalry will lead a companion to desert Hawke. In fact, this side of the relationship spectrum can be just as powerful as an established friendship if you take it to its conclusion. In essence, a healthy rivalry means that an ally may not agree with your methods, but they respect your ability to shape the world around you – even though the way in which goals are achieved might not correspond with their individual ideologies.

Romances

- If you wish to initiate a romance with a companion, follow these simple guidelines:

- Flirt with the object of your affections whenever possible. However, note that the presence of a Flirt option isn't always a true indication that a romance is possible.

- In Act 2, try to ensure that your visits to Hawke's abode occur at night. If your desired squeeze is present on arrival, use the Flirt option to initiate the next stage. When the option arises in conversation, enquire about living together.

- After the romance begins, do not make come-hither eyes at other companions or NPCs: this will not end well. Nor, for that matter, will any degree of ambivalence or outright rejection.

- For the rest of the story, develop the relationship gauge to maximum friendship or rivalry, complete all companion quests (including any ambient situational conversations that may occur), deliver the necessary gifts, then share a moment with Hawke's loved one in the calm before the storm during Dragon Age II's epic conclusion (you'll know it when you get there).

- For Isabela and Sebastian, the above technique only partially applies. The Companion Analysis section at the conclusion of this chapter contains a complete guide to wooing both (though Sebastian only ever offers a chaste relationship) but is surrounded by heavy spoilers if you are still on your first playthrough.

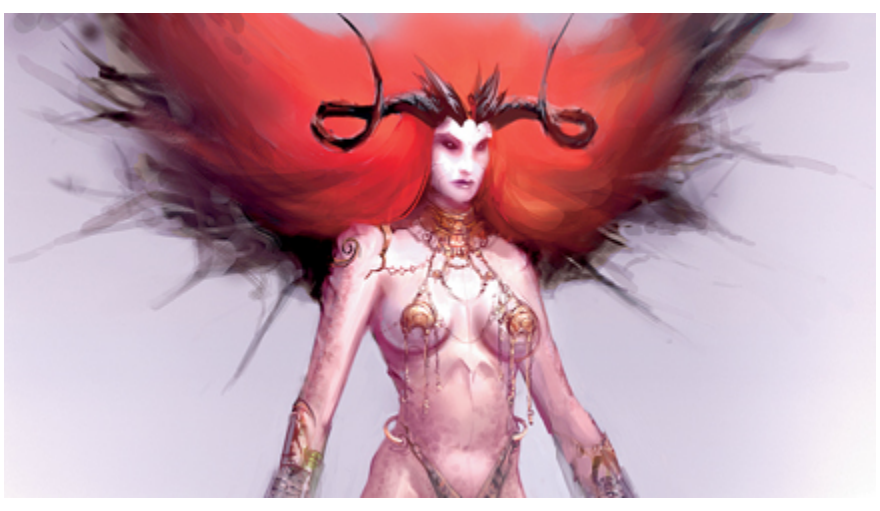
Attributes

Main Attributes

Building an effective character requires a little extra insight into the game's workings, applying to both Hawke and the companion characters. The one thing to remember when leveling up is that your character can't do everything. Many abilities only come into their own at an advanced stage, earning their chance to cross-class combo when upgraded for example (see page 174), so specialization is the key to success. You will not be able to take every ability open to your characters – or even half the abilities – so having a specific goal in mind helps to create a much stronger party. Use the table below for a detailed appraisal of each main attribute.

Attribute Descriptions
Strength	The primary attribute for warriors, high Strength makes physical attacks more likely to connect and increases the damage inflicted. Every attribute point invested in Strength also gives a point in Fortitude, building resistance against the effects of knockdown from a powerful blow or elemental effects like being set aflame.
Dexterity	Rogues rely on Dexterity to attack successfully and cause damage with their standard blows. Higher Dexterity also benefits all classes by increasing the chance of scoring a critical hit.
Magic	This attribute determines the attack and damage of a mage when wielding a staff in combat, as well as the potency of their spells. Attribute points placed here also increase magic resistance, though the increase per point is so small that it is unwise for other classes to waste them here.
Cunning	Cunning increases defense for all classes, so it makes sense to spend attribute points in this attribute for ALL characters. This attribute also governs critical damage, raising the effectiveness of critical hits.
Willpower	This determines the size of a mage's mana pool and the stamina reserve of a warrior or rogue. Higher willpower grants more ability use or spellcasting before the character is exhausted and reduced to trading basic attacks. As a minimum requirement for equipping mage armor, even dedicated blood mages might benefit from some investment here.
Constitution	Constitution increases health (+5 per attribute point) and physical resistance. This attribute is also a minimum requirement for warriors wishing to equip certain pieces of armor. Every character can benefit from a little extra robustness, especially blood mages or those with little to start with, but there are equipment items that provide extra health so it's a decision you can delay until necessary.

There is a sweet spot for leveling up that makes most efficient use of the attribute points spent. To maintain an optimal value, you need to invest roughly 1.25 points per level (in other words, 5 points every 4 levels) in your primary attribute for attack, and 1 point of Cunning per level for optimal defense. The effect on derived attributes – such as attack, defense, damage and armor – is that a small investment sees little return, but ramps up quickly as you approach the optimal value for that level. Attribute points above that optimal value will still increase the character's power but will give diminishing returns in effectiveness.



Optimal Development Plan
Class	Primary Attribute	Secondary Attributes
Warrior	Strength	Constitution & Cunning
Rogue	Dexterity	Cunning (& Willpower in the later game)

Derived Attributes

These attributes appear on the Character screen.

Attack

Your attack score is your chance of successfully hitting an enemy with a basic attack. This takes your attack percentage (derived from your primary attribute) and subtracts the enemy's defense and displacement percentages (if applicable). Attack scores are also modified against enemies of higher rank (-15% for a lieutenant and -30% against a boss). The final sum is the likelihood of success. If you fail to make your attack, you will strike a glancing blow that does 10% of your character's base damage.

Abilities such as Crushing Prison, Mighty Blow and Backstab never miss, although their effectiveness against the enemy isn't guaranteed.

Defense

Defense (derived from Cunning) is a character's ability to deflect, dodge or parry incoming attacks. With good defense, the enemy's blows miss or inflict only minimal damage. Defense is reduced against enemies of rank, by 20% for lieutenants and 40% against bosses. Every player has a base 5% defense, even if no points are invested in Cunning, and there is an 80% cap.

Damage

Damage determines the harm inflicted on an opponent, based on the equipped weapon and the character's primary attribute. The stated figure is a base rate for attacking an unarmored opponent, as armor absorbs some of the damage. Because the attack speed of a character can vary, the second figure gives DPS (damage per second) as a comparative calculation. A battle axe can inflict heavy damage but is slow to swing, while twin daggers can stab rapidly. It's important to note that your damage also determines the power of your abilities, so equipping a stronger sword or staff improves other talents beyond your standard attack.

Armor

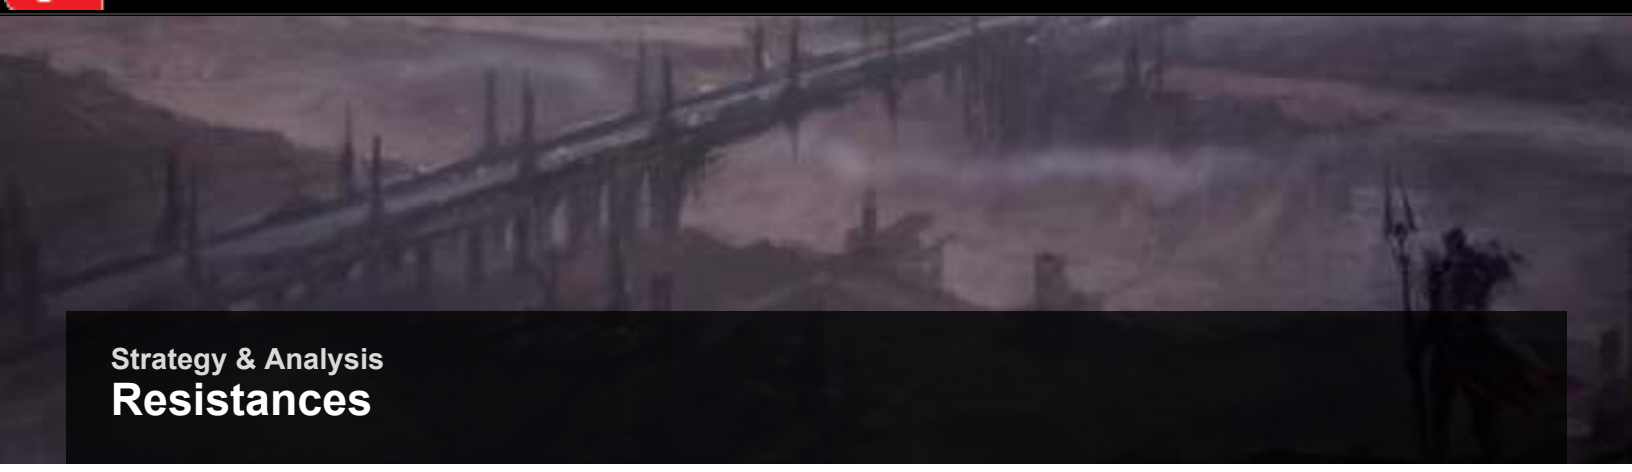
Armor is resistance against physical assault, reducing the harm visited upon the character's health bar. The values of all equipped armor and armor bonuses are added together and converted into a percentage for the proportion of physical damage that is immediately disregarded from each attack. Armor's effectiveness is reduced by 10% against lieutenant ranks and by 20% against bosses.

Critical Chance

Every attack has a small possibility of generating a critical hit, as indicated by this Dexterity-based percentage. Items and abilities can influence critical chance, which is also increased by outflanking the enemy and attacking from behind or the side. A critical hit causes the enemy's health bar to flash white, indicating that they will take additional damage. The actual amount of critical damage is a percentage determined by Cunning, giving another reason for all classes to invest some points here.

Fortitude

The ability to withstand being knocked over or sent flying backwards is a combination of Fortitude and maximum health. Feeble spellcasters might consider specializing in Force Mage (with Fist of the Maker) at level 7 to obtain Unshakable at level 8, instantly gaining 100 points of Fortitude and an end to interrupted casting. On higher difficulties, many character builds can benefit from some points in constitution for greater maximum health.



Strategy & Analysis

Resistances

Resistances

Whether you think of armor as “physical resistance” or fire resistance as “armor against flames”, the point to grasp is that they work identically. Each element is counteracted by a specific resistance in the same way that armor counteracts physical damage. For example, characters with 10% fire resistance suffer 10% less fire damage.

Checking your character’s Resistance scores may reveal zero armor ratings against certain elements, meaning they suffer the full damage from such attacks. You can raise resistances through various means as revealed in the table below.

There are a few additional points worth noting:

- Damage resistance applies to damage of any kind and combines with all other resistances, making it the most useful resistance of all when weighing up items and abilities. Against a physical attack, it adds to armor; against a mage’s Fireball, it adds to fire resistance and magical resistance for a cumulative damage reduction. Applying negative damage resistance to enemies (see the Entropy talent tree) increases the efficacy of subsequent attacks, a viable strategy against tough bosses.

- Dealing in the permeating energy of the Fade, spirit-based attacks are unique in rendering the victim’s magic resistance and damage resistance only half as effective.

- Against magical attacks, magic resistance is added to the elemental or physical resistance. Mages develop magic resistance through their primary attribute, while other characters need protective accessories. Just like physical or elemental resistances, magic resistance counteracts a percentage of the damage that an attack would have inflicted. It also reduces the duration of hostile magical effects on a character in accordance with its percentage value.

- If enemies have significant resistance or immunity to a certain type of attack, a small shield appears next to their health bar whenever they’re hit by that element.

Resistance	Protection from Abilities	Protection from Equipment (Examples)	Protection from Runes
Fire	Elemental Shield & Arcane Wall (Arcane tree); Elemental Aegis & Rally (Defender tree)	Dragon Hunter’s Hauberk	Rune of Fire Warding
Cold		Regret	Rune of Frost Warding
Electricity		Illwan's Hood	Rune of Lightning Warding
Spirit		Chantry Amulet	Rune of Spirit Warding
Nature		Poisonwood Locket	Rune of Nature Warding
Physical	Rock Armor (Primal tree)	Any armor	Rune of Protection
Magical	Resolute (Defender tree)	Karasten’s Belt	Torpor’s Barrier Rune

Strategy & Analysis

Elements

There are actually six types of elemental damage – fire, cold, electricity, nature, spirit and physical – the last being associated with ordinary melee weapons. Most offensive spells produce one type of elemental damage and certain weapons (including most staves) inflict elemental instead of physical damage. Weapons that have been enchanted by Runes (see page 214) may inflict several different types of damage simultaneously.

Use the Bestiary chapter of this guide to discover the elemental weaknesses of enemies (which may include physical damage if they have weak armor) and select the appropriate weapons for the task. On Nightmare difficulty, enemies also have elemental resistances. A shield icon next to an enemy's health bar indicates an immunity to your current attack.

If you enable "Show Damage Numbers" in the Options screen, you can identify different types of damage by the color the text appears in.

Element	Text Color	Secondary Effect	Rune	Ability
Fire	Orange	Immolation	Rune of Fire	Fireball, Firestorm
Cold	Blue	Slows enemies	Rune of Frost	Winter's Grasp, Cone of Cold
Electricity	Yellow	Stunning jolt (holds enemies briefly)	Rune of Lightning	Chain Lightning, Tempest
Nature	Green	-	Rune of Nature	Wrath of the Elvhen, Ensnare
Spirit	Purple	Halves magic resistance and damage resistance	Rune of Spirit	Holy Smite, Spirit Bolt, Despair
Physical	White	-	Rune of Impact	Stonefist, Fist of the Maker, weapon attacks

Strategy & Analysis

Status Effects

Certain spells and talents boast more interesting consequences than simply inflicting damage. They afflict the enemy with status effects, some of which serve as the opening conditions for cross-class combos, and all of which can be exploited by the informed player.

Status Effect	Description	Inflicted By (Ability)
Stun	This effect stops the enemy in their tracks for a couple of seconds, giving you the chance to retaliate or flee. Rogues can take advantage of stunned enemies for automatic critical hits. Victims forget their current target and may choose a new one when re-evaluating threat.	Pommel Strike (warrior) Mind Blast (mage) Miasmic Flask (rogue) Combustion Grenades (all)
Confused	Confusion disrupts enemy action and can occasionally cause opponents to attack each other.	Confusion
Obscured	The rogue employs a smoke screen to hide the party and temporarily increase defense.	Chameleon's Breath, Impenetrable Fog (rogue)
Brittle	When enemies are frozen in Brittle status, they are especially prone to damage multipliers from shattering blows.	Winter's Grasp, Cone of Cold (mage) Petrify, Desiccate (mage)
Disoriented	This extreme state of shock and bewilderment leaves the victim with heavily reduced defense.	Chaos, Overpowering Fog (rogue)
Staggered	The enemy in Staggered status is dizzied and unsteady on their feet following a concussive force. They will try to fight on but suffer penalties to attack and defense.	Pommel Blow, Aftershock, Pummel, Sunder (warrior)
Sleep	Targets only enemies and removes them briefly from combat. Sleepers awake on expiry of the spell's duration or earlier if attacked.	Sleep, Entropic Cloud (mage)
Paralyzed	A creature in a state of paralysis cannot move, attack or cast spells.	Glyph of Paralysis, Crushing Prison, Coma, Petrify (mage)
Dispel	Removes hostile magic and status effects on the player, including "debuffs" that negatively affect character attributes. Simultaneously, it cancels any sustained spells and magical "buffs" that boost enemy performance.	Dispel Magic (mage)
Enslavement	Enemies subject to enslavement temporarily appear in the blue ground ring of an ally, fighting on the side of the player until their self-control is restored.	Blood Slave (mage)
Silence	This templar sanction prevents enemies from casting spells or using abilities that demand mana/stamina.	Silence (warrior)
Immobilized	A creature can be immobilized by a sticky substance, or an arrow that pins them to the spot, though they are still able to attack and defend.	Tar Bomb (all) Pinning Shot (rogue) Traps (environment)
Knockback/Knockdown	Every attack has its own degree of force, so you'll regularly see enemies stagger or swept from their feet by an impact. This applies to default weapon assaults and the vast majority of offensive abilities.	Various

Cross-Class Combos

Though you can technically survive without them, employing cross-class combos unlocks your party's full damage-dealing potential. If you are troubled by high-rank enemies, these two-part attacks are unrivalled in their capacity to neutralize resilient foes rapidly.

- Each class can set up a cross-class combo opportunity by hindering an enemy with a specific status effect (see tables). The combo occurs when a character of another class follows up with an ability that exploits this to deliver a very powerful attack. A cross-class combo can only be completed once per status effect.

- You must acquire all stated upgrades in order to use cross-class combos. For ease of use, we highlight in our tables the actual spell or talent employed to cause or exploit an effect in bold.

- Unless we specify otherwise, the likelihood of an effect being inflicted with an applicable status effect or exploited by a cross-class combo finish is 100% – enemy resistances and immunities notwithstanding.

- With Winter's Blast and Cone of Cold, you really need to invest points in the Elemental tree to obtain Elemental Mastery. This increases the probability of a frozen enemy becoming Brittle to 100%.

- Softening up a tough individual opponent with a debuff or two before you implement a cross-class combo is a great way to maximize damage. For example, dropping a Hex of Torment or Mark of Death on a target can make a real difference.

- If Hawke has access to the Reaver specialization, Devour and its two upgrades can be employed to take a big bite of an enemy's health, healing the warrior, but then automatically set up a Stagger for a rogue or mage to capitalize on.

- There's a similarly interesting effect with the Disorienting Criticals passive ability in the Shadow specialization tree: with a little management, it's possible to hit a Staggered or Brittle target for huge injury, then inflict the Disoriented condition in the aftermath.

- You can automate the process of exploiting the Brittle, Stagger and Disorient status effects with the Tactics system.

Staggered Combos (initiated by a warrior)

Caused By	Exploited By	Talents/Spells & Effects
Shield Bash + Pummel (Weapon and Shield) Cleave + Claymore (Vanguard; 40% chance) Pommel Strike + Pommel Blow (Warmonger) Tremor + Aftershock (Warmonger; 40% chance) Sunder (Two-Handed; 50% chance after any critical hit) Devour + Voracious (Reaver)	Mages	Chain Lightning + Chain Reaction (Primal): 600% damage and 200% elemental force against all Staggered targets that are struck by each arc. Crushing Prison + Paralyzing Prison (Arcane): 200% damage to single target, plus 100% chance to paralyze. Fist of the Maker + Maker's Hammer (Force Mage): 900% damage to Staggered targets in AoE range. Hemorrhage + Paralyzing Hemorrhage (Blood Mage): 900% damage to all Staggered foes in the AoE radius.
	Rogues	Explosive Strike + Merciless Strike (Dual Weapon): 400% damage to a single target. Lacerate + Maim (Dual Weapon): 100% chance of Lacerate success on Staggered targets. Kickback + Backlash (Marksman): 800% physical force to single target. Vendetta + Blood Feud (Duelist): 300% damage versus single target.

Disoriented Combos (initiated by a rogue)

Pinning Shot + Disorienting Shot (Archery/Bianca) Fatiguing Fog + Overpowering Fog (Sabotage) Confusion + Chaos (Sabotage) Disorienting Criticals (Shadow; caused by critical hits while obscured)	Mages	Stonefist + Golem's Fist (Primal): 200% damage to a single target. Spirit Bolt + Spirit Strike (Spirit): 200% damage and elemental force to a single target. Walking Bomb + Corrosive Walking Bomb + Virulent Walking Bomb (Spirit): 200% damage to target, 200% damage to enemies affected by blast, and 200% physical force.
	Warriors	Assault + Battery (Weapon and Shield): 400% damage to Disoriented targets in range on final hit. Scatter + Disperse (Weapon and Shield): 300% damage to Disoriented targets in range. Devour + Insatiable (Reaver): 300% damage to single target, 300% health gain to user.

Brittle Combos (initiated by a mage)

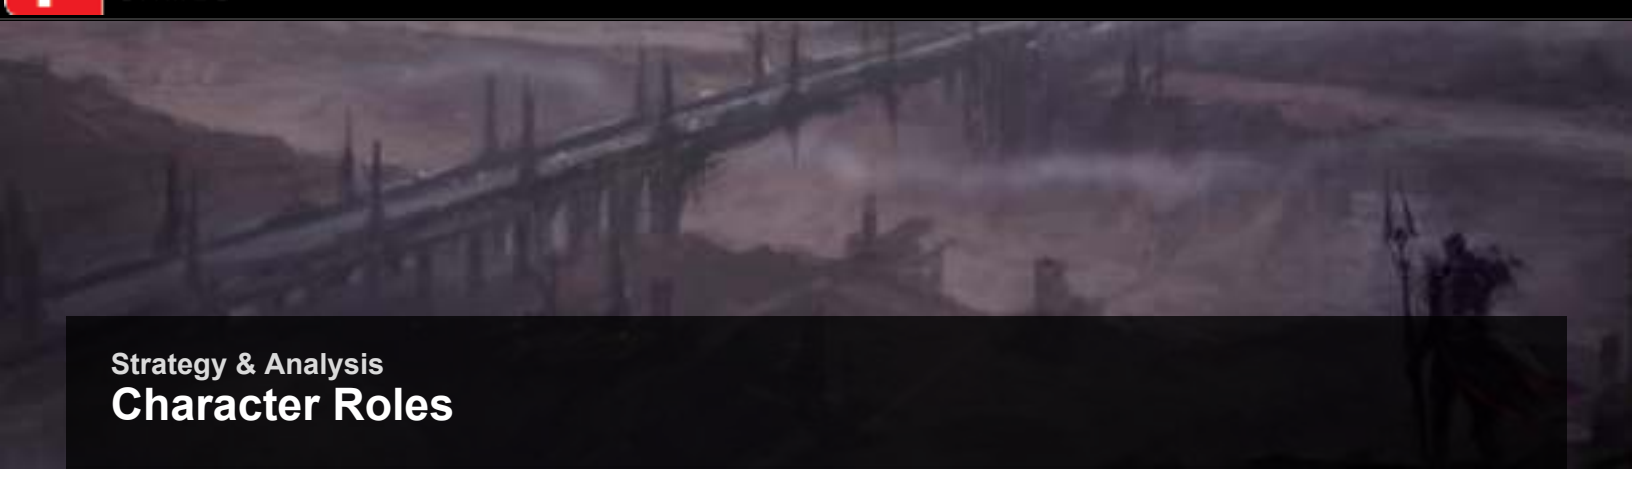
Winter's Grasp + Winter's Blast (Elemental; 40% chance) Cone of Cold + Deep Freeze (Elemental; 20% chance) Petrify + Desiccate (Primal)	Rogues	Bursting Arrow + Shattering Arrow (Archery/Bianca): 600% damage to all Brittle targets in AoE radius, and 400% elemental force. Archer's Lance + Punishing Lance (Archery/Bianca): 600% damage to all affected Brittle targets, plus 400% physical force. Assassinate + Annihilate (Assassin): 400% damage to single opponent.
	Warriors	Mighty Blow + Shattering Blow (Two-Handed): 300% damage to all affected Brittle targets and 200% physical force. Scythe + Reaper (Two-Handed): 200% damage to all affected Brittle targets and 200% physical force.



Strategy & Analysis

Character Roles

Each of your companions will have a specific role to play if your party is to fight as an efficient unit. The following role descriptions include a few recommended sample character builds to show the extent to which your companions can be empowered by pursuing a very specific direction.

Tank

The role of the tank is to generate the most threat, drawing in all enemies or occupying the efforts of a boss so that your foes focus all attention on the tank and leave other characters alone. To this end, the tank is a sponge for damage and needs to be heavily armored, preferably possessing a high Constitution and enough Strength to equip the best. Assigning one character as a tank effectively protects weaker characters from facing too many assailants.

Holding the interest of so many enemies at once requires an understanding of the Threat system. Although you can create a warrior Hawke in the tank mold, Aveline has been clearly crafted for this role – right down to her Guardian specialization and her unique Gift shield.

Favored Character Builds	Warrior Hawke, Aveline
Primary Attributes	Strength, Constitution
Essential Abilities	Weapon and Shield: All Warmonger: Taunt, Bellow, Bravery, Bravado, Bravura Battlemaster: Bolster, Second Wind Guardian (Aveline): Indomitable Defender: Elemental Aegis, Elemental Shroud
Aspirational Items	Etched Ring of the Twins, Bardin's Folly, Wardwall, Lord Bearing's Wall, Shield of the Knight Herself (Aveline), Champion armor set (Hawke), Perrin's Nail, Hack, Runes of Protection
Tactics	Sustain Shield Defense (15%) and Bravery (30%), upgrading as you advance. Switch on Elemental Aegis (20%) only to match anticipated elemental attacks, turning off to enable more ability use. Advance to draw enemies and Taunt early to ensure none slip past, repeating as Cooldown allows. Reserve Shield Bash and Scatter for coordinated cross-class combos when a Chain Lightning or Fist of the Maker is ready and waiting. Assault and Scatter enemies after a rogue has Disoriented them.
Desirable Equipment Properties	+ X damage resistance; + X% threat generation; + X fortitude; + X health; + X healing to this character; + X stamina; immunity to stun; immunity to knockback

Healer

In prolonged battles on higher difficulty settings, you will find your party suffering low health, unconsciousness and injury. The role of the healer is to monitor their companions and restore health when necessary. All spells having a set Cooldown, the healer benefits from possessing additional healing spells to share out simultaneously.

A healer will still spend their other time in either support or offense. Of the many options available, we suggest you pursue the Primal tree as a complement to Aveline. This opens up several cross-class combo opportunities and is especially effective at following up on her Staggered opponents.

Thanks to his Vengeance personal tree, Anders is the best choice for healing and support, though only a mage Hawke can opt for the Spirit Healer tree.

Favored Character Builds	Mage Hawke, Anders
Primary Attributes	Magic, Willpower
Essential Abilities	Creation: Heal, Greater Heal Spirit Healer (Hawke): All Vengeance (Anders): Panacea branch Primal: Chain Lightning, Chain Reaction, Petrify, Desiccate, Tempest, Strikes Twice, Galvanism Entropy (Hawke): Horror
Aspirational Items	Ring of the Ferryman, Bassrath-Kata, The Sylvan's Heart, Enchanter's Staff, Champion armor set, Vestments of Sacrifice, Cumberland Circle Robes, Elfroot Potions, Restoration Potions, Life Ward Potion, Mythal's Favor
Tactics	Use Heal for individuals on low health, especially your tank. Repeat the cheaper Aid Allies or Group Heal when all companions have taken damage and one is on low health. Reserve Desiccate for coordinated combos, preparing the way for attacks that harm Brittle foes. Cast Chain Lightning on enemies Staggered by the tank.
Desirable Equipment Properties	+ X% healing by this character; + X mana/mana regeneration; - X% threat generation; + X electricity damage

Damage-Dealer

A damage-dealer speeds up the process of dispatching the opposition by inflicting massive amounts of damage in very little time. As revealed in the table below, this can be achieved by virtually any character provided you specialize them accordingly.

Class	Combat Style	Party Member
Mage	Spells	Hawke, Merril, Bethany, Anders (if not used as main healer)
Rogue	Archery	Hawke, Varric, Sebastian
Rogue	Dual Weapon	Hawke, Isabela
Warrior	Two-Handed Weapon	Hawke, Carver, Fenris

When facing massed opponents, the damage-dealing role – also known as "nuke" – is best fulfilled by a mage with an array of offensive AoE spells. To get the best bonuses for damage, it is important that the mage chooses the Elemental or Primal discipline and first fills out the entire tree (with upgrades), rather than spreading themselves thinly over both. Furthering their career, the mage can consider debuffer spells or specialization trees.

When it comes to inflicting large amounts of pain on single opponents, you have various options. A warrior in the Two-Handed Reaver/Berserker tradition can work wonders, with Fenris as your companion exemplar, but there is also plenty of provision for the role to fall to a rogue:

Isabela's capacity as a damage-dealer is of such ferocity that she is likely to draw threat to her (and thus away from the tank). This is not necessarily a bad thing, though, as you could employ Isabela in an off-tank role (with the Across the Bow and Savvy talents being especially useful).

Archer rogues can also deal large amounts of damage while enjoying the (relative) safety of range – a most welcome feature when Nightmare's friendly fire comes in. Varric is geared to be a very effective archer. This is especially true as the game uses base weapon damage in calculating the power of special moves, which greatly advantages Bianca. Taking Subterfuge for escape and Sabotage for combo potential, the archer sets up Stunned, Confused and Disoriented enemies for others while reserving Punishing Lance and Shattering Arrow for Brittle victims.

Additional Roles

Debuffer/Saboteur

This mage support role takes the entire Entropy tree, packing superbly useful Hexes for reducing enemy capabilities. Every sensible mage can cheaply cast Horror for a quick holding fix on many enemies otherwise immune to Stun. But it's the further upgrades and progression to Entropic Cloud that really make a difference when you need to incapacitate devastators, assassins and bosses – either to take them down quickly or to get rid of all other foes before the effect wears off.

Lockpicker

It's frustrating to pass up locked treasure chests or suffer traps, because you will lose out on thousands of XP over the game and on valuable loot. If you happen to find any items with a related property (bonus to lockpick or bonus to disarm traps) then hold on to them. Even if they're weaker than other pieces in your inventory, you can equip them purely for the duration of the task of opening a locked chest or disarming a trap.

Strategy & Analysis

Party Builds

For sheer capacity to survive, the ideal party centers on a tank. Though in no way mandatory, this is the surest way to exploit the game's assumptions and advantages.

Players opting for the Hard and Nightmare difficulty settings will still find plenty of challenge in optimizing their party for the later extended battles. So the second step is to consider the inclusion of a healer. A good player may survive on Hard with only a Heal spell or a stack of potions, for the most part, hitting strong and fast to reduce battle times, but tougher moments will prompt a rethink. Again, this plays to the system, so at least one mage is recommended for the breadth and number of abilities they can bring to bear.

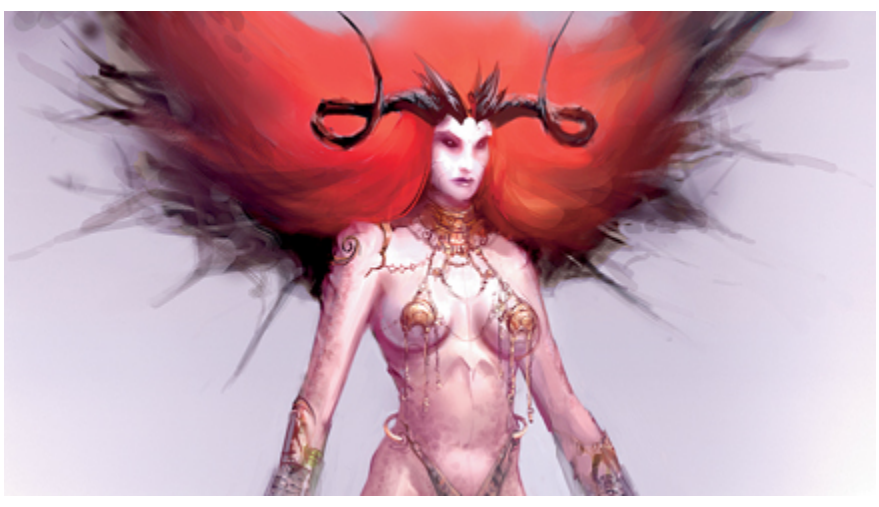
If the tank is good at their job then a second mage can be a candidate. There are enough magical disciplines and specializations for further mages to cover entirely different areas – especially damage-dealing and debuffing.

With an archer rogue as the fourth role, you can cover all adventuring needs with a one-melee, three-ranged party build in which your tank keeps the opposition firmly away from their companions. When threat is drawn away from the tank, the distance grants time to spot the break and call a Taunt or focus three-way fire.

Fenris and Isabela provide the companion choice of melee damage dealers. A two-melee party needs to manage threat more carefully but can exploit deathblows and crowd control (Whirlwind, Vendetta) to eliminate injured, hateful enemies as a priority.

Strategy & Analysis

Tactics



While you always manually control the currently selected character, the other party members behave according to the Tactics you define for them.

Tactics are built around a simple idea: you set a condition on the left side of the screen and if this condition is true in a battle, the corresponding action on the right side of the screen is executed; if not, the next condition is checked.

Of course, Tactics must be regularly adjusted as, for instance, the requirements of a party in Act 1 might be completely different for the same individuals at the start of Act 2. We can still offer a selection of useful tips that will enable you to fine-tune the default Tactics sets to get the most out of your party.

General Tips

- Don't be intimidated! You can't "break" your party by dabbling with Tactics, as you can easily return to the default set.

- If you modify a character's Tactics, this custom set of parameters will be used until you specify otherwise. You will need to manually add new talents and spells to the list after each level-up.

- Don't forget that Tactics sets are read from top to bottom. Every time a Tactic is implemented, the system begins again from the top of the list. For this reason, high-priority Tactics (such as healing or "staple" abilities for crowd control and cross-class combos) should always be placed at the top.

- If you experience issues with companions using abilities while you are carefully executing a manual strategy in a tough fight, note that you can easily disable or enable entire sets at the Tactics screen with a simple key or button press.

Automating certain processes cuts out a lot of needless micromanagement, so we'll now look at two ways in which simple additions to the default Tactics sets can be of service.

Healing & Supporting Tips

- The classic setup for Anders's Aid Allies ability is "Self: At least 3 party members below 50% health", though you may find that picking the version that only specifies two party members makes him more inclined to use the spell in a timely manner.

- If you find the required crafting ingredients and don't mind the expense, setting up your healer to automatically use Restoration Potions at low health instead of Heal will leave the spell available for other emergencies; as a secondary benefit, the tincture will also replenish your healer's mana.

- A healer can also play a role in enemy management. If you have Glyph of Paralysis, you can use this to temporarily disable stronger enemies throughout the battle. "Enemy: Highest health" is a useful condition that will generally impede a high-rank opponent such as a commander; if you are having problems with enemy Assassins, the "Enemy: Nearest visible rogue" condition can be of service.

- If you create a "nuke" mage, high on Magic and Willpower, but prone to shattering quickly under enemy blows, you could set up a "[Mage Name]: Being attacked by a melee attack", with "Glyph of Repulsion" as the following action.

Cross-Class Combo Tips

- To set up a Tactic that exploits the Brittle, Staggered or Disoriented status effects, select "Target: Condition", then select "Enemy" → "Status", then pick the appropriate condition from the list.

- Let's use the fully upgraded Winter's Grasp as an example. This generally freezes a single target, so set up "Enemy: Highest health" → "Winter's Grasp". Reposition this at the top of your mage's Tactics list. You can now set up the finishing move: we'll use the ever-useful Varric in this instance. With its upgrade, his Archer's Lance ability can inflict massive damage against a Brittle target (which is why we specify "Highest health" earlier). Create the "Enemy: BRITTLE" → "Archer's Lance" Tactic and move it to the top of the list, then go try it out in a live fire situation.

- For those who have the time and inclination, you can use the "Jump to tactic" action to create crude "subroutines" at the end of a Tactics list. This might help to encourage an AI-controlled character to differentiate between a single target ripe for a cross-class combo and groups more suited to an AoE finish. Here's a very rough-'n'-ready example, using Varric:

#	Tactic
1:	"Enemy: BRITTLE" Ý "Jump to: 18"
17:	"Self: Any" Ý "Jump to: 20"
18:	"Enemy: Clustered with at least 3 enemies" Ý "Bursting Arrow"
19:	"Enemy: BRITTLE" Ý "Archer's Lance"

Strategy & Analysis

Combat Strategy

Combat Priorities

Open the battle by killing your most dangerous enemies (devastators and assassins) and incapacitating commanders. With the biggest hitters and annoyances removed, look to reduce enemy numbers by focusing on the weaker ones. Keep using basic stuns on the commander to keep his aura deactivated so that weak creatures can be eliminated. The commander's significant health bar can then be tackled with focused fire.

Pin-Down

Having identified a priority target such as an assassin or devastator, it is urgent that you prevent them from employing their powerful strikes and subsequent escape procedures. They must be pinned down while you undertake a potentially lengthy attempt to wipe out their entire health bar in one uninterrupted assault. There are many useful abilities that can be queued in succession to maintain a hold on the enemy for an extended duration: Horror, Pinning Shot, Glyph of Paralysis, Winter's Blast, Stonefist, Crushing Prison, and so forth.

Focused Fire

Focusing the damage of all party members on one enemy naturally speeds up their elimination, and ordering attacks into cross-class combos can earn enormous damage multipliers. However, there are other tactics that can be put in place to secure greater, faster damage. These work best the sooner they are placed:

- Damage resistance reduction on enemy (Death Hex, Entropic Cloud).
- Critical chance increases on enemy (Brand and Mark of Death).
- Attack or critical chance increases on party (Valiant Aura and Rally).
- Accelerated attacks by party (Haste, Speed).

Kiting

When an enemy decides to close on a target, there is no need for the target to stand and wait. Indeed, if the companion in question can outrun the opponents, then he or she can lead them around the battlefield, while other party members pile on ranged damage and closing attacks. This works best against bosses and large, slow enemies whose main attack is melee. Further slowing rounds of cold and electricity damage can keep a powerful foe tied up and unable to deliver its attack for a prolonged period. Additionally, the party can profit from healing and time to burn through Cooldowns while the enemy is being kited.

Peeling

Exploring a new area, your first sight of an enemy squad will be limited to the nearest targets. You can exploit this to peel off enemies from the main squad in small, manageable numbers:

- Order your party to Hold Position.
- Approach only as closely as you need to catch the attention of the nearest enemies.
- Use a ranged attack to attract them if required.
- Guide your scout in retreat back to your party, leading a few enemies in tow.

The Archer Trap Principle

This works for any team with ranged attacks, and can be initiated with peeling. The idea is to lead enemies into a hail of spells and projectiles in order to soften them up before they can initiate melee combat:

- Place your tank out front as the bait for enemies and Hold Position.
- Lay down a Glyph, Hail of Arrows, Miasmic Flask, Gravitic Ring or any other effects ahead of them to slow and halt approaching enemies.
- Unleash the fury of your bolts, arrows and spells upon easy targets.
- Use any other repellent force to drive enemies back into the firing zone. Even an upgraded Mind Blast, when confined to a corridor, can propel enemies like a walk-in cannon.
- Finally, enter melee combat against weakened opponents.

Bottlenecks

Using the environment is a valid tactic in dealing with large numbers of aggressors. Enemies can be channeled into a corridor or held at a doorway by a blocking tank, while other characters use ranged support from behind.

Solid obstacles provide cover, completely blocking ranged attacks and also any spell targeting. If you can't see your victim in line of sight, you can't cast a spell on them – although you could catch them with Area of Effect splash damage.

Strategy & Analysis

Nightmare Difficulty

The Nightmare difficulty setting introduces three major differences to combat:
1. Attacks cause friendly fire. This cuts both ways, as not only can you hurt your own companions but enemies can also hurt each other.

2. Enemies now boast elemental immunities. Refer to the Bestiary for details.

3. Enemy toughness is scaled up. They inflict even more damage on you and take more to kill. Assassins have a chance to steal potions from the party and their stealth attacks bypass the victim's armor completely. Commanders are able to direct their troops at party members for a concerted attack.

Playing on Nightmare therefore requires a more careful style of play. The following tips will help you get the right habits:

- You are your own worst enemy in Nightmare. The friendly fire of your best attacks will wipe out companions who get in the way. AoE spells that only target enemies include Sleep and the electricity attacks of the Primal tree.

- Micromanagement squeezes the most from your party members, ensuring they work in a coordinated fashion. Pause the game frequently to monitor their status and issue new orders.

- Cross-class combos are essential for grinding down enemies, which is why it is important that you choose when your companions unleash their talents. The damage multipliers possible against enemies you have deliberately set up with specific status effects make it possible to grind down the toughest enemies.

- If you have a Spirit Healer with Second Chance, you no longer need to worry about injuries. Otherwise, away from home, use any injury kits to cure as soon as possible: you'll force the game's generosity in providing up to the inventory limit of four from loot piles and containers. Such drops come as additional treasures and do not replace money or item loot.

- Battles remain ongoing while there are still enemies in the vicinity (red dots visible on the minimap). If you can retreat a sufficient distance, you can force the conclusion of the battle and some recovery time, not to mention a save game opportunity.

- Crafted poisons, potions and bombs are extremely effective combat aids. Imbuing a rogue's twin blades with slowing effects can turn the tide of a tough battle, and you don't have to be a mage to swig a Rock Armor Potion for impressive damage resistance.

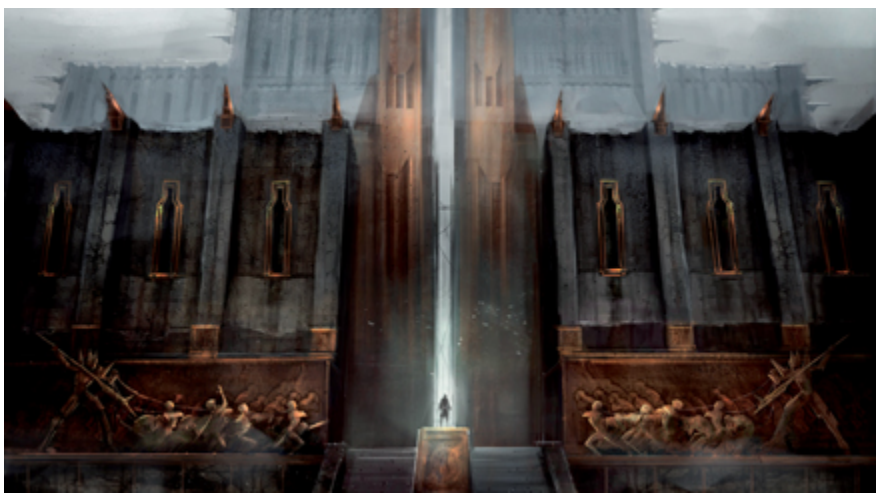
- To perform any kind of Area of Effect ability safely, you will need to keep enemies grouped and isolated. The Force Mage specialization sacrifices damage for effects that repel, slow and pull enemies to where they can be hammered and blasted. Warriors can use Scatter to drive back a few enemies at once. Use Hold Position to stop your characters running off into the fray.

- One-hit kills from enemies can ruin your day. If your mage cannot survive long enough to raise a Barrier or Glyph when an assassin pops into stealth, buy more health with equipment properties and spend some attribute points in Constitution. Note that a character with less than 10% health remaining will bleed out to death unless healed.

- Crowd control is essential when critters and archers can pose a serious knockdown threat. Enemy damage and force scales with difficulty, and a mage can no longer afford to Mind Blast with allies in the vicinity because of the AoE effect.

Strategy & Analysis

Threat Management



Threat is the system by which enemies pick their targets. Much as you look out for Arcane Horrors or Blood Mages among the enemy ranks, so your enemies will first try to eliminate the biggest danger to themselves, and each enemy assesses threat individually. Managing threat enables you to control the fight, guiding the enemy to attack a strong character (your tank) instead of a frail one.

The initial threat rating when your party encounters trouble is based on class potential, so warriors will be the priority target. After that, the class threat generation applies to all subsequent actions and your characters' threat level is determined in real time by various factors:

- Proximity accounts for up to 100 points of threat when up close, falling to 1 point at 60m distance on a linear scale (the maximum amount of threat being 1,000). This factor naturally distinguishes melee fighters over ranged attackers. If you want to give your tank an early advantage, make sure he or she piles straight into the enemy to draw them in.

- Damage is the major factor and can alter threat priorities during a fight. Warriors can maintain their high threat by inflicting plentiful damage, although tanks will always do less than damage dealers in the long run. This is why your tank needs to Taunt opponents or to use other abilities to maintain their attention.

- The amount of threat generated by damage is directly proportional to the harm inflicted on the enemy. If a companion's attack cuts an enemy's health bar in half, the threat that your companion poses to the enemy will rise by 50% of maximum threat (so, +500). Damage dealers can thus generate threat spikes, especially when concluding a cross-class combo. This is when they need to use whatever abilities they have to lower or transfer threat, as revealed in the table to the right.

- Items that affect threat generation (such as Ghillie Brogues) impact directly on these amounts, so keep them for your most powerful damage dealers.

- Secondary damage also builds threat, albeit slowly, so mages and warriors with support skills will accrue threat from the damage buffs they apply to the whole party.

- Against a larger enemy or boss, a change in threat priorities can be a viable tactic to keep them occupied so that the previous target can recover. "Kiting" an enemy (see Combat Strategy on the previous page) can postpone their attacks and is especially effective if the boss can be slowed by magic or other talents.

Threat-Related Abilities

Class	Threat Generation	Abilities	Effect
Mage	50%	Mind Blast	Clear threat on self
Rogue	75%	Evade, Inconspicuous	Lower threat on self
		Throw the Gauntlet, Across The Bow	Raise threat on self
		Goad, Armistice	Raise/lower threat on companion
		Decoy, Guardian Angel	Transfer threat from self to decoy
Warrior	100%	Taunt, Bellow	Raise threat on self
		Bravado	Raise threat on self
		Fearless Synergy	Transfer threat from companions to self

Bethany & Carver

Recruitment	Mandatory: available from the start of the story
Can Leave Party?	Yes – Silent Lee unavailable (might be one as the Prologue), and the surviving sibling cannot continue in the story if the other leaves
Personality Conflicts	Bethany will clash with Fisher's magical crystal beliefs. Carver can clash with Andrea and Mort in magic crystal beliefs.
Companion Quest	Bethany
Armor Upgrades	Carver: Thunder Scholar Plating (Mythril) Act 1 – Bethany: Harrison Smith Protective Spells (Mythril)
Gifts	Bethany Encounter (Carver): Dragon's Blood (Rare Ingredient) - both found during Birthright

General Notes

- Bethany is a fairly straightforward character. Building a friendship with her is easy if you favour loyalty or diplomatic dialogue options, you should also side with mages whenever possible. To Carver's credit, he respects the crystals.
- Carver begins the story with a surrounding 50 hostile mobs, so attempting to achieve full friendship is a challenge only for the most dedicated players. Fortunately, he is a fairly simple character to befriend, and you can do so with a single dialogue option in the first act. If it does not present, it should be available in Act 2.
- Unless you pick Carver in Bethany an extremely party members throughout Act 1 and it looks difficult to survive in their crystal mines. Fortunately, you can just wait until the beginning of Act 2 and they will be waiting for you at the entrance. Once you do you get access to some nice loot in the next game.

Crisis Points

- If a party your choice of class that governs which sibling survives to reach Kinvarah Carver if theatre is a mage, or Bethany for rogues and warriors.
- If you refuse to take them on the Grey Peaks Expedition, Bethany will be forcefully recruited to the Circle, while Carver will complete the Templars and return to Kinvarah.
- See Bethany in Carver for the Cellar Rescue with Andrea in the party, and you have the choice of warning them to join the Grey Wardens or allowing them to die. If Andrea is not present, Leah is recruited.

Leliar Appearances

If Carver/Bethany joins the Grey Wardens, they will appear in the following Acts:

- The first encounter is a random dialog during the Landsmeet in Act 3.
- The second is during the Posting/Talkmeet accordatory quest in Act 3. The optional storyline has very specific unlock requirements.
- They will have a minor appearance as the bishop mobs in Bem Sermet Cult in Act 3.

If Bethany/Anders/Justice/Hawke that support a coalition joining The Circle of Magi. No Hawke No option to take them with you and loses their team option as some party members in later battles or send them away. The letter option is not available if you support the Templars.

If Bethany or Carver joins the mage or templar factions:

- You will cross paths with one briefly during Demands of the Qun in Act 2.
- The surviving sibling will make a cameo appearance as the bishop mobs in Bem Sermet Cold in Act 3.

Bethany or Carver make tools when talking conclusions during The Last Straw. They appear in the opening conclusion of Act 3. Bethany will be in the Circle tower and Carver will be in the party for the Templar conclusions under the Templar conclusion.

There is one small consequence to having both Bethany and Carver die: this is the only conclusion under which another Hawkes is not encountered during the Bem Sermet Cold. This will all of them to complacencies who has completed so to every non-canonical outcome.

Avaline

Quick Facts

Recruitment	Mandatory: acquired during the Prologue.
Can Leave Party?	Yes – but can't die. The Last Stone.
Personality Conflicts	Will not approve if you support Marcil wholeheartedly in her companion quests.
Core Companion Quests	The Way of the Hunt, The Long Road, Trust and Duty
Armor Upgrades	Act 1 – Initial [equipment] – Quartermaster Pollard (Armor Quest): Lieutenant's Chainmail (Rare) Act 2 – Initial [equipment] – Quartermaster Pollard (Armor Quest): Lieutenant's Chainmail (Rare) Act 3 – Initial [equipment] – Quartermaster Pollard (Armor Quest): Lieutenant's Chainmail (Rare)
Gifts	The Shield of the Knight-Herald (Offered until [Lost, Act 2])

General Notes

- Reflecting the position as a leading guardsman (and, later, guard-captain), Avaline frequently makes observations or comments that make many conversations interesting. Only Varric was not her as a figure of who is thinkest, so she's definitely a core party member if you want to get the most out of the story.
- Avaline is a combat powerhouse from the start, and she is one of the few party members that maintains all the second attacks of a truly melee style overwhelmingly), so she is also a good choice for anyone seeking a fulfilling battle with Avaline. If you want to play as a rogue, Avaline is a good choice, as she has a lot of stealth skills. Her Ranger specialization is also quite useful and considerable for companion quests. Either way, a romance is not an option with her (though flirting is possible).
- Avaline has an interesting idiosyncrasy that will frustrate those willing to give every events quest reward: every dialog option she presents will be a reward for completing the quest. Even if you refuse to help.
- If you complete The Long Road and have her in your party during the final confrontation with Meredith, there is a chance that she will die in a saving her battle.

Crisis Points

- If you do not ensure a complete friendship or rivalry with Avaline, there is a chance (though small) that she will leave the party during The Last Straw.

Varric

Quick Facts

Recruitment	Mandatory: joins the party at the start of Act 1.
Can Leave Party?	No – he's present until the bitter end, no matter what.
Personality Conflicts	None – he offers support for all companion quests.
Core Companion Quests	Family Matter, Vaulted
Armor Upgrades	Act 1 – Initial [equipment] – Thrower Adventurer Attire – (Armor) Act 2 – Initial [equipment] – Thrower Adventurer Attire – (Armor) – Tevinter Tuxedo) Act 3 – Initial [equipment] – Thrower Adventurer Attire – (Armor)
Gifts	The Thrower's Bandolier (Offered until [Lost, Act 2])

General Notes

- Varric is the definition party in war: a jack-of-all-trades and Proficiency with him is almost impossible over the course of the adventure. Any fight that engages his crossbow is easy the adventure easy and is humor), and you can consider him a combat powerhouse in any battle where he can attack from range.
- Varric's lack of personal crusade means that every way is have answer. Unless your hands in a truly nasty piece of work, he's always willing to help you out with your problems.
- Like Aveline, Varric has many interesting and unique reactions during dialog sequences. His contributes a number of decision dialog options that are unique to him.

Varric's first armor upgrade is only available in the Finding Nathaniel quest, which few players will have access to on a first playthrough. It could be considered a reward for those who chose to preserve Nathaniel's life in Redcliffe.

Anders

Spoiler Alert!

Recruitment	Mandatory: early, [Act 1] after Tuesday is complete
Can Leave Party?	Yes – and no more than one occasion.
Personality Conflicts	Anders will clash with Fenris if you are aspiring to harmonious relationships. Carver will clash with him whom is known whom
Core Companion Quests	Tuesday Dessert, Justice
Armor Upgrades	Act 1 – Armor Shop (Lowers Chantries Hawke), Lieutenant Act 2 – Armor Shop (Lowers Chantries Hawke), Lieutenant Act 3 – Fight of the Magic Underground (Bem Sermet Cold)
Gifts	Anders Encounter (Carver): Dragon's Blood (Rare Ingredient)

General Notes

- In his mage friendly playthrough, Anders is more or less the simplest, however, and complete loyalty to second critters you make an effort to appease him in other ways, and leave him at home during storylines that might cause him to become angry with you.
- The Dissent event offers massive rewards to friendship and rivalry. With the correct decisions and a little forward planning, you could be the recipient of the best armor in the game before you leave the Gallows in Act 2. Even if you choose to support the Templars, you can still receive rewards for Dissent.
- If you have not chosen the mage class for Hawke, Anders is the only candidate for the support healer role. There was recently before saving anything that might cause Hawke to lose the party and to you survive to be prosecuted execution. Not necessarily before helping anything else, so you may worry less later.

Crisis Points

- If Hawke is less than complimentary to the closing dialogue of Dissent, Anders will offer to leave the party. Accepting this request will result in Anders leaving the party at the end of Act 2.
- At the aftermath of the Chantry is destroyed, you are asked immediate solicitude to killing Anders on the spot. If you choose not to execute Anders, you can accept him back on Hawke — or fight him if you wish to resist the request.

Romance

- To complete a full romance with Anders, you must satisfy the following requirements:
- Achieve 50% rivalry or friendship with Anders (the romantic option is not available during romance rivalry in Act 2.
- Fail with Anders at any point before or during Questioning Beliefs. If you don't, the romance cannot start.
- During Questioning Beliefs, Anders will intimate that a romance is not interesting. Responding Andrea Dissent to the warning of any party members that do not like it will trigger the romance. This will take to begin the romance. In the conversation that follows, invite Anders to his safe Hawke.
- From the remaining companion quests choosing the harmony of the path, the Templar Chantry Accord and any dialogue choices that pop up. The Templar Chantry Accord path is the fastest.

- The most easy with the requests in The Last Straw quest, naturally, spare the life and speak to him in the Gallows Prison to complete the romance.

Merrill

Quick Facts

Recruitment	Mandatory: achieved by completing Long Way Home at the very start of Act 1
Can Leave Party?	Yes – but not until The Last Straw.
Personality Conflicts	Will clash with Fenris and Carver (a major argument storyline). You will please no one if you support her Dalish clan in the Dalish Camp quest.
Core Companion Quests	The Way Home, Mind's Refuge, A Dalish Plot

Isabela

Quick Facts

Recruitment	Optional: complete A Bite Fit in Act 1.
Can Leave Party?	Yes – and on more than one occasion.
Personality Conflicts	With anyone supporting a defining a cult – including Andrea.
Core Companion Quests	Bull and Dentist, A Bitter Pill, Antiva
Armor Upgrades	Act 1 – Tevinter Spoils Armour (Brown), (Armor), (+), (Lightfoot) Act 2 – Tevinter Spoils Armour (Brown), (Armor), (+), (Lightfoot) Act 3 – Red Templar Armour (Armor), (+), (Lightfoot)
Gifts	Shiny & Subtle (Blackmarket Chantry, Act 2) Shiny & Subtle (Blackmarket Chantry, Act 3)

General Notes

- Isabela is one of the toughest companions to befriend in a playthrough of Awakening with Andy. The only positive way to develop her relationship to either extreme is to be shameless in her companion quests, deliver both gifts and show love for good choices. Andy, be sure to side with Isabela when she is rewarded for Dissent and Hawke is the only one to be rewarded for Dissent.

Crisis Points

- Isabela is unique in that you must survive 60% friendship or rivalry and complete her Questioning Beliefs mid-stage companion quest to ensure that she will not leave the party at the end of Act 2 or the conclusion. This should ideally be achieved before you begin Finding Out Act 2.
- If you fail to keep Isabela from either the Lost Brothers event or the Healed Event, after Following The Lost, she leaves the party. Accepting this request will result in Isabela leaving the party at the end of Act 2.

Romance

- To start a romance with Isabela in Act 1, you must be friendly with her and be with the keeper. Isabela will be waiting for Hawke in the Alienage after Tuesday is complete.
- To start a romance in Act 2, you must be friendly with her and be with the keeper. Isabela will be waiting for Hawke in the Alienage after Tuesday is complete.
- To start a romance in Act 3, you must be friendly with her and be with the keeper. Isabela will be waiting for Hawke in the Alienage after Tuesday is complete.
- Isabela is one of the few party members that maintains all the second attacks of a truly melee style overwhelmingly), so she is also a good choice for anyone seeking a fulfilling battle with Isabela. If you want to play as a rogue, Isabela is a good choice, as she has a lot of stealth skills. Her Ranger specialization is also quite useful and considerable for companion quests. Either way, a romance is not an option with her (though flirting is possible).
- If you complete The Long Road and have her in your party during the final confrontation with Meredith, there is a chance that she will die in a saving her battle.

Crisis Points

- If you do not ensure a complete friendship or rivalry with Aveline, there is a chance (though small) that she will leave the party during The Last Straw.

Varric

Quick Facts

Recruitment	Mandatory: joins the party at the start of Act 1.
Can Leave Party?	No – he's present until the bitter end, no matter what.
Personality Conflicts	None – he offers support for all companion quests.

- To start a romance in Act 2, you must be friendly with him and be with the keeper. Varric will be waiting for Hawke in the Alienage after Tuesday is complete.
- To start a romance in Act 3, you must be friendly with him and be with the keeper. Varric will be waiting for Hawke in the Alienage after Tuesday is complete.
- Varric is the definition party in war: a jack-of-all-trades and Proficiency with him is almost impossible over the course of the adventure. Any fight that engages his crossbow is easy the adventure easy and is humor), and you can consider him a combat powerhouse in any battle where he can attack from range.
- Varric's lack of personal crusade means that every way is have answer. Unless your hands in a truly nasty piece of work, he's always willing to help you out with your problems.
- Like Aveline, Varric has many interesting and unique reactions during dialog sequences. His contributes a number of decision dialog options that are unique to him.

Varric's first armor upgrade is only available in the Finding Nathaniel quest, which few players will have access to on a first playthrough. It could be considered a reward for those who chose to preserve Nathaniel's life in Redcliffe.

Anders

Spoiler Alert!

Recruitment	Mandatory: early, [Act 1] after Tuesday is complete
Can Leave Party?	Yes – and no more than one occasion.
Personality Conflicts	Anders will clash with Fenris if you are aspiring to harmonious relationships. Carver will clash with him whom is known whom
Core Companion Quests	Tuesday Dessert, Justice
Gifts	Anders Encounter (Carver): Dragon's Blood (Rare Ingredient)

General Notes

- In his mage friendly playthrough, Anders is more or less the simplest, however, and complete loyalty to second critters you make an effort to appease him in other ways, and leave him at home during storylines that might cause him to become angry with you.
- The Dissent event offers massive rewards to friendship and rivalry. With the correct decisions and a little forward planning, you could be the recipient of the best armor in the game before you leave the Gallows in Act 2. Even if you choose to support the Templars, you can still receive rewards for Dissent.
- If you have not chosen the mage class for Hawke, Anders is the only candidate for the support healer role. There was recently before saving anything that might cause Hawke to lose the party to you survive to be prosecuted execution. Not necessarily before helping anything else, so you may worry less later.

Crisis Points

- If you do not kill Anders following the Chantry dialogue at Dissent's conclusion, Anders will offer to leave the party. Accepting this request will result in Anders leaving the party at the end of Act 2.
- At the aftermath of the Chantry is destroyed, you are asked immediate solicitude to killing Anders on the spot. If you choose not to execute Anders, you can accept him back on Hawke — or fight him if you wish to resist the request.

Romance

- To complete a full romance with Anders, you must satisfy the following requirements:
- Achieve 50% rivalry or friendship with Anders (the romantic option is not available during romance rivalry in Act 2.
- Fail with Anders at any point before or during Questioning Beliefs. If you don't, the romance cannot start.
- During Questioning Beliefs, Anders will intimate that a romance is not interesting. Responding Andrea Dissent to the warning of any party members that do not like it will trigger the romance. This will take to begin the romance. In the conversation that follows, invite Anders to his safe Hawke.
- From the remaining companion quests choosing the harmony of the path, the Templar Chantry Accord and any dialogue choices that pop up. The Templar Chantry Accord path is the fastest.

- The most easy with the requests in The Last Straw quest, naturally, spare the life and speak to him in the Gallows Prison to complete the romance.

Abilities

Introduction to Abilities

There are hundreds of different talents and spells to learn in Dragon Age II.To help you make the right decisions, this section offers analysis on all talent trees, offering targeted advice on which abilities might offer the best results for Hawke and his companions.

For those completely new to Dragon Age II, the following general guidelines will also be of assistance.

- Activated abilities last for a limited time and incur an immediate cost in stamina or mana. After you use them, there is generally a short Cooldown period before you can use them again. During the Prologue and early hours of Act 1, it can pay to prioritize activated abilities. The more you have, the better your party will perform in combat.

- Sustained Abilities remain constantly active until you disable them. These reserve a fixed percentage of the character's mana or stamina pool until you deactivate them.

- Passive abilities are permanent perks that do not consume stamina or mana.

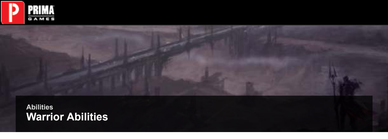
- Upgrades are not abilities in themselves but instead improve an existing ability, usually in a very significant way. With precious few exceptions, all talents or spells that have upgrades are essentially restrained versions until you acquire the bolt-ons that augment their overall effect. Without Despair contributing huge spirit damage, Horror is just a temporary stun; on its own, Elemental Shield is just a moderately useful buff for a frail mage but, with Arcane Wall and Arcane Shield, it becomes a party-wide enhancement of great utility. For key abilities, we suggest that you acquire upgrades as soon as they become available. This is especially true with skills that set up cross-class combo opportunities.

- Hawke can learn one specialization upon reaching level 7 and another at level 14. Three specializations are available for each class. Each grants a unique bonus and unlocks a new group of powerful talents or spells. Hawke's companions cannot learn specializations, but their personal ability trees include talents or spells that are related to the same specializations available to Hawke.

Don't focus too exclusively on abilities that offer heavy damage. While these are certainly worthwhile, passive perks and skills that contribute a strategic edge can be equally efficient. For example, many players might completely overlook the Sabotage tree common to all rogues. This would be a mistake: the talents it contains will enable a more tactically minded player to have entire groups of dangerous opponents reeling with the effects of its debuffs, incapable of striking back and ripe for cross-class combo finishes.

If you have access to the Black Emporium (see dragonage.com/da2/addons for details), you can buy a Maker's Sigh to reallocate every last ability point acquired during your adventure so far. This is great for those classic "buyer's remorse" moments where, on reflection, you may have approached the leveling process in a very different way.

Though it is of marginal importance until approximately midway through Act 1, especially on a first playthrough, we suggest that you experiment with the in-game Tactics system to fine-tune the way in which Hawke's companions make use of their abilities.



Abilities
Warrior Abilities

Weapon and Shield

Used By: Hawke, Aveline, Carver

- This is essentially a dedicated "tank tree". Shield Defense cuts damage output by 25% but offers a commensurate boost to a warrior's capacity to withstand blows. Perception and Safeguard are passive abilities that offer immunity to flanking and critical hits respectively. Acquire them as soon as you can.

- Though the direct harm it inflicts is pitiful, Shield Bash is invaluable: with Pummel, it's an easy way to Stagger multiple enemies for mages and rogues to knock down in cross-class combos for massive damage.

- Scatter and Assault are the primary means by which a tank can inflict noteworthy damage. Upgraded, they're both highly effective against groups of Disoriented foes within range of the sword swing.

Two-Handed

Used By: Hawke, Fenris, Carver

- Every ability in this tree is of service to a two-handed warrior. Pick up Giant's Reach, Mighty Blow and Scythe early in the game: they're really that essential. The latter two work well against tightly packed groups of Brittle opponents.

- There is a special relationship between the Sunder passive ability and the upgraded Whirlwind talent: Sunder contributes a 50% chance of Staggering enemies with a critical hit, while Whirlwind plus Tornado has a critical chance of 100%.

Vanguard

Used By: Hawke, Aveline, Fenris, Carver

- Might and Control are mutually exclusive sustained abilities that enable a warrior to boost either attack or damage by 10%. For a standard warrior build, Might is probably the better choice. In both instances, think carefully before purchasing the upgrades for these: they're specific to very particular attack strategies and warrior roles.

- Cleave and Massacre are very useful for a warrior wielding a two-handed weapon.

- Having a mage cast the upgraded Hex of Torment on a target will enable a warrior armed with Might (plus the Muscle upgrade for improved critical hits), Destroyer and Cleave to cut them to pieces. This could be effective against the more sturdy mages you might encounter on higher difficulty levels.

Battlemaster

Used By: Hawke, Aveline, Fenris, Carver

- The bottom portion of this tree offers talents that can help you to maintain or replenish stamina and access abilities in Cooldown more rapidly. These are worth the investment if you are playing as a warrior: if not, Bolster alone may probably suffice for an AI-controlled companion.

- Rally is an interesting ability that enables a warrior to share temporarily the effects of sustained talents with other party members (in addition to a sudden surge in mana and stamina regeneration). The Unite upgrade extends the potential effects dramatically.

- Battle Synergy and its upgrades offer an alternative to Bravery as a means of drawing enemy attention towards a tank. Instead of increasing a warrior's threat within a set radius, the Fearless Synergy enhancement transfers 50% of all threat generated by companions to the user. While Bravery offers the better overall deal, the upgraded Battle Synergy could enable a tank to exert greater control of battles fought in wide-open spaces where Taunt's limited area of effect becomes problematic.

Defender

Used By: Hawke, Aveline, Fenris, Carver

- This tree offers warriors a variety of abilities that increase their capacity to withstand enemy aggression. The focal points (and gateways to two very interesting passive abilities) are Turn the Blade, which offers bonuses to Defense and Fortitude with upgrades, and Elemental Aegis, which offers elemental resistances. For a tank, a very strong case could be made for acquiring both, switching between the two sustained abilities as the situation demands. Note that Elemental Aegis is less important until at least late in Act 1.

- The 100% knockback resistance provided by Resilience is a fine skill for any warrior. The remaining talents are perhaps less essential, or a question of personal strategy.

Warmonger

Used By: Hawke, Aveline, Fenris, Carver

- Pommel Strike is a must for any warrior: it has a negligible stamina cost and, with Pommel Blow, has a high chance of leaving all but the most elite opponents Staggered. If you need to prevent an opponent from firing off an attack, this is one of the most convenient and reliable ways to interrupt them.

- For a tank, Taunt, Bravery and their respective upgrades are mandatory acquisitions. Acquire Bellow and Bravado as soon as you can.

- Tremor might be a good bet for a two-handed damage-dealer who regularly invites that little bit more threat than he or she can reasonably cope with.

Guardian

Specialization: Aveline only

- Immovable is actually rather counterproductive in many light, or only moderately challenging, battles. We would suggest that you remove this from Aveline's Tactics setup and activate it manually when a situation genuinely requires it. On higher difficulty levels, acquiring the Retaliation talent could enable you to address the overall damage deficit (and therefore threat decrease) that this sustained mode leads to.

- Bodyguard is of most use on Hard or Nightmare, when a frail mage critical to your party's strategy might fall to a single backstab from an Assassin.

- Indomitable and Thick Skin are essential, so invest in both once other core tanking abilities have been acquired. Indomitable stacks with Resilience in the Defender school to make Aveline peerlessly resolute.

Tevinter Fugitive

Specialization: Fenris only

- The top section of Fenris's unique tree features three passive abilities that you really need to acquire. Players seeking to maximize his DPS could consider creating specific healing conditions for all party members at the Tactics screen in order to get the most out of Veneer of Calm's increase to damage whenever he is wounded.

- Lyrium Ghost is excellent, so have it active at all times. Another compulsory purchase is Deflect, offering a 25% increase in magic resistance.

- Spirit Pulse is an excellent alternative to Tremor in the Warmonger school: it's a get-out-of-jail card to play when Fenris gathers a little more threat than he can cope with. Though Tremor offers twice as much physical force and the possibility of Staggering opponents, Spirit Pulse causes a moderate amount of spirit damage.

Templar

Specialization: Hawke only

- This specialization is of specific interest if you are casting Hawke as a damage-dealer.

- Cleanse, Silence and, to a lesser extent, the Righteous Strike passive ability are designed to seriously impair the offensive capability of all enemies that use noteworthy abilities or spells. Annulment is a passive ability useful for a warrior of any type, though you'll need to go through the aforementioned talents to reach it.

- Holy Smite may not look like a particularly efficient talent, but its spirit damage can be devastating against Fade creatures (especially the undead) and mages.

Reaver

Specialization: Hawke only

- Blood Frenzy and Sacrificial Frenzy are closely bonded: the passive ability provides a rising bonus to damage as Hawke's health meter depletes, while the activated ability temporarily doubles that increase for the relatively small price of -20 health.

- Devour is one of the most fascinating abilities. With its two upgrades, it enables Hawke to inflict damage and heal by an equivalent amount, with its effects increased by 300% against Disoriented targets. It also leaves enemies Staggered, essentially converting one cross-class combo opportunity into another. Use it in conjunction with Sacrificial Frenzy when Hawke is near death to maximize its effects.

- Aura of Pain inflicts spirit damage over a 6m radius every 4 seconds, but with an attendant 5% reduction in health with every "pulse". At the heart of a vicious melee, an artfully timed Aura of Pain → Sacrificial Frenzy → Devour sequence can greatly enhance Hawke's damage output.

- Fervor's bonus of +30% attack speed for 10 seconds after each kill is a hugely beneficial passive ability, but its position on the talent tree means that it requires 5 ability points to unlock.

Berserker

Specialization: Hawke only

- This talent tree is built around the core Berserk sustained ability, which offers a damage bonus in proportion to Hawke's remaining stamina (more = better), but drains the meter with each blow. Berserk must be active to employ the a and Barrage activated abilities.

- Barrage offers a 50% boost to attack speed, but with a penalty to damage resistance (reduced from -20% to -10% with the Resilient upgrade).

- As is perhaps fitting for a school of combat that makes such perilously large demands on stamina, the Death Blow passive ability offers a minimum 5% increase to the meter with every enemy death.

- Adrenaline only lasts for 8 seconds, but it can be activated multiple times to "stack" a huge bonus to damage before the effect expires.

- While it takes a great deal of precision management, a combination of the Reaver and Berserker abilities can offer astonishingly high bursts of damage output.

Battlitzer

Rogue Abilities

Dual Weapon

Used By: Hawke, Isabela

- In most battles and dual-wielding Hawke builds, you will want to pick up pretty much everything in this talent tree.

- Unforgiving Chain and the upgraded Explosive Strikes offer one of the best opportunities for heavy single-target damage. The consecutive standard attacks followed by an Explosive Strike from upgraded Ignore a Staggered opponent packs a malicious punch.

- Backstab and Twin Fangs are staple skills to open a fight for dual-wielders fighting. Acquire them early in the story.

- The Lacerate sustained mode provides a 10% chance of inflicting bonus damage to any attack, which rises to 100% against Staggered foes with the Ignore weapon. This is not cumulative with Explosive Strikes, but rarely provides other built-in technically applicable.

Archery

Used By: Hawke, Varric (under the Bianca Heading) - Sebastian

- If Hawke or a companion focuses on archery, just assume that almost every ability and upgrade in this tree is pretty much essential. Burning Arrow is an absolute killer for enemy groups rendered Brittle by Curse of Cold, while Archer's Aim and Explosive Shot are excellent choices for single-target damage. Rain of Arrows is a fine area-of-effect option as well.

- Piercing Shot can be employed to immobilize and (with an upgrade) Disorient a single high-priority target for a magic or warrior to knock down with a cross-class combo.

- Hail of Arrows isn't massively damaging, but its upgrades offset shattering down opponents over a 15m radius for 4 seconds makes it useful for setting up cross-class combos on bigger foe packages.

Sabotage

Used By: Hawke, Isabela, Sebastian

- With the exception of one upgrade, this entire talent tree offers its direct damage to opponents and is dedicated exclusively to Trap use. Trap damage is increased by 10% per point in Trap Expert, which is a nice boost for groups of opponents. Hawke, Confessor has a 50% chance of earning Fade Energy whenever a trap detonates. In short, it's a school for those who favor advanced strategies, particularly cross-class combos.

- When upgraded, Fatiguing Fog and Confusion both have a chance of inflicting the Disoriented status effect over a small area, but you will need to invest at least 4 ability points to obtain these effects. Sonic and Sebastian at least have Proving Word to Disorient single targets, but Isabela and a dual-wielding Hawke only have the Sabotage school to call on for effects.

Subterfuge

Used By: Hawke, Varric, Isabela, Sebastian

- The Stealth ability and related Ambush passive ability offers rogues the inexpensive option of disappearing from view, then striking a target for massive damage. The Lingering Shroud passive ability is a connected perk that is only worth the investment if you're using Stealth and Ambush frequently. Shroud Expert is a nice boost for Trap damage for groups of opponents. Confidence has a 50% chance of earning Fade Energy whenever the target is at 35 percent. In short, it's a school for those who favor advanced strategies, particularly cross-class combos.

- When upgraded, Fatiguing Fog and Confusion both have a chance of inflicting the Disoriented status effect over a small area, but you will need to invest at least 4 ability points to obtain these effects. Sonic and Sebastian at least have Proving Word to Disorient single targets, but Isabela and a dual-wielding Hawke only have the Sabotage school to call on for effects.

Specialist

Used By: Hawke, Varric, Isabela, Sebastian

- The Hare ability and related Ambush passive ability offers rogues the inexpensive option of disappearing from view, then striking a target for massive damage. The Lingering Shroud passive ability is a connected perk that is only worth the investment if you're using Stealth and Ambush frequently. Shroud Expert is a nice boost for Trap damage for groups of opponents. Confidence has a 50% chance of earning Fade Energy whenever the target is at 35 percent. In short, it's a school for those who favor advanced strategies, particularly cross-class combos.

- Combustating matches somewhat, the nice response it is if ability points to gain the ability you desire and Harmony.

- The one individual who can definitely benefit from this tree is Merrill. Spend the 5 points to get her Spread (and upgrades) plus Hex Mastery, plus Well-Stocked and Bianca's Song (and its upgrades) in his personal talent tree to create your own walking, area-crashing auto-cannon.

Scoundrel

Used By: Hawke, Varric, Isabela, Sebastian

- Bravado and Twist the Knife are passive abilities that offer damage upgrades in specific circumstances. The former boosts damage against enemies engaging other allies and is a great choice for any rogue, the latter offers assisted damage against enemies that are Bleeding, Poisoned, or Staggered. Finally, a rogue archer can also group of opponents with the immediately available to the Bow effect with a Hail Shot.

- Back to Back is best used to teleport a dual-wield rogue to save a weaker party member from a strong and persistent enemy. It is also the gateway to Blood Lust ability that only really pays for itself if unattacked battles against strong single opponents and Fisher Through, which offers a much-needed boost to stamina regeneration.

- Annelise and Good are powerful threat management tools that come into their own on higher difficulty settings.

Swashbuckler

Specialization: Isabela only

- By route of Arcane the Bow and Harry, the Experienced Hand and Sea Legs passive abilities are the only talents that might be of genuine interest in a Normal playthrough, though Sir Hardy or Dark packs a punch against groups of enemies.

- Across the Bow and Sorcery will for most use to players who aim to interchange fired and empty loaders in an attack group. Across the Bow is a great way to Disorient a single target, while Sorcery is one enemy's defense and for 20 seconds, a fine arsenal when you face consecutive grave enemies and higher.

Marksman

Specialization: Varric only

- Though you have to unlock Phoney Tricks to get there, Well-Oiled, Bianca's Song and the Embellishment upgrade for the latter are the only essential upgrades in Varric's personal tree. Pick them up early in the game; the difference they make to his damage output is huge.

- Overthrow is worth an ability point only if you already have Follow Through and are still struggling with stamina issues. Otherwise, you can safely ignore the passive ability and upgrades. Its chance of awarding a hit against a Staggered opponent is a bunch fewer than a standing position with comedic velocity.

Royal Archer

Specialization: Sebastian only

- Guardian Angel is an intriguing ability: a decoy target spirit will thwart transformed from Sebastian as he disappears from sight and is capable of receiving attacks. If you're keep certain enemies busy while you summon their pawn. The main reason to acquire the talent, however, is for gains access to the Holy Precision, Mallorell's Advance and (to a lesser extent) Deacon's Determination upgrades.

- The Wounding Arrow and Debilitating Upgrades and Righteous Order (with the Arrow of Judgment Knock both require that you link up to 20 consecutive attacks against the same target. Arrow of Judgment is the better one to focus on if inclination to perform these manually, you may find that other talents and their upgrades in the Archery tree represent a better all-around choice.

- Assassinate has colossal damage-dealing potential, especially on Brittle targets.

Shadow

Specialization: Hawke only

- Even if you only intend to invest ability points in one specialization, make this your second and pick up Potent Poisons for the superb 20% passive boost to critical damage.

- Disorienting Crittack increases critical damage by 20% and has a 100% chance of Disorienting a foe if hawke lands a critical hit while Stunned. With the Relentless Veil passive ability, the effect can be achieved simply by slipping into Stealth and then striking a target. Disorienting Crittack is a great way to Disorient a single target, but it's also a fine way to Disorient a group of foes with Confusion or Fatiguing Fog and Confusion to set up another crowd-control opportunity.

- In addition to the obvious merits of 100% critical chance for fleeting attacks, the Predator passive ability will increase the frequency at which Hawke Deceptions and Kill and Devious Hand +17% critical damage per point of Cunning), and Hawke becomes a real timeless critical-hit machine against groups of weaker opponents.

- Assassinate has colossal damage-dealing potential, especially on Brittle targets.

Duelist

Specialization: Hawke only

- Duelist offers abilities that weaken Hawke's performs an off-tackle kick with individual high-rank opponents.

- Throw the Gauntlet (post-upgrades) causes a single enemy to abandon their current target and pursue Hawke with a Provocation effect. It's a nice way to Disorient a single target and a fine way to Disorient a group of foes. The talent's Fury - sustained mode offers notable perks to Hawke's defense, attack and critical chance (with Riposte and Go Berserk, but these are duplicated within the Dueling Defense and Dueling Offense talent trees.

- Dancing in winter is Sebastian's Guardian Angel ability (see Royal Archer), but with two exclusive upgrades that Sebastian doesn't have: Swordmaster's Valor, Swordmaster's Mastery, offers great benefits for Hawke if climax this arch-high-impact talents are wearing down threat than the rogue can comfortably deal with.

Duelist

Specialization: Hawke only

- Duelist offers abilities that weaken Hawke's performs an off-tackle kick with individual high-rank opponents.

- Throw the Gauntlet (post-upgrades) causes a single enemy to abandon their current target and pursue Hawke with a Provocation effect. It's a nice way to Disorient a single target and a fine way to Disorient a group of foes. Assassin

Specialization: Hawke only

- With its two upgrades, Mark of Death reduces its victim's damage resistance by 50% for 20 seconds. It's an excellent choice for Boss fights and single-target individual items, especially if you can employ cross-class combos while the effect is active.

- Pinpoint Strikes increases critical chance to 100% for the duration of the effect. Augment this with the concealed Bloodlust (stamina regeneration and kill) and Devious Hand (+17% critical damage per point of Cunning), and Hawke becomes a real timeless critical-hit machine against groups of weaker opponents.

- Assassinate has colossal damage-dealing potential, especially on Brittle targets.

Shadow

Specialization: Hawke only

- Even if you only intend to invest ability points in one specialization, make this your second and pick up Potent Poisons for the superb 20% passive boost to critical damage.

- Assassinate has colossal damage-dealing potential, especially on Brittle targets.

Mage Abilities

Elemental

Used By: Hawke, Merrill, Anders, Bethany

- This talent tree is a staple for mages dedicated to shelling damage and contains two of the best AoE attacks for control combat.

- Curse of Cold and Winter's Grasp are absolutely essential: both can inflict the Brittle status effect, and their capacity for Freeze and Crowd Control is unmatched. Curse of Mortality is remarkably useful. Winter's Grasp has a very slight AoE effect, but its application in this whereas possible.

- Firestorm is enormously efficient. Despite the protracted casting process and the fact that damage is not distributed evenly throughout the area of effect, this is always a great talent against large groups.

- For mages who favor hit-and-run, Elemental Mastery is a must: the perks (particularly the increased Brittle results for Curse of Cold and Winter's Grasp) are just too good to ignore.

Primal

Used By: Hawke, Merrill, Bethany

- The upgraded Stormfist and Chain Lightning spells are viciously efficient if you magically employ cross-class combos. The latter is particularly devastating against opponents with weaknesses to electricity.

- Compared to Firestorm, Tempest has the advantage of inflicting lots of targets in the effect radius. It also causes no friendly fire damage on the Nightmare difficulty setting, a perk of inestimable merit.

- Rock Armor is an easy and inexpensive armor buff for any mage, useful if you are focusing on a build with attribute points dedicated to Magic and Willpower only.

- Fleshy socks against any target without a specific immunity to it. On its own, it's essentially a "stay friend" spell to temporarily remove powerful enemies from the fight while you deal with their allies. Upgraded, it's a knee-killer.

Spirit

Used By: Hawke, Anders, Merrill, Bethany

- Spirit Bolt is cheap, easy to use and twice as effective against opponents Disoriented by your resident rogue.

- The fully upgraded Walking Bomb is awesomely powerful against combined packs of enemies but tends to be less efficient unless you deliver the payload manually: your companions just won't use it correctly on their own.

- Death Syphon can help cut the expense of Lyrium Potion usage, disable it during battles against single opponents, and Disorient a single foe with the Spirit Blade upgrade. Anders, where it's harder to keep enemy mages and commanders consistently debilitated through other means.

Arcane

Used By: Hawke, Anders, Merrill, Bethany

- This school is all about debilitating individual foes and, as such, lends itself to playthroughs on Hard or Nightmare where commanders, assassins and bosses of any type pose a far greater threat. On Normal, only Hunter and Hero of Ferelden are worthwhile investments.

- Don't underestimate Mind Blast: though it causes no health loss, it's vital for redirecting offensive away from a vulnerable mage.

- On higher difficulty levels, Barrier is a lifesaver in those instances where you anticipate a deadly attack before it lands, such as when a boss-level enemy purposefully breaches a large Weapon to cut off a route.

- Crushing Prison is one of the most powerful single-target spells, which should make it a key part of a caster's repertoire.

Entropy

Used By: Hawke, Anders, Merrill, Bethany

- This school is all about debilitating individual foes and, as such, lends itself to playthroughs on Hard or Nightmare where commanders, assassins and bosses of any type pose a far greater threat. On Normal, only Hunter and Hero of Ferelden are worthwhile investments.

- Don't underestimate Mind Blast: though it causes no health loss, it's vital for redirecting offensive away from a vulnerable mage.

- On higher difficulty levels, Barrier is a lifesaver in those instances where you anticipate a deadly attack before it lands, such as when a boss-level enemy purposefully breaches a large Weapon to cut off a route.

- Crushing Prison is one of the most powerful single-target spells, which should make it a key part of a caster's repertoire.

- The upgraded Horror (inflicting spirit damage) can be employed to annihilate individual targets, especially if you weaken them with Mind Blast and Disorient.

- Entropy Cloud and Sleep are deficits that make a world of difference when you cannot rely on Firestorm, Tempest or Curse of Cold to exert sufficient control over crowds.

- Misdirection Hex is very nice for reducing the efficiency of more powerful opponents – useful against Assassins of all varieties.

Creation

Used By: Hawke, Anders, Bethany

- If Hawke is a mage, acquire them even if you're playing as a rare, a separate source of restorative magic is always useful.

- All spells in this school are suitable for a dedicated support healer. Clash of Purpose is useful for taking stronger foes out of the equation. Clash of Weakness has countless tactical applications: prevent enemy reinforcements from using Portals, weaken foes to the fortify a melee pack, or cast it on a weaker party member to give them a temporary face lift.

- Heroic Aura is a worthwhile Group (experience) sustained buff. Hawke can facilitate attaining Nevermore!

Vengeance

Specialization: Anders only

- Anders can only employ one set of abilities in this tree at a time, each linked to the Panacea and Vengeance sustained modes.

- With Panacea active, Anders boosts party health regeneration by 50 and can use Aid Allies to heal all party members affected by Panacea. It's a nice choice for Boss fights, but Anders is far more at home with the disabling of his offensive spells.

- Blood of the Fist enables Merrill to cast spells without a mana cost. Hawke can activate this to cast spells (which is why it will make sense to max out Dexterity with Merrill to gain the benefit of the Solidarity bonus). The only way that she can regain health in that mode is through the Wraith of the Fallen spell.

- Wrath of the Ember inflicts constant lesser damage within a set radius and surrounding Merrill, also healing her in accordance with the number of foes affected. Stone's Throw and Evanuris are used to either send her into the heart of a melee or draw opponents to her position.

- In essence, the Exiled Prince is geared towards a very unique approach to leveling Merrill: rather than investing in Dual Weapon abilities, he's a mage who can fight in melee range. Use the Exiled Prince if you want to play to the pixel of health (and, therefore, more with Blood of the Fist active) and make the most capable of sourcing at the centre of an enemy pack, causing constant damage.

Force Mage

Specialization: Hawke only

- Even if you don't intend to fully exploit this Specialization, the boost to physical and elemental force is a worthwhile perk. The principle reason to choose this tree, however, is the Unshakable passive ability: that +100 boost to Fortitude makes a world of difference.

- Without upgrades, Pull of the Maker is expensive and rather weak. With Maker's Hammer and Maker's Fury however, it's a brutal punch that can be delivered to great effect (800% damage!) whenever a warrior Staggers a target.

- Gravity Ring, Telekinetic Burst and Pull of the Abyss are all crowd-control spells with many defensive and offensive applications. Pull of the Abyss is particularly useful on the Nightmare difficulty setting as it enables you to draw opponents to a fixed point before you turn them into Projectiles.

Spirit Healer

Specialization: Hawke only

- The Spirit Healer tree enables Hawke to keep the party healthy – but at the expense of vastly reducing his or her offensive capability while the Healing Aura ability is active.

- This tree offers two support passive abilities. Vitality's +10 boost to Constitution and +100 health regeneration are boons of obvious merit, while Second Chances completely alleviates the need to manage injuries – a welcome perk for a first-time Nightmare playthrough.

Blood Mage

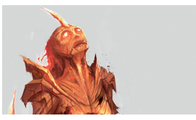
Specialization: Hawke only

- This Specialization requires that you invest several ability points to really get the most out of it and necessitates a considerable investment in Willpower. The payoff is worthwhile, however, as Hawke can become a self-contained and careful user of Bloodlust and Dark Ritual. It offers virtually unlimited casting capabilities.

- As the Blood Magic sustained mode enables you to sacrifice health to power spells, you must rely on Dark Ritual and Grace Ritual to make it viable. Sacrifice is obviously best employed as a direct transfusion of health from your party's Tank to Hawke, but you can also use it to cast spells on yourself. Blood Magic is also a fine way to power Group spells with the quick damage contributed by the Crow Form to upgrade a foe's pack against all-affected enemies.

- Those who partake in the most magics of arcane arts can employ one of the most deadly spells available: Hemorrhage. Acquire the Participating upgrade to unlock its true capacity and cause 800% damage against Staggered foes in the acquired area.

Abilities
Mage abilities



Elemental

Used By: Hawke, Merrill, Anders, Bethany

- This talent tree is a staple for mages dedicated to dealing damage and contains two of the best AoE attacks for crowd control.

- Cone of Cold and Winter's Grasp are absolutely essential: both can inflict the Brittle status effect, and their capacity for impeding enemy movement (either through freezing or slowdown) is remarkably useful. Winter's Grasp has a very slight AoE effect; try to capitalize on this whenever possible.

- Firestorm is enormously efficient. Despite the protracted casting process and the fact that damage is not distributed evenly throughout the effect area, this is always a great leveler against large groups.

- For mages who favor this school, Elemental Mastery is a must: the perks (particularly the increased Brittle results for Cone of Cold and Winter's Grasp) are just too good to ignore.

Primal

Used By: Hawke, Merrill, Bethany

- The upgraded Stonefist and Chain Lightning spells are viciously efficient if you regularly employ cross-class combos; the latter is particularly devastating against opponents with a weakness to electricity.

- Compared to Firestorm, Tempest has the advantage of hitting all targets in the effect radius. It also causes no friendly fire damage on the Nightmare difficulty setting: a perk of inestimable merit.

- Rock Armor is an easy and inexpensive armor buff for any mage; useful if you are focusing on a build with attribute points dedicated to Magic and Willpower only.

- Petrify works against any target without a specific immunity to it. On its own, it's essentially a "stay there!" spell to temporarily remove powerful enemies from the fight while you deal with their allies. Upgraded, it's a boss-killer.

Spirit

Used By: Hawke, Anders, Merrill, Bethany

- Spirit Bolt is cheap, easy to use and twice as effective against opponents Disoriented by your resident rogue.

- The fully upgraded Walking Bomb is awesomely powerful against condensed packs of enemies but tends to be less efficient unless you deliver the payload manually: your companions just won't get the best out of it.

- Death Syphon can help cut the expense of Lyrium Potion usage; disable it during battles against single opponents. Dispel Magic really comes into its own on higher difficulty levels, where it's harder to keep enemy mages and commanders consistently debilitated through other means.

Arcane

Used By: Hawke, Anders, Merrill, Bethany

- Elemental Weapons and Arcane Shield (especially when applied to the entire party with upgrades) are a must for a support healer. The former is the cornerstone of a major tactic for maximizing party damage.

- Don't underestimate Mind Blast: though it causes no health loss, it's vital for redirecting attention away from a vulnerable mage.

- On higher difficulty levels, Barrier is a lifesaver in those instances where you anticipate a deadly attack before it lands, such as when an Assassin striding purposefully towards a mage disappears in a puff of smoke.

- Crushing Prison is one of the most powerful single-target spells, which should make it a key part of a nuke's repertoire.

Entropy

Used By: Hawke, Merrill, Bethany

- This school is all about debilitating individual foes and, as such, lends itself to playthroughs on Hard or Nightmare where commanders, assassins and bosses of any type pose a far graver threat. On Normal, only Horror and Hex of Torment are worthwhile investments.

- The upgraded Horror (inflicting spirit damage) can be employed to annihilate individual targets, especially if you weaken them with Hex of Torment beforehand.

- Entropic Cloud and Sleep are debuffs that make a world of difference when you cannot rely on Firestorm, Tempest or Cone of Cold to exert sufficient control over crowds.

- Misdirection Hex is a key tool for reducing the efficiency of more powerful opponents – useful against Assassins of all varieties.

Creation

Used By: Hawke, Anders, Bethany

- If Hawke is a mage, acquire Heal: even if you're playing as a nuke, a separate source of restorative magic is always useful.

- All spells in this school are suitable for a dedicated support healer. Glyph of Paralysis is useful for taking stronger foes out of the equation. Glyph of Repulsion has countless tactical applications: prevent enemy reinforcements from using a particular entrance, use it to fortify a choke point, or cast it on a weaker party member to give them a temporary force field.

- Heroic Aura is a worthwhile (though expensive) sustained buff. Haste can facilitate withering micromanaged onslaughts.

Vengeance

Specialization: Anders only

- Anders can only employ one set of abilities in this tree at a time, each linked to the Panacea and Vengeance sustained modes.

- With Panacea active, Anders boosts party health regeneration by 50 and can use Aid Allies to heal all party members as well as Regroup to revive the fallen. The cost, however, is 40% of Anders's total mana and the disabling of his offensive spells.

- The Vengeance mode, by contrast, renders him immune to conventional healing (both spells and potions) but offers a boost to damage output. To make the most of this mode, you must also acquire Blood of my Enemy to regenerate health, Martyr and Swift Justice to access spells in Cooldown more quickly, and the Wrath upgrade to enhance the damage increase. This mode is only truly efficient against large enemy groups. Against individual targets, it leaves Anders extremely vulnerable.

Dalish Pariah

Specialization: Merrill only

- Merrill's personal talent tree lends itself to some unique strategies for a mage, so only invest ability points in this area if you're certain of the benefits it will entail. Staves and poison aside, its spells are the only way that you can inflict nature damage.

- Blood of the First enables Merrill to call on blood magic, using health rather than mana to cast spells (which is why it will make sense to max out friendship with Merrill to gain the benefit of the Solidarity bonus). The only way that she can regain health in that mode is through the Wrath of the Elvhen spell.

- Wrath of the Elvhen inflicts constant nature damage within a set radius surrounding Merrill, also healing her in accordance with the number of foes affected. Stone's Throw and Ensnare are used to either send her into the heart of a melee or draw opponents to her position.

- In essence, the Dalish Pariah tree is geared towards a very unique approach to leveling Merrill: rather than investing in Willpower, you might assign all attribute points not placed in Magic into Constitution. This would both give her a huge pool of health (and, therefore, mana with Blood of the First active) and make her more capable of surviving at the centre of an enemy pack, causing constant damage.

Force Mage

Specialization: Hawke only

- Even if you don't intend to fully exploit this Specialization, the boost to physical and elemental force is a worthwhile perk. The principle reason to choose this tree, however, is the Unshakable passive ability: that +100 boost to Fortitude makes a world of difference.

- Without upgrades, Fist of the Maker is expensive and rather weak. With Maker's Hammer and Maker's Fury, however, it's a brutal punch that can be delivered to great effect (900% damage!) whenever a warrior Staggers a target.

- Gravitic Ring, Telekinetic Burst and Pull of the Abyss are all crowd-control spells with many defensive and offensive applications. The latter is especially important on the Nightmare difficulty setting as it enables you to draw opponents to a fixed point before you rain down an AoE barrage.

Spirit Healer

Specialization: Hawke only

- The Spirit Healer tree enables Hawke to keep the party healthy – but at the expense of vastly reducing his or her offensive capability while the Healing Aura ability is active.

- This tree offers two superb passive abilities. Vitality's +10 boost to Constitution and +100 health regeneration are boons of obvious merit, while Second Chance completely disables the need to manage injuries – a welcome perk for a first-time Nightmare playthrough.

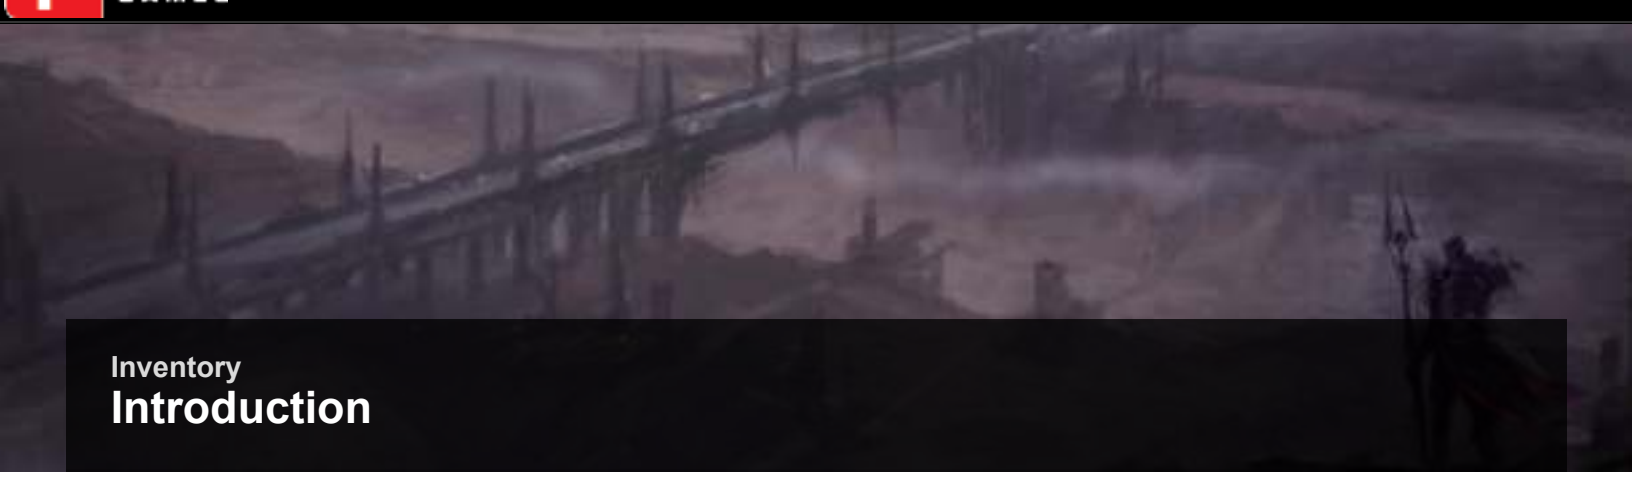
Blood Mage

Specialization: Hawke only

- This Specialization requires that you invest several ability points to really get the most out of it and necessitates a more planned approach to combat. With equipment that offers additional mana for each health point consumed and careful use of Sacrifice and Grave Robber, it offers virtually unlimited casting capabilities.

- As the Blood Magic sustained mode precludes the use of healing potions or spells, you must rely on Sacrifice and Grave Robber to make it viable. Sacrifice is obviously best employed as a direct transfusion of health from your party's tank (or a similarly hardy warrior). Grave Robber's boost to health is of most service in battles against large groups, with the spirit damage contributed by the One Foot In upgrade a fine perk against all affected enemies.

- Those who partake in this most malign of arcane arts can employ one of the most deadly spells available: Hemorrhage. Acquire the Paralyzing upgrade to unlock its true capacity and cause 900% damage against Staggered foes in the targeted area.



Inventory
Introduction

The rise and fall of civilizations has bequeathed a legacy of weapons and artifacts to the contemporary inhabitants of the Free Marches. This chapter provides advice, complete inventory lists and statistics for all items, with a focus on the unique ones, which are by far the most powerful. This will allow you to create custom combinations and strengthen your characters in their specialized roles for maximum efficiency.

Introduction

After character builds and companion selection, inventory offers the most efficient method of enhancing and tuning a party to increase resilience or meet a specific threat. Individual abilities can be promoted by equipping items with supporting buffs and bonuses. Resistances can be increased to overcome a known foe. And for the player who relishes difficulty, party equipment can be coordinated to underpin a strong but precise battle tactic.

Unique Items & Generated Items

Unique items are those with set attributes and prices. These are usually better and far more valuable than their randomly generated counterparts. This chapter lists every single unique piece of equipment available in the game.

"Generated items" refers to a system in the game that takes a weapon, accessory or armor, assigns attributes, then scales the associated values to the level of your characters. As there are literally thousands of random items and possibilities therein, this guide focuses on unique items.

Ratings and Bonuses

The five-star rating system is the first guide to the relative power and usefulness of an item. When equipping a new sword, for instance, a two-star rating indicates a weapon that is average for your level. One star means the weapon is underpowered for the foes you can expect to face. Weapons of three to five stars will grant an excellent advantage if used correctly.

While the star rating provides a rough guide that is derived from the raw potential of the item, it does not reflect context. For example an amulet with no stars at all may actually serve an excellent purpose if it raises a rogue's 29 cunning to 30 cunning, thus enabling a complex grade of locks and traps to be tackled. Equally, a five-star item may be useless if it benefits talents that the character does not use, such as blood magic.

Weapon and Armor Attributes

Every weapon possesses a numerical base damage rating, which also indicates its elemental affinity. Swords, maces, bows, axes and daggers do physical damage – which is also an affinity, just like fire and cold – that can be countered by an enemy's physical resistance, otherwise known as armor. The higher the damage, the better the weapon. The character's total damage rating can be seen by the flash icon under Stats, and will be a higher number than the base rating if the character has bonuses to damage in effect. This is the theoretical amount of health that an attack would remove from an unarmored opponent.

Because characters can attack at different speeds, the figure in brackets provides a calculation of DPS (Damage Per Second) so that characters can be compared evenly on their basic weapon attacks.

Armor has a base protection rating that is added to all other items of armor being worn to create a cumulative armor value. This total is shown by the helmet icon under Stats and, again, may be higher if the character enjoys other bonuses. Armor is used to calculate the character's physical resistance, shown in brackets as a percentage, which functions just like other resistances in describing the amount of damage that is disregarded from a physical attack. Whatever damage penetrates is removed from the character's health.

Note that you will find a complete guide to attributes and resistances in the Strategy & Analysis chapter.

Requirements

Even if they possessed the muscles to pick it up, an untrained mage would have no idea how to swing a battle axe. A rogue would fare no better in guessing how to shake a spark from a staff of lightning. In other words many items simply cannot be used without the character meeting a set of minimum requirements that can relate to class, talent tree, level and attribute.

As a rule, the key requirements are down to two attributes that are essential for a corresponding class:

Armor Type	Class	Attributes Required
Heavy	Warrior	Strength & Constitution
Medium	Rogue	Dexterity & Cunning
Light	Mage	Magic & Willpowe

It is sometimes possible for a high-level player to achieve attributes that would allow equipping armor of a different class, but of such a lower level that the items would almost certainly be useless.

There's a small trick that you may exploit which uses items that boost attributes. An accessory that boosts constitution, for instance, can be used to meet the minimum requirements of a piece of warrior armor, allowing the armor to be equipped. The accessory may then be removed and replaced with something else, but the armor will remain equipped (though grayed out) and its effects on stats will also stay active. In this way, you can equip items that the character couldn't otherwise use.

Rune Slots

Weapons and armor with slots for Runes are rare and highly prized for customization. This is reflected in their price and those with more than one Rune slot are precious indeed. Even if the item appears ordinary in other regards, the addition of an uncommon nature damage bonus, for instance, through the process of enchantment creates a rare form of weapon that can give you a significant advantage against specific enemies.

A few Runes may be found or purchased directly, but to source the best ones you will need to craft them for yourself.

Default Items

In case you fancied a spot of wrestling, you should be aware that it's not possible to leave your characters undefended by removing their weapons. Every party member has a basic sidearm to call on if nothing else is equipped. For instance, the mage's default stick is a Basic Staff of fire, doing just 4 points of damage. Basic weapons are extremely weak and do not scale with the character's level.

If you decide to remove your character's armor as well, a fetching set of underwear protects their modesty – but little else, as there is no default armor. And yes, the effect persists for engine cut scenes (Fig. 1).

Equipment Properties

This section studies some of the most interesting properties offered by certain pieces of equipment in the game. These can often be used to further specialize characters fulfilling a specific role, such as tanks, lockpickers or damage-dealers. For more details on abilities, attributes and resistances, consult the Strategy & Analysis chapter.

Bonus to lockpicking | Bonus to disarm traps | Bonus to evade traps

The actual effect of these bonuses is to increase your character's cunning attribute by 50%, but purely in relation to the named task. So for instance a rogue with just 20 cunning but a bonus to lockpicking would be able to open complex chests, which normally require 30 cunning. With this property equipped, master chests become pilferable at 27 cunning.

25% chance to reduce movement speed | 25% chance to reduce attack speed

Every successful attack has a chance to reduce the enemy's movement speed or attack speed by 50% for a brief duration. Some enemies have specific immunities to these debuffs, but all others will become far less dangerous for the duration of the effect – a very useful way to hamper enemy damage-dealers.

+ X% threat generation

Intended for the tank in your party, this property raises their ability to draw the attention of enemies. These bonuses are small, especially when proximity plays a role, but can help to postpone that moment in battle when a daunting enemy decides that your mage or rogue is a greater threat. See page 180 for a better understanding of threat.

- X% threat generation

This makes the wearer more likely to be ignored during combat. Proximity can always offset a minor threat, so this bonus is most effective when trying to avoid enemy archers.

Blood magic: each point of health provides 1 additional mana

Blood magic ordinarily provides 3 points of mana for every 1 point of health, so with just two items possessing this property, the ratio would increase to 5:1, making the mana pool available huge. The ever-present risk of blood magic, though, is that the caster cannot be healed normally and sacrifices health to cast spells.

Immunity to stun

Though useful to all, this is one of the finer properties tanks can obtain as it prevents their defenses and generated threat from being reset.

+ X damage vs. humans

This is a powerful damage bonus useful against many enemy groups, such as thugs, mages and templars.

+ X% healing to this character

This property is intended primarily for your warriors with high constitution. It means that healing spells cast upon them will restore more health than they normally provide.

+ X% healing by this character

This property is useful for Spirit Healers and supporting mages. More effective healing spells will need to be cast less often, which counteracts lengthy Cooldown periods in long battles.

+ X damage resistance

One of the most useful resistances, as this applies to all types of damage taken. It's like having a few extra points of armor against any kind of attack.

+ X% attack speed

Individually, these bonuses tend to be small and often negligible. But if your character has abilities that enhance attack speed or companions who provide a speed buff, the cumulative effect can be worth pursuing. Increasing attack speed raises the probability of critical hits.

+ X% critical chance | + X% critical damage

The first of these bonuses raises the probability of landing critical hits; the second raises their power. Rogues will find that the latter becomes more important over time with the acquisition of automatic critical hits through ability or strategy. Stacking these bonuses can significantly increase a character's effectiveness.

+ X% chance to knock back

Knockback and Knockdown work best with a little micromanagement, so that the character leaves the victim out of the fight or open to others.

+ X physical damage across 2m

This increase in range suits both the tank encircled by aggressors and the two-handed damage-dealer who wades into a horde of foes.

+ X% magic resistance

This is armor against magic, absorbing the damage inflicted by spells, which becomes increasingly useful toward the end of the game. It also reduces the duration of enemy spells, so that you break free of hexes and paralyze magic much faster.

+ X mana/stamina | + X% mana/stamina

This increases your initial (and maximum) reserve of mana or stamina. Just 5 points of additional mana/stamina is equivalent to 1 attribute point spent on willpower, so a couple of +8 items would surpass a level up. You can forgo spending a warrior's or rogue's attribute points in willpower if you make use of items with these properties.

+ X mana/stamina regeneration

This increases the regeneration rate of mana or stamina, which becomes appreciable during long battles. All classes require plenty of mana or stamina for their many abilities. Some top-tier talents can be used for stamina recovery later in the game, but a substantial bonus here benefits characters early on.

+ X fire/cold/electricity/spirit/nature resistance

This really comes into its own when fighting against enemies with elemental attacks, such as Rage Demons. Even a modest resistance begins to downgrade them. If you can't find the elemental resistances you need, look for Rune slots and build your own. If you can find elemental armor and it has a Rune slot, apply a Rune of Warding of the same affinity for maximum protection.

+ X strength/dexterity/magic/willpower/cunning/constitution

These attribute bonuses are temporarily as effective as a Tome or level up in raising one attribute and can be transferred between characters in some instances. They can also help to meet the minimum requirements for other equipment.

+ X physical damage

Extra points of damage quickly add up when it's on a rogue's dagger, being applied at high speed on every strike.

+ X% fire/cold/electricity/spirit/nature damage

This is extremely useful for mages as it affects both their spells and their standard staff-based attacks. However this property can also be of benefit to other classes – for instance Bianca's Bursting Arrow deals fire damage, while Fenris can master spirit-based attacks.

+ X fortitude

As it takes 1 point of strength to raise a warrior's fortitude by 1 point, even small gains here can equate to increasing a level or two for a tank or for a class that doesn't wish to expend points on strength.

Immunity to flanking

Tanks usually have enough passive abilities to counter flanking after the first few levels, so its best application is with a damage-dealing warrior or rogue who likes to dive in.

X% chance to stealth when hit

Effectively, the rogue gains a small chance to enter stealth when hit. The rogue then has an opportunity to strike from stealth, with appropriate advantages.

100% of basic attack damage vs. enemies that attack in melee

When an enemy attacks the character equipped with this property, they suffer an instant counter with damage equal to the character's full basic attack damage. There is no animation for this retaliatory attack as it can occur instantly and simultaneously against multiple enemies. It does not apply to ranged attacks and magic.

Enemies drop more coin

With this property, coin drops are 5% larger than usual. So if you'd normally receive 20 silver from an enemy, you will now receive 21. The good news is that these properties stack, so having two items active would raise the haul by 10% – a significant sum over the course of a game.

Enemies drop better equipment

This increases the quality of enemy drops (a sword doing 24 instead of 22 damage, for instance, and having a better attack property). There is also a lower, secondary chance that the item gains an extra property or bonus. When you're trying to save money, keeping this equipped can turn up some better generic equipment that will fetch a more profitable sale price.

Warrior Weapons

The minimum requirements for wielding a warrior weapon are based on strength (with shields also requiring constitution), in addition to specific talent trees.

Shields & One-handed Weapons

One-handed weapons and shields can only be used by a warrior with the Weapon and Shield talent tree. As you will mainly need such equipment for your tank, look for the following attributes:

- Improvements to armor, resistances and fortitude.
- Bonuses to health, regeneration and the healing applied to the character.
- Increased threat generation.
- Knockbacks, stuns and deathblows: these can reduce the number of opponents effectively dealing damage.
- Furthermore, the high incidence of critical attack speed modifiers can aid threat generation through damage.

As the game uses complex systems, note that all item attributes listed are average figures, so don't be surprised by a small degree of variation up or down. The formal we use for many Acquisition notes is 'item holder: [location, quest]'.

Two-handed Weapons

Suited to the damage-dealer, two-handed weapons deliver significant physical damage. Minimum requirements in strength top out at 40-43 for the best weapons and may need some early dedicated investment before focus switches to other attributes. Increases in cunning will help to offset the lack of shield by raising the chance to dodge attacks while improving critical damage.

- Supporting accessories and equipment can take several different paths but work best if they concertedly follow the lead of the weapon itself.
- Add multiple physical damage properties, increasing tough regular hits.
- Add critical chance and damage properties, complementing attribute points in cunning.
- Add attack speed bonuses, increasing the hit rate.
- Add stamina regeneration for more ability use.

Mage Weapons

Staves deal damage at range with bolts of energy and up close with physical blows (though that may not suit the disposition of most mages). They can score critical hits with their basic attacks like any other weapon and their shots can be blocked by obstacles between wielder and target. The magic attribute determines a staff's attack value.

Staves

High magic is the only requirement to equip the best staves, though you'll also need to place a certain amount of investment in willpower to equip fine mage armor.

The first rule for any party-minded mage is to acquire a wide collection of staves to cover all the elemental affinities for every enemy and occasion. The second rule is to acquire the Elemental Weapons talent so that others share the benefit. But after finding a strong damage rating in the correct element, it is the other properties that distinguish exceptional staves from ordinary fare. In its ideal form, the staff is a support tool that enhances the power of your chosen spell disciplines. Unlike other classes, the mage excels at Area of Effect magic and crowd control. Things to look for include:

Raw elemental damage enhancement for your strongest spells.
Mana pool assistance.
Defensive properties to balance out the mage's weakness.

Rogue Weapons

The player rogue has the choice of mastering Archery or Dual Weapons. In playing terms, this translates into the lone ranged tactician or the dual-wielder in the thick of the action. Both roles will focus attacks on a single enemy at a time to remove it from the fight as quickly and cleanly as possible.

Dual Weapons

Requirements for the best weapons range from 38 to 42. At all stages of the game, dexterity is important for both attack and critical chance.

The first thing to realize about dual wielding is that you have two sets of weapon attributes. These work best if they can complement each other with similar stacking bonuses, but much of the time you'll be picking the best two by their relative level. Additional item properties can take this further:

- Add bonuses for critical hits.
- Increase attack speed.
- Add elemental damage to Rune slots to be more effective against specific enemy weaknesses.

Weapons and armor with rogue skill bonuses don't need to be used for combat. Just equip them before performing the skill check (such as opening a locked chest) and revert to better items for fighting.

Bows

Bows are limited to archers. Once you pass 40 in dexterity, you can equip the best bows in the game.

Power summarizes the use of the bow in terms of damage and knockback, balanced by an initially painful rate of fire. As with the talent trees, an archer has the choice of bolstering power or speed:

If playing for power, focus on damage properties.

If enhancing critical hits, look to attack speed too. Two rolls of the dice are better than one.

Abilities hit automatically, without fail. Equip to promote the devastation of their success.

Mage Armor

Much like the staff, mage robes are more useful in their supporting properties than when called on to act like armor in deflecting blows. While some outfits have protective qualities, especially in elemental resistances and magic resistance, mana enhancement and generation is a more common property. Fortunately, mage clothes feature some exceptional bonuses in areas that would well serve the party that defends its weaker members.

A magic resistance focus would be a well-rewarded tactic for dealing with some of the later enemies in the game, and with deft use of storage the mage could stock costumes like staves for every occasion. Minimum requirements in both willpower and magic may disadvantage the blood mage who chose to invest attribute points in constitution, but it's possible to get by with less than 30 in each.

Warrior Armor

Unique Armor

Hawke can equip up to four pieces of armor at the same time, each covering a specific body part. Companions do not have access to armor per se, but they can still receive armor upgrades.

Warrior Armor

Minimum requirements must be met in strength and constitution to carry the heaviest plate or chain mail. Good armor is the savior of the tank, but a player warrior is likely to opt for a more hands-on damage-dealer role and will need to account for the absence of shield or Defender talents.

Warriors would do well to look for Rune slots. With weak magic resistance and likely very little elemental resistance, Runes of Warding can make the difference between an easy victory and a barbecued Hawke in fighting the likes of Dragons.

Rogue Armor

Rogue Armor

Minimum requirements peak at 31 dexterity and cunning, though it would take a high-level rogue to meet both. Runes can broaden protection, but the rogue's investment in cunning should help to avoid more physical attacks rather than hoping to absorb the damage.

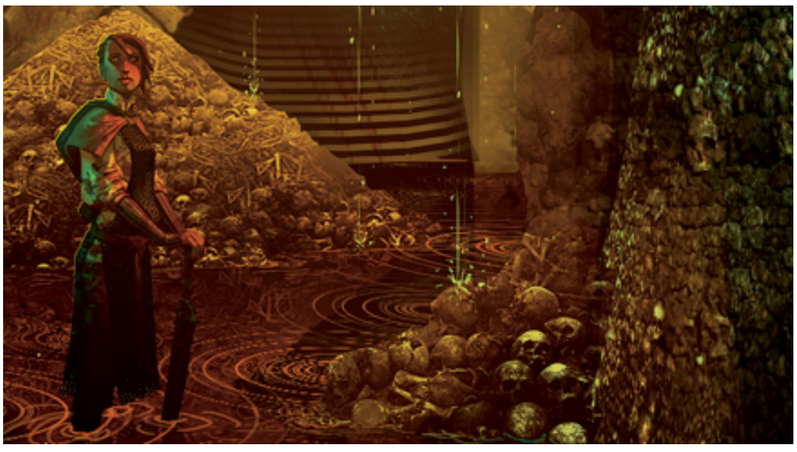
Armor Sets



There are three unique, complete armor sets to collect in each Act, one for each class that Hawke may play. Equipping the entire suit of armor on the main character confers an additional bonus for completing the uniform. Note that these items are class-specific: you can only acquire those corresponding to your class in a single playthrough.

Armor Sets

Set Name	Act	Class	Piece #1	Piece #2	Piece #3	Bonus
Fallen	1	Warrior	Gauntlets of the Fallen	Boots of the Fallen	Warplate of the Fallen	1 strength, 20 health
Last Descent	1	Rogue	Last Descent Gauntlets	Last Descent Boots	Last Descent Armor	1 dexterity, 20 stamina
Spiral Eye	1	Mage	Gloves of the Spiral Eye	Boots of the Spiral Eye	Robes of the Spiral Eye	1 magic, 20 mana
Stonehammer	2	Warrior	Stonehammer Gauntlets	Stonehammer Boots	Stonehammer Plate	2 strength, 3% armor
Enasalin	2	Rogue	Gloves of Enasalin	Boots of Enasalin	Guardian of Enasalin	2 dexterity, 3% displacement
Overseer	2	Mage	Gloves of the Overseer	Boots of the Overseer	Robes of the Overseer	2 magic, 3% defense
Champion	3	Warrior	Gauntlets of the Champion	Boots of the Champion	Warplate of the Champion	3 strength, 5% armor
Champion	3	Rogue	Gloves of the Champion	Boots of the Champion	Arms of the Champion	3 dexterity, 5% displacement
Champion	3	Mage	Gloves of the Champion	Boots of the Champion	Robes of the Champion	3 magic, 5% defense

Generated Equipment

Besides the unique items, with their names and history, you'll also find plenty of ordinary equipment with useful but unexceptional attributes. Such items are randomly generated, from their names to their bonuses, by intelligent selection from predetermined loot categories. They can be found as enemy drops, in most containers throughout Kirkwall and the Free Marches, and even in shops where they represent the bulk of merchant inventories. These items are generated upon entering the map in which they are situated.

You'll quickly learn to spot such items by their use of adjectives rather than individually imagined names. While "The Bann's Backhouse Door" is a fairly memorable title that marks out an early unique shield, the "Superior Shield" and "Heavy Shield" are examples of many generic items that will come your way.

Perhaps the most relevant factor in the generation of items is Hawke's level. Weapons and armor will scale accordingly, keeping pace with the party's need for increasingly powerful gear. Older items can be confidently traded away for silvers and bits.

The most useful items endow the user with multiple bonuses, but costs rise exponentially with each additional bonus. Furthermore, generated items never feature Rune slots and their bonuses cannot match the power or specialization of unique items. But when you are trying to be frugal in your expenditure, such finds can usefully fill gaps in your party's inventory. Mages will want to collect staves of every element, while accessories with the same bonus can be equipped on one character for a dedicated, stacked advantage to a specific attribute.

Loot Drops

Enemies are sometimes scripted to drop specific items as the fixed rewards for quests. They may also leave coins or Potions as plunder to be claimed for defeating them in battle. Most of the time, though, the treasure dropped by enemies consists of generated items. These are randomly selected from within a range of objects that belong to the loot category associated with the creature group (as revealed in the Bestiary chapter of this guide). The following table of loot categories shows the useful types of reward for each group.

Loot Category	General Contents	Useful For
Generic	Weapons, armor, accessories	All classes
Apostates	Weapons, armor, rings, Heretic's Manual, Bedroll	Mages
Beasts	Claws, Liver, Kidney, Pelt, Dragon Eyes, Dragon Scales, Dragon Glands, Spider Fangs, Spider Glands, Spider Silk	All classes
Chantry	Shields, rings, belts	Warriors, Rogues
Circle of Magi	Staffs, armor, amulets	Mages
Coterie	Bows, daggers, armor, rings, belts	Rogues
Dalish	Weapons, armor, amulets, belts	Warriors, Rogues
Darkspawn	Weapons, amulets	Warriors
Demonic	Weapons, armor, amulets, rings, belts	Mages
Dwarven	Weapons, armor	Rogues
Kirkwall	Weapons, armor	Warriors, Rogues
Profane	Weapons, amulets, rings	Mages
Qunari	Weapons, armor, amulets, belts	Warriors, Mages
Raiders	Weapons, armor	Warriors, Rogues
Slavers	Weapons, armor	Warriors, Mages
Templars	Weapons, armor	Warriors, Rogues

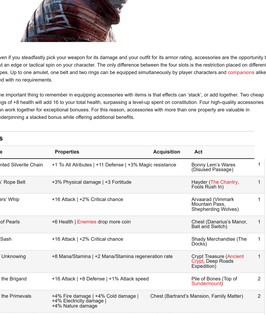
Potions work slightly differently, as the game assists players who are short on supplies. The chance of a Potion drop is greatest when your inventory is empty, the probability decreasing until you hit the limit for the current difficulty level. If the number of Potions in your inventory matches or exceeds the limit, they will stop appearing as loot. This limit applies to each type of basic Potion individually. As soon as the number of Potions in your inventory falls below the limit, you will be getting some as loot drops again.

Difficulty level	Potion Drop Limit
Casual	16
Normal	12
Hard	8
Nightmare	4

Although they are cheap goods, you can always exploit the game's generosity in the early stages by forcing the drops. For example, try placing all of your Lyrium Potions in storage at Gamlen's House so that your inventory is empty of them before opening some of the containers around Kirkwall.

Inventory

Unique Accessories



Even if you steadfastly pick your weapon for its damage and your outfit for its armor rating, accessories have the opportunity to put an edge or tactical spin on your character. The only difference between the four slots is the restriction placed on different types. Up to one amulet, one belt and two rings can be equipped simultaneously by player characters and companions alike, and with no requirements.

The important thing to remember in equipping accessories with items is that effects can 'stack,' or add together. Two cheap rings of +8 health will add 16 to your health, surpassing a level-up spent on constitution. Four high-quality accessories can work together for exceptional bonuses. For this reason, accessories with more than one property are valuable in underpinning a stacked bonus while offering additional benefits.

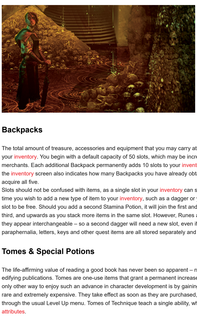
Inventory

Special Items



Backpacks

The total amount of treasure, accessories and equipment that you may carry at any one time is determined by the capacity of your inventory. You begin with a default capacity of 50 slots, which may be increased by purchasing Backpacks from specific merchants. Each additional Backpack permanently adds 10 slots to your inventory. The capacity meter on the lower right of the inventory screen also indicates how many Backpacks you have already obtained, extending to a potential 100 slots if you acquire all five.
Slots should not be confused with items, as a single slot in your inventory can sometimes hold many identical items. Every time you wish to add a new type of item to your inventory, such as a dagger or your first Stamina Potion, it needs an empty slot to be free. Should you add a second Stamina Potion, it will join the first and the slot will then indicate "x2", or "x3" for a third, and upwards as you stack more items in the same slot. However, Runes and equipment have unique identities – even if they appear interchangeable – so a second dagger will need a new slot, even if its attributes appear similar. Note that crafting paraphernalia, letters, keys and other quest items are all stored separately and do not require a space in your inventory.

Tomes & Special Potions

The life-affirming value of reading a good book has never been so apparent – nor so immediate – as in the case of these edifying publications. Tomes are one-use items that grant a permanent increase to Hawke's abilities or attributes. Since the only other way to enjoy such an advance in character development is by gaining an experience level, these volumes are very rare and extremely expensive. They take effect as soon as they are purchased, the points becoming available to spend through the usual Level Up menu. Tomes of Technique teach a single ability, while Tomes of the Mortal Vessel improve attributes.

Gifts

Beyond the consequences of your actions and conversations, your relationships with your companions can be further influenced by presenting them with Gifts. A single Gift will usually strengthen the relationship further in the direction of friendship.

Gifts are personalized for a specific character and only influence the relationship with a one-time bonus, which may be undone by later actions and events. Some Gifts can even be equipped as useable items. See the corresponding sections in this chapter for details on the Shield of the Knight Herself, the Blade of Mercy, the Sylvanwood Ring and the Starkhaven Longbow.

Companion Armor Upgrades

Companions cannot equip the armor made available to Hawke but they each have the option of upgrading their personal outfit with a series of bolt-on components. Every armor upgrade is permanently applied on acquisition and confers estimable protective bonuses. Diligently tracking down upgrades for all of your fellow travelers, even those who see less action, will maintain party balance and keep later options open.

There is one early armor upgrade for Hawke's sibling while all other companions can expect four upgrades over the course of the game. The effects vary greatly, and in addition to improving the base armor rating they can introduce Rune slots, add resistances and increase defense.

Consumables

Potions can be consumed in mid-battle, requiring the character to cease other actions and taking immediate effect. Potion use is limited by a Cooldown period, which is extended to similar replenishing items on activation, and may be automated through Tactics when a companion is in danger.

Icon	Name	Effect	Acquisition
	Health Potion	Health regeneration: 60% Cooldown: 30 seconds	Standard loot from enemies and containers
	Mana Potion	Mana regeneration: 40% Cooldown: 30 seconds
	Stamina Potion	Stamina regeneration: 40% Cooldown: 30 seconds
	Injury Kit	Heals an injury

When it comes to availability, always try to ration your Potion consumption and establish a reserve for emergency use that you have accumulated from those you find. You will most likely need to raid your stock of Potions at some point, as you'll be facing many lengthy battles and challenging boss encounters where Potions will come in handy as your "fifth NPC medic" when forsaking healers and support for a more aggressive party roster.

When your character is knocked unconscious during battle, they will incur an injury (indicated by a red skull icon beside their portrait) on revival. Injured characters must endure a constant reduction in maximum health, proportional to the number of injuries received, that remains with them until cured. The Injury Kit will heal the condition, but take note that this sticking-plaster item is intended mainly for use mid-quest, when you are deep in a cave or dungeon and unable to leave the current path. Returning to Gamlen's House or the Hawke Estate cures all injuries just as effectively and at no cost, while the Spirit Healer's Second Chance passive ability prevents injury altogether.

Junk

Don't concern yourself with saving anything that automatically turns up in your trash can ( ). That's not to say it's worthless, as you'll generate a small amount of welcome revenue every time you trade in your haul at a merchant's. Some objects fetch more than others, with antiques and pouches of chipped gemstones demanding a higher price than bottles of rotgut or a moth-eaten scarf. But if an item is clearly labeled as junk on discovery then it is meant to be sold: there are no hidden treasures, crafting items or secret valuables in this category that will contribute to quests later on.

If you need to make inventory space for real equipment, the ragged objects in the junk category can be permanently removed with the Destroy option. In a pinch, you may even transfer unwanted weapons and gear to the trash can for destruction. As a rule, though, it's far wiser to manage your inventory, sell items and use the Storage in Gamlen's House to clear out your clutter before embarking on a new quest. Acquiring Backpack expansions for additional capacity slots also tends to make things much easier.

Here is the guide to Fishers Island, an island located in the eastern sprawling archipelago of Deepest Crawley. This area is where there is no oxygen and the temperature is well below freezing. Only the strongest survivors can live here.

Fishers Island is a small island with a large village and a large port. Many ships dock here to trade goods and supplies. The island is also home to a number of factories that produce goods for export.

Surrounding the island are a number of smaller islands and reefs. These are home to a variety of wildlife, including fish, birds, and marine mammals. The waters around the island are also home to a number of shipwrecks.

Overall, Fishers Island is a unique and interesting place to visit. It is a great place to learn about the history of the region and to see some of the local wildlife. If you are looking for a place to relax and enjoy the beauty of nature, then Fishers Island is a great option.

Here are some of the things you can do on Fishers Island:

- Visit the village and port
- Explore the factories
- Go fishing
- Take a boat tour
- Visit the shipwrecks
- Hike on the trails
- Relax on the beach

Some of the more useful items in the game must be made by the process of crafting. There are three distinct fields of crafting, each generating different kinds of objects, but the requirements are broadly the same for all disciplines:

- Recipes, Designs and Formulae: Knowledge, in the form of a set of instructions to follow.
- Reagents: The discovery of sufficient raw ingredients, by type and quantity.
- Crafters: The expertise of a professional who can be paid 1 silver for their services in creating each item.

The one thing to understand about crafting is that the ingredients you find will stay with you permanently. They are not spent when you make an item: instead, they add to a growing resource list that increases your capacity to make more complicated combinations.

As an example, an Elfroot Potion recipe asks for 1 Elfroot. When you have found at least one of the game's 9 Elfroots, you may begin ordering as many Elfroot Potions as you like. Expanding the operation to make a Restoration Potion then demands the acquisition of the new recipe, which will tell you that Elfroot and 2 Spiderweed. With only 1 Elfroot on your list, you will need to find another 2 Elfroot and at least 2 Spiderweed to meet the required combination.

Potions

To concoct a Potion or Elixir, you must first discover a Recipe. The herbal ingredients of Elfroot, Spiderweed, Embrium and Ambrosia must then be sourced and picked from the wild reaches of the Free Marches.

Lady Elegant is one of the first characters that Hawke may encounter on an initial visit to Lowtown. She immediately offers her services and provides a complimentary Elfroot Potion Recipe to unlock her Crafting Station.

Runes

Runes are magical symbols that can be grafted onto other items to enhance their power with a specific enchantment. Weapon Runes can be used to enchant a bow, a staff, a sword or similar solution to adding damage and effects to the weapon's existing attack attributes. Armor Runes are placed on chest armor, hat, boots, gloves, a helm or even a shield, to add magical protection. Only some of the game's unique named items (as opposed to randomly generated items – see page 206) have the requisite slots to host Runes. The most prized of all feature more than one Rune slot.

The creation of a Rune first requires a Design. The raw materials of Lyrium, Silverite, Orichalcum and Dragon's Blood must then be sourced in sufficient quantity and combination. Shortly after gaining entry to Kirkwall, Hawke will catch up with a vendor and artisan by the name of Worthy, who keeps a Crafting Station in Hightown Market. True to his name, the dwarf is eminently qualified to craft Runes to order.

To use the Runes so acquired, you must also apply them to the slot of an accommodating weapon, shield or piece of armor by hiring the services of an enchanter. Enchanter Sarolle, Serafel, offers enchantment services in Hightown from Act 1. He relocates to the Deep Roads during the expedition and can be found at the Hawke Estate from Act 2 onwards.

Although the attribute of a Rune is determined by its Design, its potency derives from the power of the item to which it is attached. The Weapon Rune Lyrium has a 20% of the weapon's base damage rating. The resistance bonus Rune of Warding is derived from the armor value. So a Rune is always best used on powerful equipment. And in case you were wondering, the effects of the Rune of Fortune do not stack with similar items.

Poisons & Bombs

Poisons and Bombs require a Formula to obtain the correct toxic or combustible reagents. Such substances are extracted from Deep Mushroom, Deathroot, Glitterdust and Felandaris, which tend to thrive when nature finds a foothold in some dark, melancholic corner.

Poisons enjoy a lengthy duration, potentially lasting many battles, and are applied to the weapon of every party member when used. They can be considered as a purchased form of additional combat buff.

Bombs require no special skill to deliver and can be thought of as an additional attack or ability available to any and every party member. Though costly if used to excess, they can be kept in reserve for times of trouble. The revival grenade of Mythal's Favor is a perfect example, turning the last man or woman standing into an ad hoc Spirit Healer.

City elf Tomiwe operates a stall near the western exit of Darktown. Another of the acquaintances met by Hawke in the year spent gaining entry to Kirkwall, the dabbler is happy to provide his services and offers the Formula of Debilitating Poison to unlock his Crafting Station.

Bestiary

Introduction

Death wears many faces in the Free Marches. Cautious explorers of the wilds expect to glimpse him in bared teeth and flexed talons, but the seasoned traveler knows he is as likely to be met in fine robes. This section reveals the hidden strengths and weaknesses of every enemy type – people, beasts demons and the damned – and identifies the lethal resources that each can call on to vanquish the unprepared.

Chapter Structure

To help you understand exactly what you're up against, this chapter will categorize enemies by their group. All enemies within a group share the "group traits" listed up front, such as the weakness to nature that applies to all darkspawn.

Within each group, every monster and enemy in Dragon Age II also belongs to a specific archetype that determines its general behavior – much as the rogue, mage and warrior classes define a player's character. Archetypes are described in the following section and subsequently identified for each creature. While standard archetypes need no further explanation, the talents of the more powerful "elite" archetypes are examined using individual analysis sheets.

Finally, every enemy has a rank, that can vary, to describe its relative strength compared to others of the very same kind. If you're lucky, you might find yourself facing a weedy specimen of rhurlock that won't put up much of a fight. Or it could be a vicious rhurlock veteran, if you and luck aren't getting along.

As a complete example for using the guide, let's suppose you encounter a female Dalish Assassin. The Dalish have an innate weakness to electricity as a group, so this applies to all Dalish units. This specialized combatant belongs to the assassin archetype, which reveals more of their behavior and stealth abilities. Finally, she may be a lieutenant in rank – slightly more powerful than weak or normal Dalish units and with a larger health bar. As the Dalish Assassin is an "elite" unit, you will find all of the information about her advanced attributes gathered in a dedicated analysis sheet in the Dalish section.

For each analysis sheet, the icon-based key immediately reveals the elemental immunities (only used in Nightmare difficulty – replaced by neutral effects in the other difficulty levels) and weaknesses to exploit with your spells or magic weapons. Indeed, it is worth noting that all groups have a weakness, even if it's slight or not always obvious from play.

If you're unsure of the meaning of a special trait (such as "weak armor" or "high defense"), read the Secondary Attributes section of the Strategy & Analysis chapter.

When a creature is defeated, there is often a chance that it will drop some kind of loot. This can take the form of coins or junk that can be sold. However, it's also possible for loot drops to contain useful equipment. Enemies are therefore assigned a "loot category" so that the randomly generated treasure they leave is appropriate to them and the context of the encounter. Hunted mages surrender Apostate staves and staves; Kirkwall Guards leave behind their Reacher armor.

Archetypes

Though you will encounter many different enemies and factions, there are combat roles that are common to all groups. Categories called archetypes define those roles, from the humble frontline standard trooper to the inspiring commander, and establish the further advantages assigned to them. Weapons and abilities also determine the tactical behavior of such archetypes.

Trooper

Archetype Traits: None

Archetype Analysis:

The standard warrior archetype picks a target on the battlefield, influenced by the threat generation system, and rushes to engage directly in melee assault. This broad category also covers creatures with natural weapons, such as spiders and the mabari. Crowd control mechanisms can focus them around a companion or hold them in one spot for Area of Effect attacks. Alternatively, Glyphs of Paralysis and single-target stalling attacks like Pinning Shot, Stone Fist and Winter's Grasp can break up an advancing wave of troopers so that your fighters can deal with each foot-soldier in turn. Finally, your fighters can use Stun, Stagger and Knockback moves to temporarily reduce the number of opponents engaged. These can set up cross-class combo opportunities like other companions.

Trooper – Weapon and Shield

Archetype Traits:

- Medium armor bonus
- Moderate defense bonus
- Weak magic resistance

Archetype Analysis:

Troopers with skills in "sword and board" benefit from increased resistance to physical attacks but they are correspondingly weaker against magic. They adopt the same melee rush tactics as basic Troopers.

Trooper – Two-Handed Weapons

Archetype Traits:

- Medium damage bonus
- Moderate attack bonus
- Weak defense

Archetype Analysis:

This soldier has been designated a damage-dealer, a shock troop who inflicts bigger hits but is less adept at dodging blows. Concentrating your attacks on these soldiers as a priority can eliminate their effectiveness altogether. Slow two-handed weapon strikes can also be avoided simply by moving your character clear.

Trooper – Dual Weapons

Archetype Traits:

- Moderate damage bonus
- Medium attack bonus
- Weak armor

Archetype Analysis:

Dual-wielding troopers increase their damage per second with a rapid flurry of attacks. Only lightly armored for speed, they take more damage from successful hits.

Trooper – Archery

Archetype Traits:

- Moderate damage bonus
- Medium attack bonus
- Weak armor

Archetype Analysis:

This archetype covers all physical ranged attackers and marks a change in tactics to match the weapon. Archers will advance into range and no further, keeping their distance and firing missiles in support of other troopers. They are weak against melee attackers, but heavier projectiles can still pack enough punch (testing against Fortitude) to cause Knockback. Archers will happily identify weak companions as a priority risk when staying beyond range of your tank's Taunts and threat generation.

Party members can hit ranged attacks by exploiting the environment and avoiding line of sight. Missiles will be blocked by intervening objects. You may trick archers into moving closer by hiding in cover and forcing them to advance in search of a clear shot.

Otherwise, you may use Enrerare or rogue tactics such as Maximic Flask to temporarily remove or distract artillery support until your own fighters have a chance to move in. Maintaining distance means that grouped enemy archers are susceptible to Area of Effect spells without the risk of friendly fire, and disoriented enemies are especially weak against Walking Bomb, Spirit Strike and Cockeo's Fist.

Trooper – Staff

Archetype Traits:

- Moderate damage bonus
- Moderate magic resistance bonus
- Weak armor

Archetype Analysis:

Mages follow similar rules to archers in their preference for ranged attacks, but not all spells demand clear line of sight and hiding in cover may not protect you from Area of Effect splash damage. Furthermore, their resistance to spells encourages physical retaliation. Employing direct assault to counter those resistances, rogue stealth attacks and battlefield teleportation skills can swiftly disrupt an enemy's magical rearguard. Mages typically lack Fortitude and can be interrupted or knocked back by a strong archery shot.

Assassin

Archetype Traits:

- Medium attack bonus
- Weak armor
- Weak health

Archetype Analysis:

This specialist can wreak havoc and confusion during even a modest skirmish. Every assassin is capable of invisible movement through stealth and a Disengage ability, which returns them to stealth after knocking their enemies back a short distance. Between those events, they have two special attacks they can deliver from hiding. The announcing Backstab briefly paralyzes the target and inflicts a heavy amount of damage. The second stealth attack inflicts additional damage over time, of a type determined by the weapon or faction.
To tackle an assassin effectively, they must first be pinned down and exposed to heavy assault. Tagging additional stuns and freezes can prolong the opportunity for damage, though you may need to repeat the process.
Even when unseen, assassins have physical presence and can trigger protective Glyphs or take untargeted damage from Area of Effect magic.

Bruiser

Archetype Traits:

- Very high damage
- Medium attack bonus
- Moderate armor bonus
- Very weak defense

Archetype Analysis:

The bruiser archetype is essentially a sponge for damage. It cannot dodge, with successful hits being easy to score, but high armor reduces even essentially maximized damage taken. While your companions are chipping mere slivers from its mighty health bar, the bruiser is dishing out pain with unwelcome generosity.

Keep the bruiser occupied by one defendable, healable tank character, and use any functional freezing or halting spell to slow its attack rate and grant breathing space. Petrify can halt any enemy, but also acts as further armor on the target.

Settling in for the long haul against any creature with a large health bar, first remove all lesser ranks from the battlefield to prevent interruptions.

Commander

Archetype Traits:

- Immune to Silence
- High armor
- High fortitude

Archetype Analysis:

The commander archetype not only presents a tough fight individually, but also plays a supporting role that greatly increases the peril posed by its opposing force. Commanders extend an aura over the battlefield, healing and conferring specific benefits on their allies. This archetype is also capable of self-deference abilities and boasts a powerful medium-to-long range debilitation spell or Area of Effect artillery.
A commander's aura appears as a halo around its supported allies' ground rings, though it may be lifted temporarily if the commander is stunned or incapacitated. As they can take time to defeat, this is one way to turn off the buffs they provide for their subordinate ranks. Have one character stun the commander and be ready to remove those enemies closest to death.

Devastator

Archetype Traits:

- Very weak health
- Very weak armor
- Immense spellcasting damage

Archetype Analysis:

Devastators are magical artillery units, possessing a strong "nuke" spell that will swiftly explain the archetype's name unless interrupted. Devastators deploy a ranged Area of Effect spell, a defensive spell and a teleport. The status effects and elemental affinities vary with the devastator's group or faction.

Such enemies are a top priority for elimination and, despite their weaknesses, they often maintain a stiff challenge for any party seeking speedy removal. Once the devastator has used its teleport (which can take 8 to a number of pre-determined points on the map), it cannot do so again until the Cooldown period expires.

Boss

Archetype Traits:

- Immune to Knockdown
- Immune to Immobilized
- Immune to Paralyzed
- Immune to Enslavement
- Weak attack

Archetype Analysis:

This archetype offers no special abilities beyond additional toughness, resistance and immunity. Of course, that's enough to scupper many standard combat tactics.

Critical hits can play a useful role in the later game, with many skills and items ready to enhance them.
Build Anders as a healer and unlock his advanced regenerative powers to create a more resilient party. Otherwise, be prepared to grab down at the Tritons and step on a few Injury Kits along the way.
Bosses will still be forced to pick a target, and can be led on a merry chase by a mobile tank while their companions unleash ranged attacks.

Archboss

Archetype Traits:

- Immune to Knockback
- Immune to Knockdown
- Immune to Immobile
- Immune to Stun
- Immune to Paralyzed
- Immune to Enslavement
- Immune to Sleep
- Immune to Inevitable Death
- Immune to Explosive Death

Archetype Analysis:

The toughest bosses test your staying power and party management. Consult the individual entries and walkthrough for tactics and contextual information.

Ranks

After the assignment of archetype, it is rank that determines the exact level of toughness of an enemy on an internal scale – critter < normal < lieutenant < leader . Thus, a guard detachment composed entirely of troopers may contain a tougher lieutenant trooper and some critter troopers of much weaker stock. Look for visual indicators in the size of the health bar and the color of the name above the enemy's head (with bright red text for higher ranks).

Higher rank confers the following bonuses:

- Increased resistances to elemental attacks.
- Increased health, attack and damage ratings.
- Lower susceptibility to Knockdown and cross-class combos, while spells won't hold them for so long.
- Increased amount of items dropped.
- Leader ranks are immune to certain attacks, such as Crushing Prison and Brittle status. Leader ranks can also offset player attack and defense ratings, reducing player resistances to the leader's attacks.

Note the Vanguard ability of Deathblow: this warrior advantage automatically removes normal ranks below 20% health and lieutenants below 10% health, and is most effective in the latter case against an enemy with high health or armor.

Bestiary

Enemy Identification

The extraordinary opponents you meet in Dragon Age II will often have their own names or titles, but many of them are instances of a standard core creature in terms of attributes and behavior. So whenever you encounter an enemy whose name is unfamiliar, use the following directory to identify the core creature type on which they are based (note that we haven't included main bosses in this directory to avoid spoilers). You can then consult the corresponding entry in this chapter to find out all about their respective strengths and weaknesses.

Take Brekker, for instance. From his name alone, you cannot know what type of enemy he is. Look up his on-screen title in this directory, though, and you will see he is based on the Coterie Member. A complete analysis of that opponent is available in the Coterie group section of this Bestiary.

Extra Help for Act 1

Using the World Map

- All exits marked “Leave Area” will take you to the World Map; those with an area name lead to a connected map.
- The World Map has three pages: Kirkwall (Day), Kirkwall (Night) and the Free Marches. All locations where you can advance active quests are marked by an arrow. New destinations generally appear as you accept quests or make progress in existing ventures. Not all of these are permanent additions to the game world: certain locales disappear completely once you have satisfied all related plot requirements.
- Certain Kirkwall locations are only available during the day or night. Some areas (such as Lowtown, Hightown and the Docks) have unique evening versions of their maps where you will encounter different loot, denizens and quest opportunities

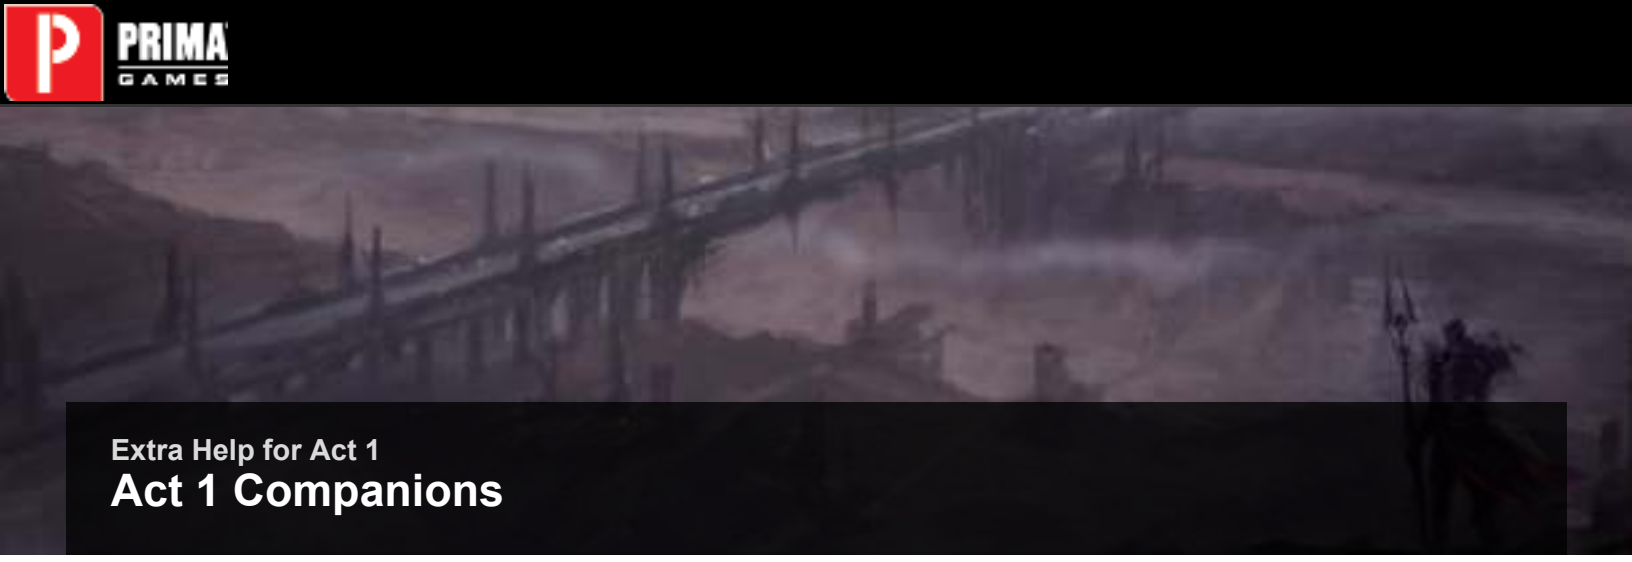
Gamlen's House

Though Hawke's uncle may not be the most convivial host, this hovel acts as your base of operations during the events of Act 1. Paying a visit will instantly cure any existing injuries and allow you to reselect your party members.

- Interact with the Writing Desk to collect letters sent to Hawke. Though some missives only reflect plot developments (such as the letter that awaits you on first visit from the employer you chose at the end of the Prologue), reading many of these will trigger a quest or unlock the possibility of interaction in the game world. An animated envelope will appear next to Gamlen's House on the World Map whenever new mail arrives.
- The chest marked Storage can be used to safely stash items for future retrieval. This is extremely useful when you wish to save powerful weapons, armor or accessories until Hawke or his companions meet the usage requirements.
- Bethany or Carver can be found here when not travelling with your party. If you have access to Dog, you have one opportunity to rename him here. Miss it in Act 1, and you have to settle for the default monicker.



Extra Help for Act 1

Act 1 Companions

Varric

Varric is arguably the most easygoing of Hawke's companions. You really need to be a thoroughbred bastard to invite his regular disapproval.

- He responds well to banter and relaxed humor. Unlike most other companions, Varric isn't defined by a personal crusade or all-pervading belief. He doesn't mind situations where individuals are seeking enrichment in ways that won't necessarily harm others. His silver tongue can be called into action to mediate peaceful solutions in a number of situations.

- Uniquely, Varric has a fixed weapon: Bianca, a crossbow that increases in power as he gains successive levels. Functioning exclusively as an archer, he can offer a potent combination of AoE assaults and debilitating attacks that offer your party an interesting tactical edge. See page 184 for further details.

Anders

First encountered in Dragon Age: Origins – Awakening, Anders is an apostate (a mage who refuses to submit to the Circle of Magi) and an erstwhile Grey Warden.

- Anders is an emotional character. He won't respond well if you reprimand him or if you are anything but committed in potential romantic interactions.

- Anders is inflexibly vociferous in his opposition to the treatment of mages in Kirkwall. That said, he adopts a rather less compassionate stance towards those who dabble in blood magic or involve themselves with demonic entities. Condoning such activities will anger him.

- Unless you intend to have Hawke perform this function, Anders is the companion best suited to the support healer role.

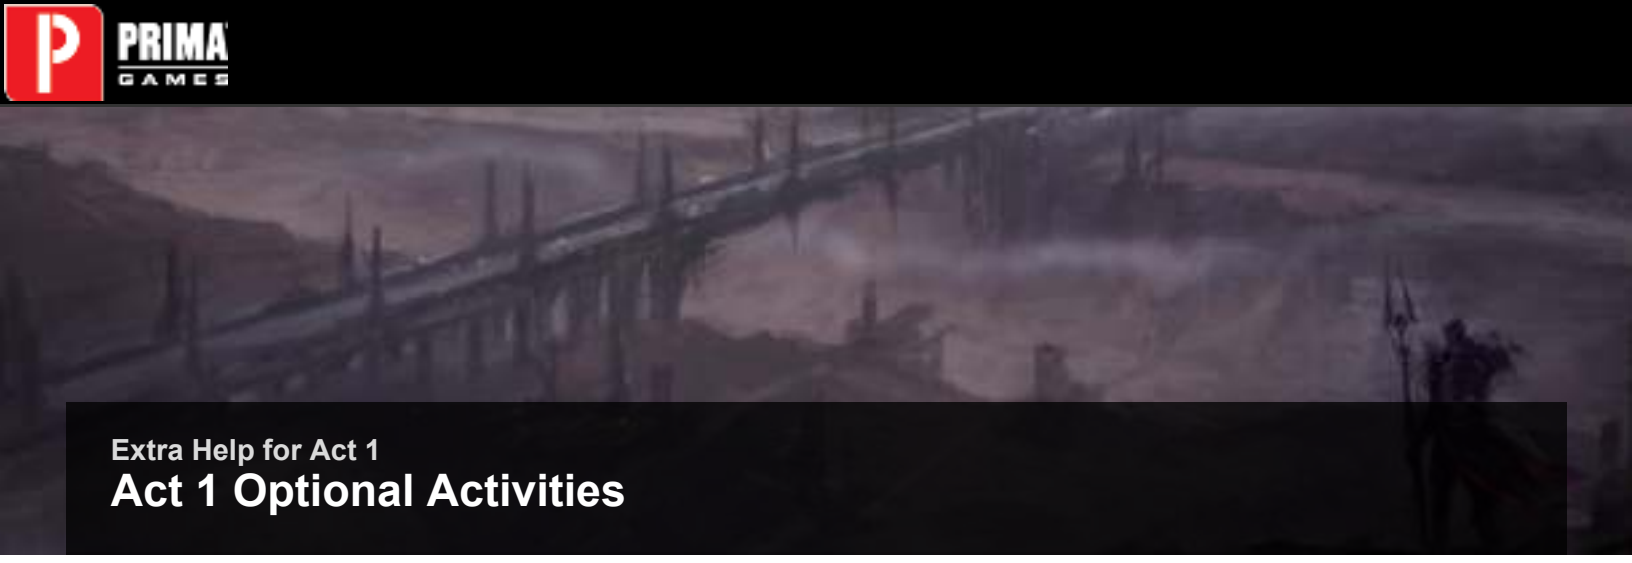
Merrill

If you did not choose the mage class for Hawke, you may find that Merrill represents your party's best choice for destructive magical damage. For advice on possible developmental paths for the Dalish mage, turn to page 185.

- As with Anders and Bethany, Merrill will disapprove if you condone or facilitate the oppression of mages.

- Ruthless behavior upsets her. Merrill is a pure-hearted creature, despite her propensity for consorting with demons, so those who favor a "might makes right" approach to interactions with others will struggle to maintain a harmonious friendship.

- Merrill does not cope well with criticism or condemnation. To establish and nurture a friendship (or, for that matter, romance), take an interest in her views and offer support whenever you can.



Extra Help for Act 1

Act 1 Optional Activities

The Birthright companion quest, unlocked on your first visit to Gamlen's House, is a short but rewarding episode that leads to a collection of significant secondary quests. You can also acquire Bait and Switch from the Writing Desk (see Gamlen's House) which can lead to the recruitment of a new companion. If you have access to any of the three Premium Content quests available at launch, you can attend to these short tasks straight away.

Lest you forget, the purpose of your Act 1 adventures is to raise capital to join Bartrand's Deep Roads expedition. The funds that you acquire by completing optional quests will provide all the sovereigns you need to accomplish that – and more besides.

- The Wayward Son quest marks your first extended visits to Lowtown and the Docks in the evening, so you may wish to read up on the gangs that inhabit these areas (and, for that matter, Hightown).

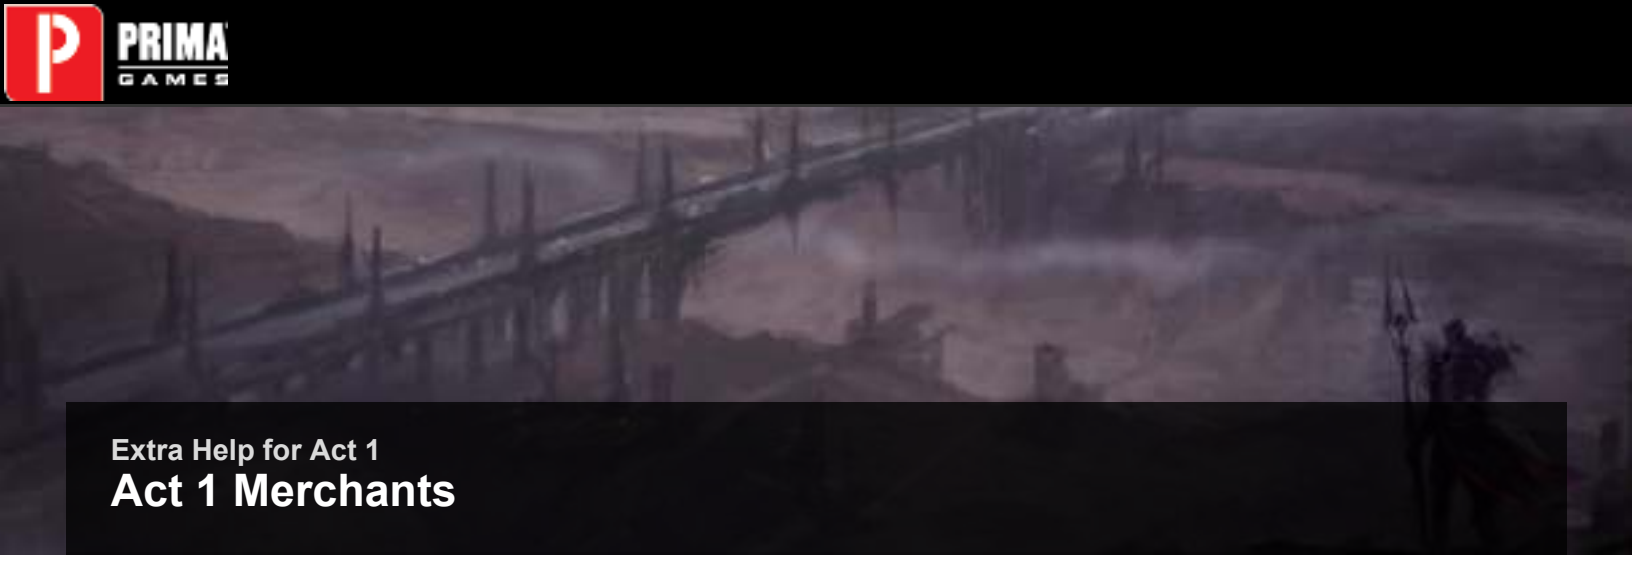
- Complete the Fools Rush In secondary quest to recruit Isabela. This optional companion has an intriguing role to play in major events of Act 2 but will be lost forever if you fail to approach her before you reach the Deep Roads.

- While some companion quests are extensive undertakings, others are simply short cutscenes and dialogue sequences that serve to further both the story and your relationship with the individual in question. Always approach these carefully – and especially so if you intend to unlock the "Great Minds Think Alike" Achievement/Trophy.

If you have been following our walkthrough, completing Enemies Among Us will finally allow you to begin the Deep Roads Expedition. Before you rush to speak with Bartrand, we strongly suggest that you use the Quests chapter to identify optional activities that you may have missed – particularly secondary and companion quests. Failing to complete many of these will preclude the possibility of playing follow-up quests in Act 2, or an assortment of reactive events, as revealed in the following table (see next page).

Quest	Page	Notes
Birthright	63	Short but profitable jaunt. It offers great rewards, and it's the gateway to many other secondary quests.
Bait and Switch	57	Only way to recruit Fenris. Miss it, and you lose him forever.
The Way it Should Be	62	Aveline's companion quest for Act 1. If you don't complete it, you cannot play her character-specific Act 3 quest.
The Bone Pit	58	Has a short reactive quest in Act 1, but opens up four further quests in Act 2 – all of which are otherwise unavailable. It's a highly profitable secondary quest strand.
Magistrate's Orders	56	This profitable quest leads to reactive events in later Acts.
Loose Ends	59	A short quest that follows up on your choice of employer in the Prologue.
The Unbidden Rescue	61	A mostly self-contained quest (with a tiny reactive detail in Act 2), but a great source of XP.
Herbalist's Tasks	61	This collection quest has a linked equivalent in Act 2; fail to complete both, and you'll miss out on both Solitivus's extra inventory in his shop and a unique reward in Act 3.
Fools Rush In	59	Required to unlock Isabela; if you don't complete it, you can't recruit her to your party.
Finders Keepers	60	Another self-contained quest with good rewards. Also unlocks a special merchant.
The First Sacrifice	62	Foreshadows two main plot quests in Act 2.
Night Lies, Pier Pressure & Sharp Little Pinpricks	68	This trio of side quests sees you clear Hightown, Lowtown and the Docks of the gangs that roam their streets at night. Each Act has three of these.

Completing main plot quests only, ignoring all other opportunities, will raise in the region of 35 to 45 sovereigns (depending on how diligent you are in collecting loot), and leave your party at approximately level 7 when you depart for the Deep Roads. Finishing all potential quests, however, will see you amass from 85 to 100 sovereigns, and reach level 11 – not to mention potential earnings and XP from later follow-up quests.

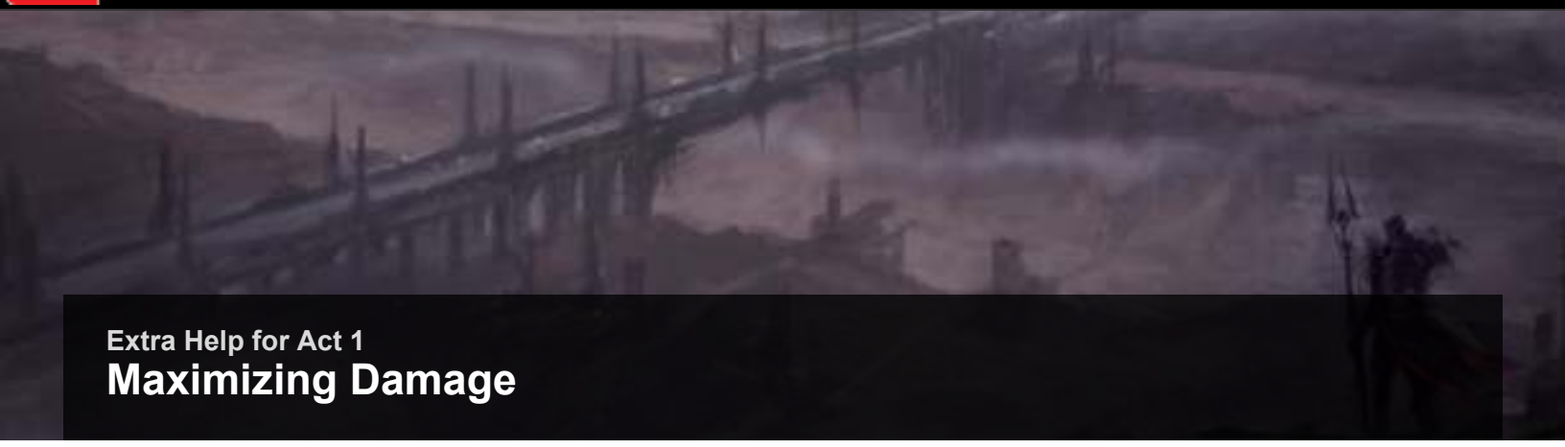


Extra Help for Act 1

Act 1 Merchants

Kirkwall's principle shopping districts are situated in Lowtown and Hightown during daylight hours, but you will also find individual merchants in other areas. To spend your coins in the most efficient way, digest the following collection of useful tips – and then study the Inventory chapter for more in-depth guidance.

- Though equipment can vary wildly in value between merchants and even between objects with ostensibly similar stats, all vendors offer the same level of reimbursement for the goods that you sell.
- Before you buy anything for a party member, be sure to check attribute and level requirements beforehand. You should also study the star ratings for such items, which indicate how effective a wearable object is for your current level: three is good, five exceptional.
- The majority of weapons, armor and accessories available in stores are "generated" items, randomly chosen from preset categories and scaled to your current level. These are often no better than objects you find on your travels. The best strategy for building a powerful party is to save for hard-coded "unique" items that offer proven long-term benefits.
- On the Normal and Hard difficulty levels, equipment found or offered as quest rewards should be more than sufficient during Act 1.



Extra Help for Act 1

Maximizing Damage

Most assailants in Dragon Age II have fixed resistances and vulnerabilities. Acquiring a basic understanding of how these affect combat encounters can enable you to formulate more effective strategies against each enemy type. As this feature is examined in far greater depth in the Strategy & Analysis chapter (with individual strengths and weaknesses revealed in the Bestiary), the following introductory guidelines are merely designed to whet your appetite for further reading.

- Broadly speaking, enemies can possess some form of resistance or susceptibility to physical or magical damage. This explains why an opponent might wither under an arcane barrage yet stand tall in the face of whirling blades and whistling arrows.

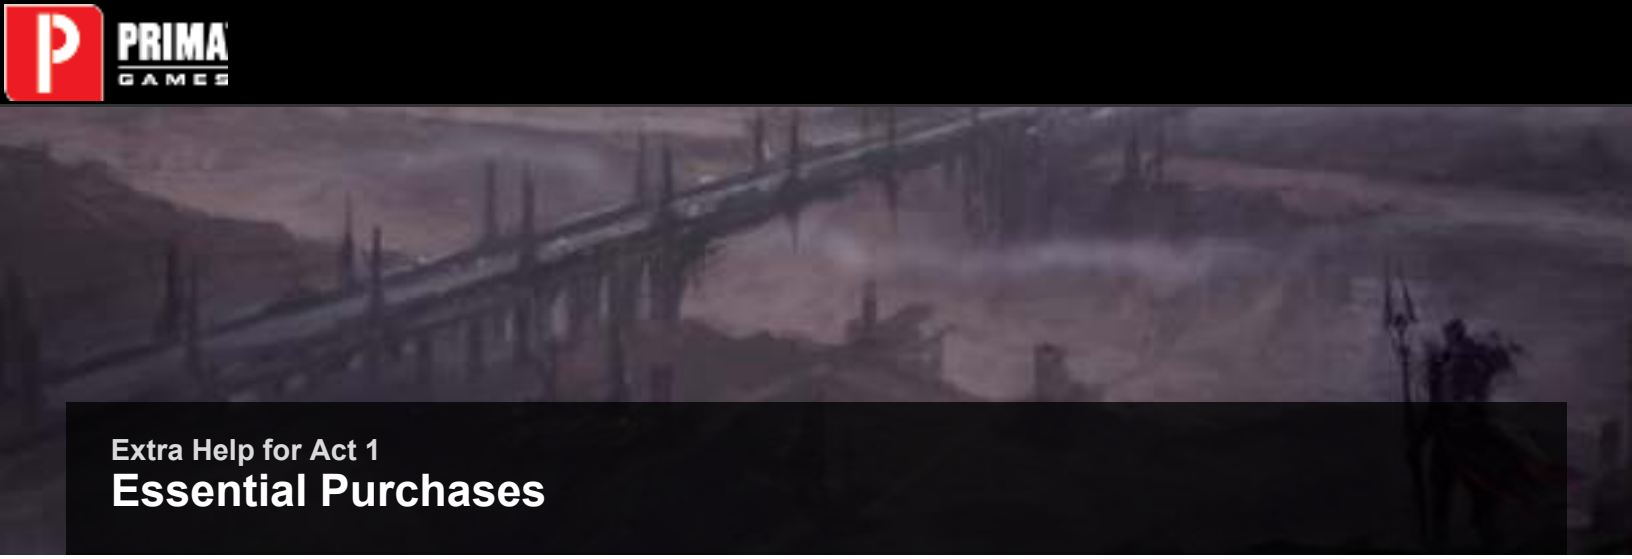
- There are five distinct “elements” in Dragon Age II: Fire, Cold, Electricity, Spirit, Nature

- Enemies can possess a resistance to elements graded on a scale of one (light resistance) to five (immunity) or a two-level susceptibility: vulnerable and highly vulnerable. If an enemy has neither, elemental attacks will cause standard damage.

- The most obvious way to inflict elemental damage is through spells, but weapon attacks can also be imbued with the five elements. Staves almost always cause one specific type of elemental damage, though this is less common in other weapons (which tend to inflict purely physical harm).

Let’s use a very simple example: the Rage Demon. As its body is a mass of flame, you might (correctly) assume that it possesses some degree of resistance to fire but continue to use such attacks regardless of that fact. However, it actually has a blanket immunity to fire attacks: you might as well be proffering pleasantries. Cold, by obvious contrast, is profoundly effective.

In difficult battles, pausing the action and directing all party members manually – even in short bursts – enables you to exploit weaknesses such as these and minimize wasteful assaults. Furthermore, if a party member is wielding a weapon that inflicts elemental damage, it makes sense to carry at least one backup to avoid situations where their default attack is mitigated by a resistance. On higher difficulty levels, you might even consider having a range of different elemental weapons (particularly staves) to exploit vulnerabilities in any given situation.



Extra Help for Act 1

Essential Purchases

There are certain valuable items that can only be purchased during Act 1. Refer to the following table for details on where they can be found.

Merchant	Location	Item(s)
Hubert's Fine Goods	Hightown Market	Tome of Technique
Robes by Jean Luc	Hightown Market	Backpack
Armor Merchant	Lowtown	Underpadding – Guardsman Pattern (Aveline armor upgrade)
Apparel Shop	Lowtown Bazaar	Inscribed Leather Harness (Varric armor upgrade), Backpack

Extra Help for Act 1

Miscellany

- In addition to scouring areas for interesting loot, you should always keep an eye open for crafting resources. Collecting these will enable you to create runes, potions, bombs and poisons – all of which can make your party stronger in battle. You also receive 200 XP per resource found. Consult the Maps chapter to learn where ingredients can be found.

- All locked chests in Act 1 are of Standard grade at maximum, which requires 20 in Cunning to unlock. If you have a rogue as a permanent fixture in your party, there's profit to be had by boosting this attribute at a fairly early stage. Complex chests that require 30 Cunning appear from the start of Act 2, so you may also wish to begin investing attribute points in anticipation of this.

- In the Xbox 360 and PS3 versions of Dragon Age II, there is a useful trick that you can employ to detect points of interactivity (especially sources of loot) in your immediate vicinity. Activate the Radial Menu and use the Camera stick to scour the environment. If there's anything of note to investigate within range, a text description will appear above it (Fig. 4). Note that this only works with points of interactivity on your current elevation. For the PC version, press the TAB key to achieve the same result.

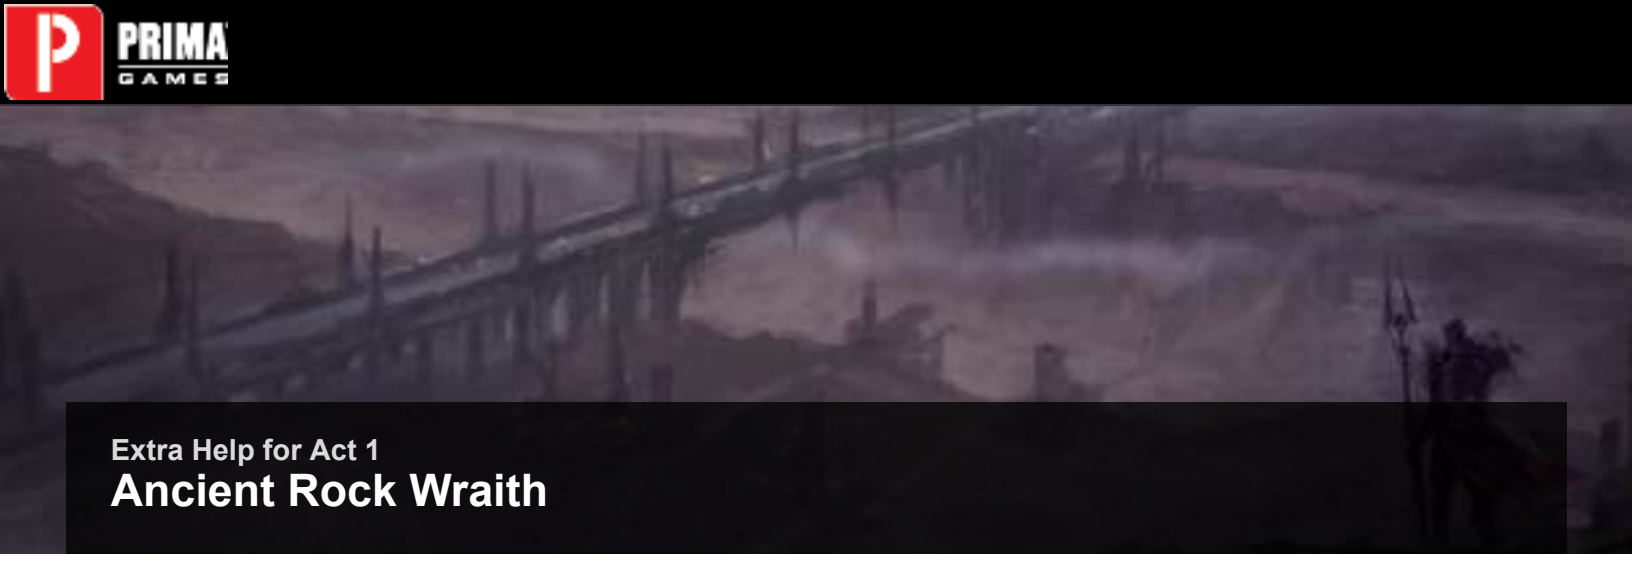
Extra Help for Act 1

Achievements & Trophies

- If you would like to unlock the “Exorcist” Achievement/Trophy, you must spare Idunna when you meet her in The Blooming Rose during the Enemies Among Us quest.

- Those who wish to unlock “Supplier” (find all crafting resources), “Master Craftsman” (create all items within a specific crafting category) and “I Got Your Back” (upgrade a companion’s armor to its maximum level) should ensure that they have collected or purchased all relevant items before they leave for the Deep Roads. Consult the Inventory chapter for further details.

- Collect the “History of the Chantry: Chapter 1” from the Chantry before you complete the Act. The related accomplishment (Chantry Historian) is unlocked when you find the remaining three chapters later in the game.



Extra Help for Act 1

Ancient Rock Wraith

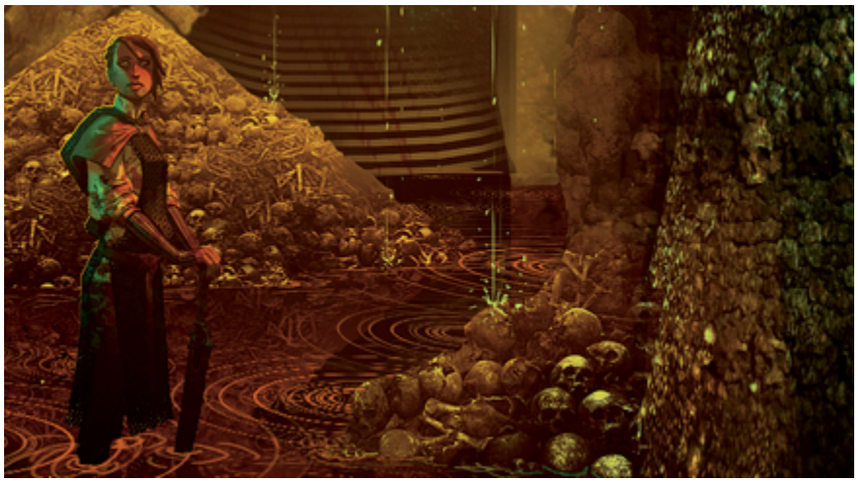
- This opponent possesses a vast array of resistances and immunities, and its health bar will take a long time to whittle away.

- The Ancient Rock Wraith will regularly teleport around the battleground. Pay attention to the position of your weaker cohorts when this occurs, and be ready to move them manually if required.

- Whenever your opponent hovers in the center of the area, seek immediate refuge behind one of the pillars to avoid the ensuing attack. Your party members will dutifully follow. Once the spectacular assault ends, the Ancient Rock Wraith is temporarily disabled and becomes far more susceptible to your attacks, but he is joined by a group of Profane. Micromanage your party for the duration of these moments, dedicating three to pummeling the Rock Wraith, while a fourth attends to the Profane.

Extra help for Act 2

Companion relationships



As Act 2 is a fairly critical point in Hawke's relationship with certain companions, this seems a good time to steer you in the direction of related advice elsewhere in the guide.

- The most reliable way to develop friendships and rivalries is to make certain key dialogue choices during companion quests. Some of these can change an individual's opinion of Hawke quite spectacularly, with follow-up conversations offering further opportunities for friendship or rivalry gains.

- You can find or purchase gifts for companions during the events of this Act. These offer friendship or rivalry increases – and, of course, another welcome opportunity to interact with your travelling partners.

- Advancing a friendship or rivalry beyond 50% completion (in addition to other conditions – such as completing a companion quest) can trigger a special "mid-stage relationship" dialogue. A Journal entry will appear when these have been unlocked.

- Without wanting to be specific, you will definitely benefit from nurturing a healthy friendship or rivalry with Isabela during Act 2.

Extra help for Act 2

Essential Purchases

For those seeking to invest riches accumulated during Act 1, Act 2 offers a completely new set of tempting merchant inventories. Before you begin considering the merits of expensive weapons, armor and accessories, though, we strongly advise that you make the following purchases beforehand. Once again, these valuable upgrades are only available until you begin Demands of the Qun, the closing quest of this Act.

Merchant	Location	Item(s)
Trinkets Emporium	Lowtown	Greater Tome of the Mortal Vessel, Signet Ring (a gift for Varric)
Apparel Shop	Lowtown	Rigid Boning (companion armor upgrade for Isabela)
Lirene's Fereldan Imports	Lowtown	Armor Struts (companion armor upgrade for Anders)
Armor Shop	Lowtown	Impact Plating – Guardsman Pattern (companion armor upgrade for Aveline)
Olaf's Armory	Hightown	Reinforced Bracers (companion armor upgrade for Sebastian)
Robes by Jean Luc	Hightown	Supportive Corselet, Samite Lining and Tevinter Spirit Symbol (companion armor upgrades for Isabela, Merrill and Fenris)
Armor Shop	Gallows Courtyard	Enhanced Articulation (companion armor upgrade for Sebastian)
Mage Goods	Gallows Courtyard	Backpack, Lyrium Weave (companion armor upgrade for Anders)
Shady Merchandise	Docks	Coat Lining with Concealed Pockets, Lyrium Scales (companion armor upgrades for Varric and Fenris)
Ilen's Crafts	Sundermount	Tome of Technique, Carved Ironwood Buttons (companion armor upgrade for Merrill)

Extra help for Act 2

Miscellany

- Hawke Estate fulfils the same function as Gamlen's House in Act 1. The Writing Desk and Storage chest are located here, but you can now also apply Runes to weapons and armor via the Enchantment Apparatus.

- On a related note, Act 2 marks the point at which crafting can offer distinct advantages. As you find more resources and recipes, employing new potions, bombs, poisons and runes can give your party a greater edge in combat encounters. There are many benefits to be had from dabbling in this system. For example, restorative brews acquired through crafting are treated as entirely separate to store-bought potions, and therefore have their own Cooldown timers. You can find more in-depth analysis on crafting on page 213 of the Inventory chapter.

- Chests and traps are upgraded for Act 2, with "complex" varieties (requiring that your rogue have minimum 30 Cunning) appearing regularly from the start, and a handful with top-tier "master" locks. On a completionist playthrough, you may wish to invest points in this Attribute category throughout this Act and seek out items that offer a bonus to lockpicking.

Extra help for Act 2

Optional Activites

Act 2 is shorter than Act 1 in terms of mandatory main plot quests, but offers a rich wealth of other activities. These include some fairly sizable (and commensurately rewarding) companion and secondary quests. There are also plenty of short yet satisfying side quests, many of which act as follow-ups to the events of the first Act.

As with Act 1, the following table details optional quests that we would deem as being essential to a good Act 2 playthrough. The companion quests are particularly important: failing to complete these can have some major repercussions, and cause you to miss out on future opportunities.

Quest	Page	Notes
Repentance*	81	Unlocks Sebastian as a companion.
The Long Road	82	This results in many far-reaching effects for Aveline. Take Isabela along for extra conflict and interesting dialogue.
Dissent	82	A relatively short but decisive step in the development of Anders. Those seeking to enjoy everything related to the core Dragon Age II narrative will find that this contributes a great deal.
Mirror Image	83	Merrill's companion quest is a great source of loot. It's also an essential venture for Achievement and Trophy hunters: it unlocks "That Thing Has Legs".
Family Matter	84	This develops Varric's personal story. It's worth it just for the fun that BioWare's writers have with the in medias res narrative technique: we defy you not to snigger.
A Bitter Pill	85	Failure to complete this means that you can't play Fenris's companion quest in Act 3.
Night Terrors	76	In addition to more customary rewards, this distinctive quest offers opportunities to earn bonus attribute points or a free Talent.
Herbalist's Tasks	78	There are three further ingredients to obtain for Solivitus; complete this, and a special reward awaits you in Act 3.
Raiders on the Cliffs	79	A short, action-oriented quest based in the Wounded Coast area. Take Aveline along for additional drama in the opening cutscene.
Inside Job	79	Following on from The Bone Pit, this profitable secondary quest unlocks three separate smaller quests on completion.
Forbidden Knowledge	88	If you spared Idunna during the events of Enemies Among Us, this is your reward. Though listed as a side quest, it actually eclipses many main plot missions in terms of size, difficulty and potential loot.
Hometown Breed, The Lowdown & Ladies' Lights Out	91	There are three more gangs to clear from the streets of Hightown, Lowtown and the Docks.

Extra help for Act 2

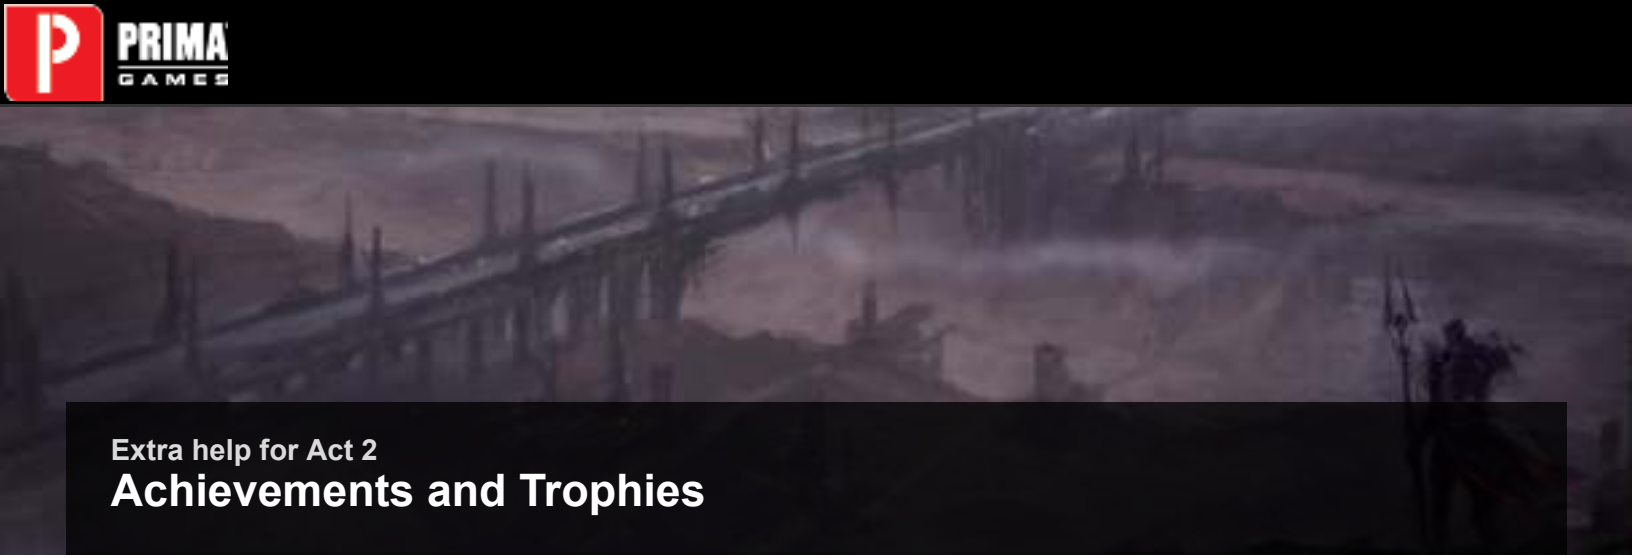
The Arishok

There are a number of different resolutions to Demands of the Qun, all dependant on your current party, your relationship with Isabela, and your previous dealings with the Arishok. These final tips will be of assistance in the most likely outcome (a fight with the Qunari leader and his warriors).

- First things first: slay the Saarebas immediately. He usually starts the battle on the upper level, but can teleport around the area at will.

- The Arishok heals his cohorts throughout, so your second objective should be to keep him incapacitated at all times. If this entails step-by-step micromanagement, so be it – left unchecked, he will cause any party member problems. His ability to stab a victim and raise them aloft on his sword makes him an effective “tank-buster”. As your favored meat shield will lose the attention of all enemies that surround them during this process, this can lead to disastrous consequences for your weaker mages. Use any and every ability at your disposal to becalm his fury, no matter how briefly they may hold him.

- Try to keep your party members in one area (preferably elevated) and not far from your tank. You will lose control of this confrontation if you have companions fighting on both the upper and lower levels of this battleground.

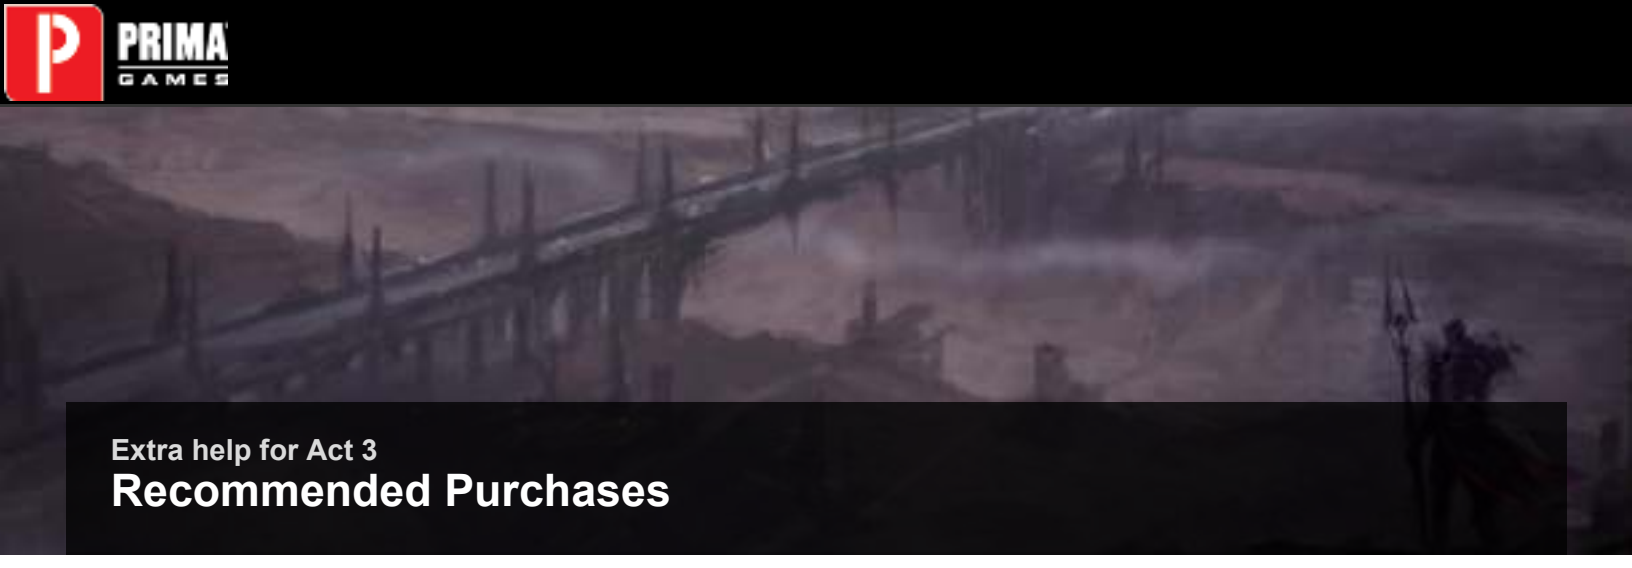


Extra help for Act 2

Achievements and Trophies

- To unlock the Chantry Historian Achievement/Trophy, collect the History of the Chantry: Chapter 2 from the Chantry at any time during Act 2, and pick up Chapter 3 from the same location during the Following the Qun quest. The final installment is found in Act 3. You should also purchase all companion armor upgrades to work towards the unlocking of "I Got Your Back".

- If you would like to unlock the "Weapon Master" accomplishment, now would be a good time to plan ahead. Our suggestion would be to max out a weapon-specific talent tree (Weapon and Shield, Two-Handed, Dual Weapon or Archery) for one of your less favored companions.



Extra help for Act 3

Recommended Purchases

Unlike previous Acts, there are no companion armor upgrades or gifts to purchase. There is, however, one final Backpack that you can pick up from Robes by Jean Luc in Hightown, while the nearby Korval's Blades sells an Arcane Tome of the Mortal Vessel.

If you have plenty of sovereigns to spare, the start of Act 3 is an opportune time to invest in some remarkable items that appear in the updated merchant inventories. Some items, especially those sold by the less accessible vendors, have incredible attributes… but with a truly awe-inspiring price tag to match. Study the Inventory chapter to find these "aspirational" purchases or, for those on a budget, affordable equipment with bargain buffs. You can also find a selection of role-specific equipment suggestions in the Character Roles section of the Strategy & Analysis chapter.

Extra help for Act 3

Optional Activities

Dragon Age II's final Act may only feature three mandatory main plot quests, but there are still many other adventures to enjoy before you drive purposefully towards its dramatic conclusion.

Quest	Notes
Alone, Justice, Haunted, Favor and Fault, A New Path, No Rest for the Wicked, Faith	A must for those who have dedicated time to similar ventures so far. Not only do most of them offer notable rewards, they are also essential if you wish to reach the final stage in each relationship, particularly romances.
Mine Massacre	This offers an acid test of your party's survival prospects. The loot is spectacular, too.
A Murder of Crows	Featuring a cameo from a familiar face, this quest is a must for Dragon Age: Origins players.
Gamlen's Greatest Treasure	If you have been wondering what might become of Hawke's uncle, this is your chance to determine his future.
The Awiergan Scrolls: Pride Unbound	This side quest pits Hawke and his cohorts against an enormously powerful opponent at its conclusion.
Reining it In, Red Run Streets and Kind of Want	If you have been diligently clearing the streets of Kirkwall in each Act, the last three gangs await – as does your final prize.

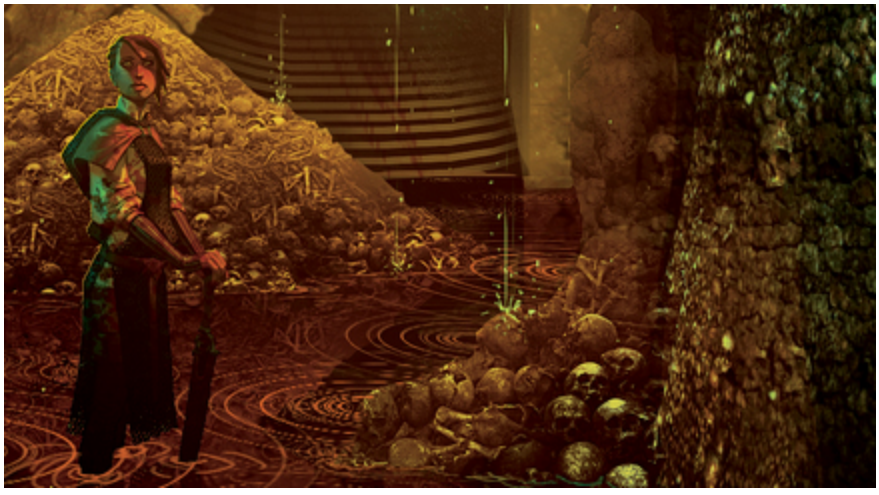
Extra help for Act 3

Achievements & Trophies

If you have been diligently collecting all Achievements and Trophies to date, we would suggest that you create a new save file at the start of Act 3 and a second just before you begin The Last Straw. Keep these safe and you'll be able to return to complete any that remain (including optional feats linked to siding with the templars) at your leisure.

Extra help for Act 3

Orsino



There are three stages to this fight. In the first, Orsino is weak and highly susceptible to spells with incapacitating side effects (such as Winter's Grasp and Petrify).

Once you pass a certain damage threshold, the "head" of the abomination will leave the body and attack as a separate entity. You will also face a certain number of undead opponents. Try to gather these together and lay down AoE attacks to kill them swiftly, but don't lose sight of your main target.

In the final stage, Orsino is restored to his full form – albeit briefly. One of his first actions is to rip off his own arm, then use it as a crude but devastating cudgel. He also regularly employs a Blood Drain attack, which freezes his victims in place as the creature feasts on their essence. Your opponent also has greater resistance to spells that impede his mobility during this concluding part of the battle, though that doesn't mean that you shouldn't still employ them for the brief respite they could offer. Preventative maintenance is vital in this final slog. Try to heal early and ensure that party members' mana and stamina gauges are topped up with tinctures before they are exhausted.

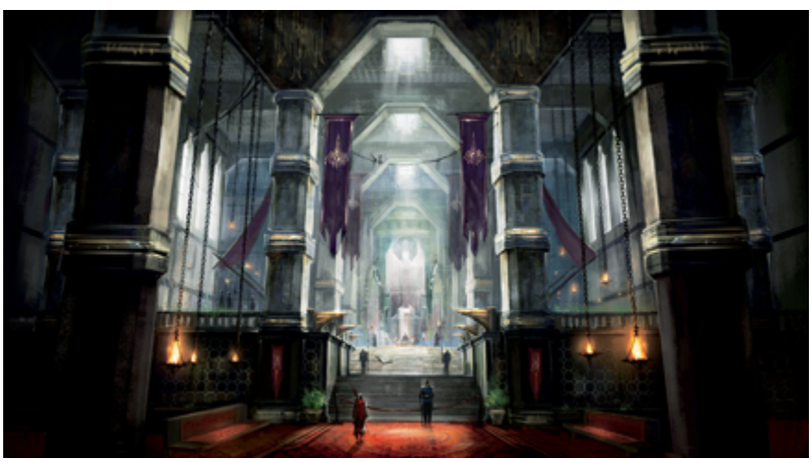
Final Battle



- Fighting Meredith is much easier if you focus on survival first. With non-party companions and other allies offering assistance, your priority should be to keep health, mana and stamina gauges topped up at all times. If Meredith takes a particular interest in a weaker mage or rogue, try using manual control to move them out of her path.

- Once again, this is a multi-stage battle. After you deplete her health gauge to a set level, Meredith will bring a Gate Guardian to life. The Gate Guardian employs a nasty spinning attack that hits all opponents within a circular radius, though its movement speed is ponderous. To give your party a little respite, try pulling all melee and ranged fighters back to a safe distance, order everyone to hold position, then wear down its health gauge from range.

- After the subsequent bout with Meredith, she will summon a second Gate Guardian; this one is slightly more resilient than the first. Complicating matters greatly, you will face the smaller and weaker Slave Statues. These are also slow-moving (occasional charges notwithstanding), so the major challenge here is exercising effective crowd control.

- In the penultimate part of the battle, Meredith rejoins the fray while the seemingly never-ending Slave Statues continue their assault. Use your party's AoE attacks to keep these under control. Ensure that your weaker ranged fighters maintain a safe distance from the main fracas as the knight-commander now employs a new Energy Burst attack.

- Diminished yet still unbowed, Meredith's next trick is to reanimate both Gate Guardians in a new form. These scuttling monstrosities use short-range flame attacks and fireballs with a homing capacity. This is a dangerous point in the fight, as both may target mages who have managed to stay out of harm's way so far. Focus your attention on one at a time and the immediate peril should subside when the first falls.

- With this last gambit successfully dismissed, just wear down the final slivers of Meredith's health gauge. With each successive monologue, her demise grows ever closer.

Achievements and Trophies

Dragon Age II has a sizable, wide-ranging selection of Achievements and Trophies, many of which are designed to reward players who invest time and effort into truly mastering the game – and especially those who embark on at least one additional playthrough.

Story Milestones

These accomplishments are all unlocked by completing main plot quests and cannot be missed.

Icon	Name		Trophy	Unlock Conditions
	Tale Within a Tale	5	Bronze	Defeat the Ogre during the opening section of the Prologue.
	Immigrant	5	Bronze	Complete the Prologue.
	Full House	10	Bronze	Recruit four companions. This will unlock once you complete the Tranquility or Long Way Home quests during Act 1.
	Stone Cold	5	Bronze	Defeat the Rock Wraith during the Deep Roads Expedition in Act 1.
	Deliver of the Deep	10	Bronze	Leave the Deep Roads area during the final quest of Act 1.
	Friends in High Places	15	Bronze	Unlocked late in Act 2 when you meet the final member of Kirkwall's ruling elite.
	Conqueror	15	Bronze	Defeat Meredith at the end of Act 3.
	Champion of Kirkwall	20	Silver	Complete Dragon Age II; the narrative conclusion isn't important.

Optional Story Accomplishments

This selection of Achievements and Trophies can only be obtained by completing certain optional quests or by making specific decisions at critical points in the main storyline.

Icon	Name		Trophy	Unlock Conditions
	Nefarious	10	Bronze	Choose to work for Athenril at the conclusion of the Prologue.
	Mercenary	10	Bronze	Choose to work for Meeran at the conclusion of the Prologue.
	Birthright	15	Bronze	Complete the Birthright companion quest. This must be completed before you set off for the Deep Roads during Act 1.
	Financier	10	Bronze	Pay Bartrand to join the Deep Roads expedition. This does not unlock if you accept a loan from Dougal.
	That Thing Has Legs	25	Bronze	Kill a Varterral. You can encounter this creature during the Mirror Image companion quest during Act 2 (see page 63).
	A Worthy Rival	25	Silver	Earn the respect of the Arishok before the conclusion of the Demands of the Qun main plot quest in Act 2 (see page 72).
	King of the Hill	10	Bronze	During the Demands of the Qun quest (see page 75), you must engineer an outcome where Hawke defeats the Arishok in open combat (either in a duel, or alongside his fellow warriors). This unlocks during the Final Confrontation, the conclusion whereby Isabela is taken back to Par Vollen as a prisoner.
	Exorcist	25	Bronze	Find and kill the undying Xebenkeck. This enemy is encountered during the Forbidden Knowledge quest in Act 2 (see page 88).
	Spelunker	25	Bronze	Visit any 10 caves in and around Kirkwall while completing quests. If you finish most secondary and companion quests, you should unlock this during Act 2.
	Arcane Defender	25	Silver	Side with mages in five separate quests from the following list: Wayward Son, Act of Mercy, Enemies Among Us, Night Terrors, Best Served Cold, On the Loose and Showdown.
	Mage Hunter	25	Silver	Support the templars in five individual quests – consult the list above for details. Naturally, it is only possible to unlock Mage Hunter or Arcane Defender during a single playthrough.
	Dragon Slayer	25	Silver	Complete the Mine Massacre secondary quest in Act 3 (see page 97).
	Demon Slayer	25	Silver	Kill the ancient demon Hybris after completing steps in a very special quest: see page 105.
	Crowning Achievement	25	Silver	Side with the templars in the climax of Act 3. See page 94 for details.
	Epic	50	Gold	Complete Dragon Age II twice, or finish a single playthrough where you import a Dragon Age: Origins save during the character creation process.
	Mass Exodus	25	Bronze	Complete the Prologue with all three classes on separate playthroughs. You do not need to finish the entire game, just the opening section up to and including the transition to Act 1.

Gameplay Milestones

Players will obtain these minor gameplay accomplishments during the course of a standard playthrough.

Icon	Name		Trophy	Unlock Conditions
	Talented	5	Bronze	Select a talent upgrade while leveling up.
	Darkness Falls	5	Bronze	On the World Map screen, toggle the Kirkwall map display from day to night.
	Explorer	5	Bronze	Leave Kirkwall to visit a location in the Free Marches for the first time.
	Craftsman	5	Bronze	Acquire your first crafting recipe. Effectively impossible to miss as you'll pick one up early in Act 1.
	Specialized	25	Bronze	Acquire two specializations for Hawke. These are awarded at levels 7 and 14, so you should unlock this during Act 3 at the latest.
	Dedicated	15	Bronze	Reach level 10. Even on a sprint through main plot quests only, ignoring all optional asides, you should unlock this during Act 2.

Special Accomplishments

These Achievements and Trophies all reward very specific feats and, as such, require at least a little effort to obtain.

Icon	Name		Trophy	Unlock Conditions
	Legendary	50	Silver	Reach level 20. Players taking a fairly comprehensive path through the story and all optional quests should unlock this during Act 3.
	A Friend in Need	5	Bronze	Collect or purchase an armor upgrade for a companion. The first one that you can acquire for free is found at the end of the Birthright quest.
	Enchanter	5	Bronze	Use a rune on a piece of equipment with an available rune slot.
	Master Craftsman	25	Silver	Find all available recipes for one of the three crafting "disciplines" (runes, potions or poisons and bombs), then create every item within that category.
	I Got Your Back	25	Bronze	Upgrade a single companion's armor to its maximum level.
	Weapon Master	25	Bronze	Unlock all abilities and upgrades in a single weapon-specific talent tree: Weapon and Shield, Two-Handed, Dual Weapon or Archery.
	Tag Team	5	Bronze	Perform a cross-class combo by switching between party members.
	Unstoppable	50	Silver	Complete an entire Act without a party member being knocked out. Possible (though tricky) on Normal difficulty level, we'd suggest that players obtain this by completing the shorter Act 3 on Casual.
	Mogul	25	Bronze	Accumulate a total of 100 sovereigns in your purse. If you finish most secondary quests, this should unlock naturally. It is easily accomplished if you complete the majority of quests in Act 1 and refrain from paying Bartrand until the very last minute.
	Gift Giver	5	Bronze	Give a gift to a companion.
	Flirtatious	5	Bronze	Flirt with a companion to initiate a romance.
	Romantic	25	Bronze	See a romance with a companion through to its conclusion.
	Friend	25	Bronze	Earn the friendship of a companion.
	Rival	25	Bronze	Establish a rivalry with a companion.
	Great Minds Think Alike	50	Silver	Have four companions in a state of simultaneous friendship or four active rivalries. This requires a little forward planning and management.
	Treasure Hunter	25	Silver	Open 50 containers.
	Knowledgeable	25	Bronze	Unlock 100 codex entries. You should receive this during Act 1 on a completionist-grade playthrough.
	Supplier	25	Silver	Find all possible crafting ingredients during your travels.
	Archeologist	50	Silver	There are four "special" Codex collectibles per Act signed by the "Band of Three". Collect three out of four of these in each Act to unlock this: • Act 1: Hidden Pit, The Gallows, Viscount's Keep, Lowtown (Night). • Act 2: Chantry, Darktown, Gallows Dungeon (during the Dissent quest), Docks (Qunari Compound). • Act 3: These are all found during quests: two during Justice, one during Gamlen's Greatest Treasure, and the final one at the Docks during the Last Straw.
	Chantry Historian	25	Silver	Collect all four chapters of "The History of the Chantry" by Brother Gamilus. Three of these are found in the Chantry during a daylight visit, one per Act. Chapter 3, however, can only be collected during the Following the Qun quest.
	The Ultimate Reward (PS3 only)	-	Platinum	Unlock all the other Trophies.

The Exiled Prince

You must purchase and install The Exiled Prince (see dragonage.com/da2/addons for details) to access storyline elements related to these accomplishments.

Icon	Name		Trophy	Unlock Conditions
	Retribution	25	Bronze	Complete the Duty companion quest in Act 1 or 2.
	Avenged	25	Bronze	Complete the Repentance companion quest in Act 2.
	Cloak and Dagger	25	Bronze	Complete the Faith companion quest in Act 3.
	Memento	25	Bronze	Find the Starktraven Longbow during the Repentance quest and present it to the prince (see page 81).
	Loyalty of the Prince	30	Bronze	Establish complete friendship or rivalry with Sebastian.

The Continent of Thedas

Orlais

Ambitious and wealthy, Orlais is the most powerful single human nation in Thedas. Under its current ruler, Empress Celene I, Orlais has become a land of intrigue, where the nobles spend more time plotting against each other than governing their lands. The Empress herself is known to maintain a secret court shrouded in the edges of the shadows.

Many Orlesian nobles belong to the Inquisition's Game, the Chantry's term for the morbid training of the Orlesian in the ways of deception, manipulation, and subterfuge. Those who excel at the Game are known as Masters of the Game. The Chantry has no love for the Game and regards it as a sinful practice. The practice is common in Orlais, and nearly every Orlesian noble has at least a passing knowledge of the Game.

The eastern region of the Imperial Highway is known for its high nobles' often opulent tastes when it comes to fashion and decoration. Many of the nobles in the region are known for their extravagant displays of wealth, and the region is also known for its wealthy merchants. There are also numerous vineyards in the area, which are known for producing fine wines.

The eastern city of Montsimmard, which resides on the southern bank of the Imperial River, is the seat of power for the Montsimmard family. The Montsimmards are known for their extravagant displays of wealth, and the city is known for its wealthy merchants. There are also numerous vineyards in the area, which are known for producing fine wines.

Tevinter Imperium

Formerly an empire that dominated the entirety of Thedas, all that survives of Tevinter is its decadent, centralized, ancient civilization in the north. The Magisters, once the pride of the entire continent, no governed as powerful mages hungry for power and influence.

Tevinter is the only remaining nation that practices slavery openly and without shame. Slaves are considered property, and are required to be some of the basest chores, including working in the fields and serving as sex slaves. Slaves are also frequently used as test subjects for magical experiments, and many have extraordinary sometimes' and are sold to their duty to becoming a power on the black market.

Tevinter borders the Orlesian Empire to the west, with whom it continues to have a very tense relationship. The Tevinter Imperium is also known to have a strained relationship with the Qunari, who have been known to launch attacks on Tevinter ships and coastal settlements.

Tevinter cities are considered essential to the trade. Tevinter ships transport the Nevarran wine throughout a dozen Orlesian ports, and Tevinter merchants are known for their extravagant displays of wealth. The Tevinter Imperium is also known for its wealthy merchants and numerous vineyards.

Antiva

The land of the supernal nobles. What remains from its 600 decent by exchange Empress Ascalon. Driven above were Tevinter's Imperium, Antiva is a land of wealth and luxury. The Chantry and the Templars

The Chantry is the church of the dominant religion in Thedas. Predominantly human in its following, it was established by those followers of the prophet Andraste who refused to abandon their faith after her death. Andrastians worship the Maker, the creator of all things, in the hope that they can one day be forgiven. The primary text of the religion is the Chant of Light, a collection of prayers and parables that spring from the prophet's teachings.

The first person converted to the cause was supposedly Hessarian, the archon who ordered Andraste's execution. The Chant tells that Hessarian felt such remorse as he watched Andraste burn that he ran her through with his sword to save her from a slow and painful death. The sword thus became an emblem of mercy in Chantry symbolism, and Hessarian allowed worship of the Maker to flourish in his own search for redemption. But it was emperor Kordilius Drakon I of Orlais who formalized the cult into a religion and created the first Chantry.

The central belief of the Chantry is that mankind has sinned against the Maker, namely through the worship of Old Gods; through the practice of forbidden magic; and the final transgression of the magisters, to trespass in heaven itself, imagining they could usurp Him from his Golden City. Since then, he has forsaken us and left us to face our punishment in the form of the darkspawn. But if the Chant of Light should ring out from the four corners of the world, the Maker will hear and return to restore order.

That act of redemption has been interpreted evangelically as a need to preach, to proselytize, to carry the message and convert followers – by force, when all else fails. And so the Chantry established their military arm – the Order of the Templars – to enforce the prohibitions on apostasy and heretical crimes. The templars have adopted the flaming sword as their insignia.

All Chantry priestesses are female, on the basis that Andraste was a woman. Men can be brothers, serving as academics and initiates, but it is a junior position and non-ordained. Those who have received religious and martial instruction while being raised in the Chantry may become templars. At the head of the Chantry is the Divine, who leads from her seat in the Grand Cathedral of Val Royeaux. Below her are the grand clerics, some of whom administer the chantries of major cities.

The Chantry permeates human society in every nation: at least one temple can be found in every village. It delivers practical services to the community, caring for the sick and collecting alms for the poor. The Chantry provides hospitality to travelers and a public network of communications. Should an illiterate commoner need to send word to another town, the Chantry's educated priests write and send the letter for him.

With so much influence over the people, the Chantry can also exert considerable political pressure on the ruling classes in many areas of concern. In extraordinary times, and in deference to Andraste, the Divine may also be moved to declare an Exalted March. These religious crusades have mobilized armies of thousands to destroy the heretical enemies of the Maker, the most recent being led against the Qunari.

The Circle of Magi

The Chantry does not forbid magic completely. The commandment of the Maker states that magic should serve man rather than rule him. The Circle of Magi was thus created as a way of legitimately and safely using magic. It keeps close tabs on those with magical ability. Affinity for magic usually surfaces by adolescence, and those found to have significant magical ability are required to join the nearest Circle of Magi and act under its supervision. To practice magic and not join a Circle is a capital offense, and mages who do so are hunted as apostates. Mages practicing the forbidden arts such as blood magic, by contrast, are labeled maleficarum, and are hunted mercilessly.

The mages of today's Circle of Magi do their best to avoid the appearance of corruption, fearing a return to the days of persecution and the loss of some rather fragile rights. Templars are ostensibly present by the invitation of the Circle; though in truth they are stationed as watchdogs in every tower, conducting investigations at the slightest whiff of dangerous magic use. The Circle suffers this indignity as a necessity.

A first enchanter, who oversees the numerous mages and their apprentices, heads each Circle. He or she assumes this position for life and retains the right to choose his successor, taking into consideration the "strong suggestions" of the templars, which, until recent years, were rarely contravened. When required, the first enchanters will congregate in the city of Cumberland, at their college, to elect a grand enchanter. This grand enchanter is the Circle of Magi's direct representative to the Chantry who also attends the Grand Cathedral in Val Royeaux and acts as an advisor to the Divine and as an observer.

The Tranquil

Apprentices in the Circle of Magi must pass the secretive trial of the Harrowing to prove their resistance to demonic possession. Conducted in co-operation with the templars, who keep an executioner on hand, the test exposes those who are too great a risk to be allowed to live. But if there is already doubt about an apprentice's chances then, alternatively, they may be put forward for the Rite of Tranquility, or even request it themselves.

The Rite severs the apprentice's connection to the Fade, thereby eliminating their potential to attract demons across the Veil. The more contentious side-effect is that it removes all capacity for both magic and emotion. No longer distracted by dreams or desires, or feelings of any kind, the coldly detached Tranquil demonstrate a superior faculty of concentration. They commonly put this to use in the painstaking and fastidious creation of magical items, and the Circle's Formari branch of enchanters is exclusively Tranquil.

Grey Wardens

A renowned group of fearless warriors, mages, and rangers, the Grey Wardens dedicate themselves to the eradication of the darkspawn. They are said to sense the presence of the horde and have greater knowledge of the tactics required to fight them. Theirs are the only records that contain details of forays into the underground caverns, telling of the broodmothers and detailing the archdemons that have risen so far, to be destroyed at the Grey Wardens' hands. The nations of humanity once gladly tithed to the Grey Wardens and sent them not only food and equipment, but also a steady stream of new recruits.

In better days, the fabled fortress of Weisshaupt once housed thousands of men and a fleet of griffons ready for battle. However, the organization has fallen into obscurity for many. Although they are still respected and sometimes even feared for their martial prowess, they are still largely thought irrelevant in lands where the darkspawn have not appeared for centuries. Only in the Anderfels, the victim of continual invasions, do the Grey Wardens retain some semblance of the influence they once had. Here the Order was formed by ex-soldiers of the Imperium, battle-hardened veterans who renounced their oaths of fealty and swore instead to reclaim the land from the darkspawn curse.

Candidates for the Grey Wardens are usually selected for a specific talent, perhaps their superior will, stamina, or combat prowess (whether physical or magical). If necessary, a Warden Commander can invoke powers of conscription to recruit from other organizations. But there is also mercy shown to those with the Blight disease, as the Wardens share a terrible secret.

New candidates are compelled to undergo the Joining, an initiation ritual that involves drinking a carefully prepared mixture containing darkspawn blood. Some are killed instantly. But not all, and those that survive receive the darkspawn corruption. They develop a deep connection with the darkspawn, sensing their presence and hearing the archdemon when it calls out to the horde. They develop immunity to the Blight disease, for which there is no other cure. They become Grey Wardens, carrying a darkness within their light. And they will likely die within thirty years as the poison claims them. As such, they often spend their last days foraging into the Deep Roads to take as many of the darkspawn down with them, an honorable fate that earns them great respect among the dwarves.

The forfeiture does not end there. An archdemon cannot be killed conventionally because its spirit simply passes to the nearest soulless darkspawn to be reborn whenever its body is destroyed. But the Grey Warden, a tainted being, may also draw the archdemon's spirit. The Warden who delivers the deathblow thus tricks the creature's soul into their own body – ending the Blight, but with fatal results for both.

The motto of the Grey Wardens? In war, victory. In peace, vigilance. In death, sacrifice.

The Crows

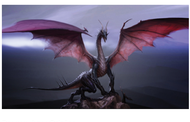
When a love rival vanishes or a young man drops dead in the prime of life, it is normally regarded a mystery. But not in Antiva, where fingers will always point to the House of Crows. As the most feared guild of assassins, spies and thieves ever to offer their services to the rich and powerful, the Crows thrive as profitably on their infamy as on the cruel efficiency of the dark agents they train from youth.

Hence, no treasure in Antiva is guarded so fiercely as that of the Crows' reputation. Their code of honor, if it does not sully the word, demands that contracts are met and agreements are kept. Failure to eliminate a mark means the life of the operative is also forfeit – though one has been rumored to elude his unhappy Guildmasters through skill or fate.

The Felicisima Armada

Operating out of the coastal city of Llomerryn, the pirate captains of the Rialto Bay are as numerous as the tales told of them – if not always as tall. They were commonly known as the Raiders of the Waking Sea, making brazen incursions along the coastal trade routes all the way down to Orlais. But when the Qunari invasion threatened the future of their lucrative merchant bounties, the Raiders agreed to an unusual contract. Granted privateer status under a single flag, the Felicisima Armada gathered together the largest fleet of scoundrels, smugglers and corsairs the world has ever seen. Having outwitted and outmaneuvered the authorities for years, the Raiders turned their dirty tricks on the fearsome Qunari dreadnaughts and even launched assaults on Par Vollen. Today's merchants must now regret that the Armada remains loosely intact, its leaders having seen the profit of working together.

Dragon Age: Origins



Dragon Age: Origins

You do not need to have played any previous Dragon Age games to understand and enjoy Dragon Age II and its story. Although they are set in the same richly developed universe, each episode stands alone. But if you are intrigued by the setting, it's worth noting that there is a continuity of incidents and characters. Some of the same events are covered from different perspectives. The games are broadly contemporaneous, taking place during and after the Fifth Blight, though Dragon Age II covers ten years rather than the two to three years of Origins and its Awakening expansion.

Origins opens in Year 30 of the Dragon Age, when Ferelden was threatened by the Fifth Blight. Our protagonist, later known as the Hero of Ferelden, was plucked from their place of birth under Right of Conscription and recruited by Duncan, a senior Grey Warden on his way to join King Cailan's forces. Reaching the historic stronghold of Ostagar, the new recruits were sent out on their first rookie mission to retrieve some old paperwork from a Warden outpost before the darkspawn advanced. Deep in the Korcari Wilds they encountered Morrigan and her mother Flemeth, an old Witch of the Wilds, who handed over the scrolls they were seeking.

On returning to Ostagar, the new recruits were put through an initiation ceremony known as The Joining. Only by drinking a preparation of the poisonous blood of the darkspawn can one become a Warden. Not all survive the test, and those that do are forever marked by the Taint.

As the darkspawn horde gathered, the Hero of Ferelden was assigned to light the beacon that would signal Teyrn Loghain's forces to launch a flanking assault. The King's regiment stood proudly before Ostagar, drawing the horde into a trap. But when the attack began, Loghain treacherously retired from battle and left Ostagar to perish. Both the King and Duncan were slain. The hero and fellow Warden Alistair were both rescued from the beacon tower by the old Witch, Flemeth.

Fearing that the world was lost, the survivors – now joined by Morrigan – resolved to invoke the invested authority of the Grey Wardens. Under the venerable law of Thedas, the scrolls of Ancient Treaties they had collected could revive age-old allegiances in days of Blight.

And so the hero's party swiftly set out to invoke the Treaties. After many quests and adventures, they enlisted the armies of Ari Eamon of Redcliffe; the clans of the Dalish Elves; the Dwarves of deep Orzammar; and even the Circle of Magi, whose members had been quarantined under the vigilant gaze of the Order of Templars. In a time of peril, the races and factions of Ferelden had always been compelled to forget their differences in confronting a common foe.

A Landsmeet was called in which the assembled forces rallied and the usurper Loghain's authority was challenged. They learned that only a Grey Warden may slay the archdemon leading the Blight – an act of sacrifice that would claim both lives. The demon's life essence would be reborn in the nearest darkspawn host, rendering it immortal, unless it could be drawn to the Warden instead – or to the Warden's unborn child if the player decided to perform a specific ritual with Morrigan.

Many endgame choices were open to the player, and it's worth noting that no one Dragon Age: Origins ending is considered the 'canon' or proper version of events by the developers.

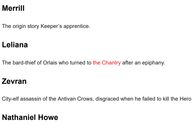
Dragon Age: Origins – Awakening

The Awakening expansion picked up the story six months after the conclusion of Origins. The player then assumed the role of a Warden-Commander, commissioned to take charge of the Grey Wardens at Vigil's Keep. Traveling from the city of Amaranthine, the Warden arrived to find the Keep had been attacked by darkspawn. With the end of the Fifth Blight, and no archdemon to control these darkspawn, such an organized assault should have been impossible.

Cleaning the tower led to the discovery of a new form of darkspawn, known as the "disciples", that were not only intelligent but capable of speech, hitherto thought impossible. With admirable regard for the empirical method, the Warden-Commander went on to establish that disciples could still bleed and die like any other darkspawn.

An encounter with the enigmatic Architect (the "father" of the disciples) revealed the existence of even stranger creatures. The player learned of the Mother – a sentient broodmother – and was quested to track it down. Only later was it revealed that the Fifth Blight was brought about by The Architect's sincere but botched experiment to create independent, free-thinking disciples.

Awakening concluded with a typically difficult choice. A darkspawn band had gathered to besiege the city of Amaranthine, while another was advancing on Vigil's Keep. Duties conflicted, the Warden-Commander was forced to choose between the two in lending support and saving lives.



Familiar Faces

Origins players may be able to spot the return of both major and minor characters while playing Dragon Age II. Although these are mostly cameos, it's a reminder that the Fifth Blight was only one chapter in the turbulent history of Thedas – and that life goes on, thanks to the Hero of Ferelden...

Isabela

Duelist captain of the pirate ship "The Siren's Call". Self-proclaimed "Queen of the eastern seas and sharpest blade in Llomerryn".

Anders

The dry-humored Grey Warden from Awakening.

Alistair

The Grey Warden and templar companion of the Hero of Ferelden.

Merrill

The origin story Keeper's apprentice.

Leliana

The bard-thief of Orlais who turned to the Chantry after an epiphany.

Zevran

City-elf assassin of the Antivan Crows, disgraced when he failed to kill the Hero of Ferelden.

Nathaniel Howe

Another companion, the rogue assassin from Awakening, currently sought by Delilah Howe.

Bodahn & Sandal Feddic

Dwarf trader and his enchanter son, first rescued from darkspawn on the Imperial Highway out of Lothering.

Knight-Captain Cullen

The templar imprisoned by Uldred in the Broken Circle quest, now enjoying a promotion.

Justice

A spirit from the Fade who has now fused with Anders, much as a spirit bound itself to Wynne.

Sketch

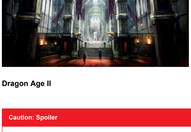
The bookish city elf from Leliana's Song (downloadable content).

Bonny Lem

A merchant spy in the service of Marjolaine.

Sophia Dryden

Warden-Commander from Warden's Keep (downloadable content) who became involved in blood magic.



Dragon Age II

Caution: Spoiler

The following overview of events in Dragon Age II reveals the challenges that lay ahead for the Champion and gives away the culmination of each Act. It should be clear that first-time players ought to avoid this section and return to our earlier walkthrough chapters until they have completed the game.

The Storyteller's conceit

Dragon Age II tells its tale through a "framed-narrative", a story within a story. In the opening scenes, the picaresque frame placed around our tale is that of Varric being interrogated by Cassandra Pentaghast as she pursues the truth about the rise to power of the Champion of Kirkwall. The world is on the brink of ruin, and Cassandra believes that Hawke has a key role to play in the future. But the Champion is nowhere to be found. If there's to be any hope of resolution, she needs to understand the target of her investigation. Chronologically, then, the events of Hawke's life in Dragon Age II are now also history.

As Varric recounts what he knows of Hawke's adventures, it is down to the player to write those adventures by reliving them. Each Act of the game's plot focuses on a crucial period in a ten year history, leaping forward through time at the end of each chronicle, such that the consequences of your decisions are all the more apparent.

Prologue: The Escape to Kirkwall

Overlapping the events of Origins, the prologue begins around the year 9:30 Dragon in the Dragon Age calendar, as the Fifth Blight is spreading with nothing to stem the tide of darkspawn.

Ahead of that surge came a deluge of human migrants, overwhelming the village of Lothering. Leaving almost too late, the Hawke family was among the last to make it out alive. Hawke's mother Leandra suggests that they flee to Kirkwall, where her younger brother Gamlen holds the Amell estate.

On the road they stumble into Aveline and her husband, Wesley, also survivors of the massacre. During their escape, they run into further bands of darkspawn. Though the party defeats many of these creatures, victory comes at a cruel price: Aveline's husband and Hawke's sibling are both slain.

The battle only really ends when a dragon swoops from the clouds and blasts the encroaching horde. The beast then transforms into Flemeth, the shapeshifting Witch of the Wilds. She rescues Hawke just as she recently rescued the Warden from the Tower of Ishal (covered in Origins). Having seen them defeat an ogre, Flemeth knows they cannot be peasants, and that means they may be of use. She is intrigued and asks them to perform a favor in return for safe passage past the horde.

They board a ship from Gwaren to Kirkwall, the towering city port. There is no welcome here: the authorities are unwilling to accept the influx of immigrants. All refugees are being held at the gates by the harbor guard, ready to be sent back to Ferelden. The bad news continues when they chance upon their uncle, only to find the family fortune gone and the estate sold. Gamlen explains that he can get them inside if they agree to work for a contact who can be convinced to vouch for them with hard cash. If Hawke will choose a sponsor, they can begin working off the considerable debt...

Act 1: From Rags to Riches

Over a year has passed, in which the player has made friends but little money. Brothers Varric and Bartrand plan an expedition into the Deep Roads. The end of the Fifth Blight makes this the safest time to venture into the abandoned dwarven network in search of antiquities. Though Bartrand dismisses the need for Hawke's services, Varric persuades the hero to become a business partner.

Principally, partnership means stumping up fifty sovereigns to 'co-invest' in the expedition on the promise of being repaid many times over with great treasures from the depths. Hawke simply needs to raise some capital, taking on whatever work can be found.

Hawke recruits a number of characters to aid him in future ventures, including Varric, as well as Aveline who has joined the city guard and offers some contract work to get started. Hawke also encounters Isabela, the pirate captain without a ship; Sebastian, the Exiled Prince; and is hired by Fenris, a fugitive slave. Bartrand believes that no venture into the Deep Roads would be safe without a Grey Warden to scan for darkspawn, so Hawke also tracks down the highly charged Anders. Later, completing Flemeth's errand introduces Merrill.

The expedition into the Deep Roads leads to an ancient dwarven thaig. Greed gets the better of Bartrand when they uncover a small but priceless statue fashioned from pure lyrium. Double crossing his own brother, Bartrand seals the tomb and leaves his partners to die. The party must tread a more dangerous path to escape.

Act 2: The Champion of Kirkwall

Three years pass. Hawke's status in Kirkwall has improved, the Deep Roads expedition delivering fame, fortune, and the accompanying opportunities and prestige. When people have problems that need solving in a very particular way, they come to Hawke.

The situation with the Qunari – stranded after their dreadnought ran aground near Kirkwall – is deteriorating. Instead of repairing their ship to return home, they have dismantled it to create a permanent camp within Kirkwall. Despite their leader, the Arishok, claiming to have contacted Par Vollen, no vessel has arrived to ship out his crew. And though the treaty grants them peaceful passage, their continued presence makes the citizens uneasy. Minor incidents between locals and Qunari threaten to ignite the situation.

If the Arishok were to find his holy relic, he could return home. Only a death-deserving dishonor awaits him without it. But Kirkwall is running out of time as the tension with the Qunari rises. When Aveline's city guard attempts to arrest some elves claiming religious sanctuary within the Qunari camp, the Arishok takes umbrage. Marshalling his forces, he demonstrates the disciplined effectiveness of his fighting force with an audacious counterattack. The streets of Kirkwall play host to running battles. Brooking no blasphemy, he declares that the city will be converted to the Qun or suffer the consequences – consequences that are clearly established when the Arishok throws the viscount's body before the crowd in the main hall.

Hawke decides upon a course of action – peaceful if the relic is retrieved, or bloody otherwise – that saves the city and earns him the title of the Champion of Kirkwall.

Act 3: The Circle is Broken

Another three years pass. Knight-Commander Meredith has taken stewardship of the city at the request of the Chantry, seizing power in what they considered the only way of keeping order following the viscount's death. Hawke's title of Champion is also endorsed by the Chantry, and has earned him more than an estate in Hightown…

The templars are controlling the city like a police state, imagining maleficar under every bed. Since the escape of several mages from the Circle, Meredith has been seeing conspiracies in every action. She orders raids and crackdowns, immediately incarcerating all suspects. There are also tales of insurrection against the templars that could only be the work of magic, so it appears neither faction is blameless. Riots in the slums tell of the fear and anger of the people, who look to their Champion to deliver them true justice and salvation.

Over time, it becomes clear that Hawke will have to choose to support First Enchanter Orsino and the mage cause, or the knight-commander and her templars.

Events reach a tipping point when an arrest warrant arrives for Anders. He claims he is no blood mage but believes the persecution has gone too far. Anders intends to send a message to the world and the Kirkwall Chantry explodes with the fury of that message.

Meredith immediately seeks the Right of Annulment for the safety of the city, which would entitle her to kill all mages. Without Elthina's mediation, war between mages and templars begins. In desperation, and with no way out, Orsino initiates a blood ritual by harvesting the bodies of sacrificed mages. Immediately possessed, he becomes an abomination in order to defeat the knight-commander's forces. Even if the Champion wishes to protect the Circle, this creature cannot be allowed to run rampant.

The final reckoning is with Meredith, whose exposure to lyrium has also made her a monster of sorts. She believes the Champion has become a threat, and she can no longer ignore such transgressions.

The showdown calls on the Champion to choose between friends and bear the consequences. If the player sides with the mages, those who escape spread the news. Despite being liberated by the Champion and surviving a massacre, Kirkwall is to become a byword for injustice and brutality once again.

Alternatively, the Champion sides with the templars and shows determination in exterminating the mage threat. Gaining the respect of the Order, Hawke is appointed the new Viscount of Kirkwall.

In closing Hawke's story, Varric reflects on his friend's legacy. We learn that the Champion has since vanished or else the dwarf has no desire to let on what he knows.

So what does the future hold? The mage/templar crisis has drawn the battle lines, setting the scene for rebellion and persecution. Religious purges and expurgation can be expected from the Chantry, but news of Kirkwall may incite other Circles to rise up in revolt.

Perhaps more intriguing, is there a reason why Hawke is now "gone, like the Warden", as revealed by Cassandra in the final scenes? Do the Champion and the Hero of Ferelden have more in common than we know? And what do the mysterious Seekers of Truth have to do with this? Will some kind of inquisition be at the heart of the events of the next Dragon Age title?

Finally, is it safe to speculate that Morrigan may play a major role in future events? Flemeth's cryptic explanation for her journey to Sundermount ("A bit of security, should the inevitable occur. And if I know my Morrigan, it already has.") may refer to the Warden's battle with the Witch of the Wilds – or, perhaps, an artfully conjured facsimile – at her furious daughter's behest. Flemeth, lest we forget, was discovered to have achieved a form of immortality by periodically appropriating the bodies of numerous "daughters" throughout her history. Then again, with Morrigan carrying a child infused with the spirit of the archdemon in one likely narrative eventuality, it could mean so much more…

Writing as a Cornerstone

Writing as a Cornerstone

Jennifer Hepler, Writer: At BioWare, we have a rather unique structure that involves a lot of back and forth between the various departments of the team. The writers begin by designing a story, with space for combat and interesting challenges. This is refined by our technical designers to suit the gameplay needs. Once they approve, the writers begin work on the dialogue. When this is complete, the tech designers implement the plot, and it is tested and reviewed by a wide range of disciplines on the project.

Because many departments are dependent on having finished writing before work can begin – technical designers can't implement unwritten plots, cinematic designers can't stage unwritten dialogue, voice-over and audio can't work on unwritten, unrecorded dialogue, and so forth – the writing often takes place before much of the combat or systems are working in the game. So, while we know there will be tactical combat and we always aim to implement boss fights and fun gameplay, we often don't get to see it in action until well after the writing has been locked down and recorded.

Though Dragon Age II is a sequel, nothing from this project was known or planned when we were working on Dragon Age: Origins. While we always hoped the game would be successful enough to launch a franchise, that's never a guarantee until it happens. Developing Origins was such a long process and went through so many changes of leadership that we were able to start DAII with a pretty fresh slate. We'd already told our "ancient evil rising" story, so by the end of the Origins project we were able to discuss what the most interesting parts of the world had turned out to be and how to turn those into more central game elements. For example, it was rather confining to have all mages locked in the Circle tower, so in DAII, mage freedom became a central part of the conflict to make their unique situation a broader part of the game.

There are no "big secrets" among the writers as to where the main story is going, and nothing is set in stone. So, while we have general ideas of which stories we want to tell – we'd definitely like to do more with Tevinter, the Qunari, Orlais, and the Fade, for instance – exactly what will happen in each game isn't set until it goes into production.

At the beginning of a project, we usually have a list of main character concepts (like "human male rebel mage") that are put together by the lead writer and lead designer. Then all the writers get to say who they're interested in. We've generally been very lucky in that our different personal interests have led all of us to focus in on different profiles, so there wasn't much competition for who has custody of which characters. After that, those basic character concepts get fleshed out by the individual writer and the team. If someone feels strongly about an idea, they're usually allowed to run with it. For example, for Anders in DAII, I really wanted to try doing a cursed Angel-and-Buffy-style romance, which we hadn't done at BioWare before. We settled on using Anders and Justice from Awakening for this purpose.

It is each writer's responsibility to make sure that their characters have a consistent voice by reading all related lines in all other writers' conversation files, attending their voice-over sessions to work with the actor/actress and writing any non-plot dialogue for that character. One of my custody characters in DAII was Hawke's mother, so I made sure that I reviewed her dialogue and character development from her first appearance in the Prologue through to her final voice-over session. We also discuss communally how major game characters, like companions, feel about each other. This allows our banter to demonstrate a consistent relationship between NPCs and makes them feel like real people.

As writers, we're involved in changing systems that affect character relationships, such as companion approval. We're always looking for ways to use in-game systems to increase the verisimilitude of our protagonists, so something like lessening the impact of gifts compared to Origins was an obvious low-hanging fruit for us. It just didn't feel right that these people who were otherwise defined by the strength of their convictions could be convinced to like you if you gave them enough bottles of cheap wine. We attempted to correct that with the Friendship/Rivalry system in Dragon Age II.

I'd say that the relationships between characters is precisely what makes our series so roleplaying-friendly. In Dragon Age, we made characters who got under people's skins. For example, many players felt sincerely bad when ending a romance with Leliana in Origins, not because it had any effect on their own character's advancement in the game, but because they had come to care about her as a real person and hated making her cry. To me, that's the ultimate achievement as a game writer – to make a player willing to make a disadvantageous decision in a game just to keep a fictional character from suffering.

T he Cinematic Experience

Frank Gordon, Cinematic Designer: A camera in a videogame has incredible freedom of movement and can be placed anywhere. This is actually a bit of a double-edged sword for us – it allows the creation of some truly spectacular moments, but it is very easy to create an unnatural looking shot. We study film techniques extensively and employ many of the same principles, but we have just as much fun breaking the rules as following them when it comes to composition and movement choices.

Every camera that we place is sending a subtle message to the player, and little things like the angle of a shot can convey a lot of information without the character having to say a word. These types of techniques generally go hand-in-hand with the narrative as they have to support one another or it will feel weird to watch. Ultimately, we conform to the tenets of cinematography in the same way as film, and that is one of the ways that we contribute to furthering our medium as an art as much as entertainment.

John Epler, Cinematic Designer: Technical limitations meant that early videogame cinematics had to be more skilled in the delivery of visual storytelling. Now that voice-over is expected, we have to find a new balance between image and dialogue. For writers, I think there's a bit of a tendency to "play it safe" and write whatever they think might be needed. And that's completely understandable – we don't always manage to hit every line, and so what you thought might be carried by cinematic design could be missed due to time constraints. While the writers sometimes give us a little more than we need, they're extremely accommodating when we ask them to rewrite or remove something, because they believe in the saying "show, don't tell" every bit as much as we do. So if a line (or even a series of lines) can be replaced with a meaningful look or a well-placed gesture, they're always on board.

That's why we tend to be pretty involved in the briefs for the scenes. If the work isn't feasible, or if the time required isn't justified, other stakeholders will change things to accommodate. Once the brief is done and the scene is in our hands, we still have a lot of freedom. In the intro to Varric's Act 2 quest, all I received were a few lines of dialogue. I did that scene when I was on a bit of a Sergio Leone kick, so we ended up with the very Western-style standoff. And that's actually a great example of us getting assets changed to accommodate our ideas.

Frank Gordon: Cool scenes, especially ones with dragons, are the best parts of our job. They are just as fun to build as they are to watch. We are very open to suggestions and feedback from the whole development team, and when we get a great idea for a scene, we don't mind crunching a little extra to get it done. Having said that, our use of resources is a constant concern and we don't always have time to do everything that we would like to do.

Kaelin Lavallee, Technical Designer: Assessing the value versus cost is important. Good value for reasonable time and effort means the asset will probably make it into the game. Lots of work for a minor detail is not usually worth it. Sometimes, ideas are good on paper but aren't realistic or don't translate well to gameplay. If we don't think that a certain encounter or experience would be enjoyable – or if we do, and it doesn't test well – we discard it and focus on the things that are fun.

For instance, the "gang" quests are a great addition. They provide some relatively inexpensive, yet fun gameplay to the somewhat spacious night-time areas. This gives the player exploration, combat, XP, items and coin and fills out the world at the same time. The letter system works well for quest delivery or reactivity and saves a lot of unnecessary dialogue and cinematics, which made room to work on other areas of the game. These are two examples of win-win situations for developers and players.

John Epler: We'd rather the other departments in the team ask too much than too little, though. When someone says, "I want this awesome thing to happen," there's usually a scramble as everyone tries to claim it for their own. The big scenes are almost always the most fun to do, even if they're the most work, and you end up learning a lot more about both the toolset and your own abilities when you push out of your comfort zone.

Geordie Moffatt, Technical Artist: On Dragon Age II, we tried not to draw any creative lines. We know we can achieve outstanding animation and effects in-house. Several scenes required the creation of custom tools and a lot of R&D across multiple departments, but it was worth it to get that extra "Wow!" factor. For example, the Chantry explosion cutscene was challenging and went through many iterations, but the final version really makes you sit back in your seat with your jaw open.

Frank Gordon: The capacity for cutscenes completely rendered in real-time by the game engine has really changed the way cinematics are incorporated in games. It's one of the reasons why dialogue looks so different from last-gen titles. The ability to incorporate cutscenes into gameplay and dialogue leads to a more homogeneous, cinematic experience, and I think we're just scratching the surface.

John Epler: Clearly, the job of cinematic designer is one that is still in its infancy. We have a role that's more akin to that of a director on a film set than anything else, and this is only possible given the improved visual fidelity of games in the past five years. Currently, there's a bit of a divide – dialogue feels connected but very separate. Eventually, conversations will happen parallel to the gameplay, allowing for a more integrated experience. I see cinematic design playing a huge part in making this happen.

Building on Feedback

Mike Laidlaw, Lead Designer: We are certainly very aware of both player and critical feedback for Origins. We analyzed and compiled every magazine and internet review. We also highly value what fans think, so we try to take as much feedback as possible into consideration when we move forward with future projects. It's impossible to please everyone, but I think we've managed to hit a "sweet spot" with DAII. It stays true to its roots while improving on many existing systems.

For instance, the art of Origins was gorgeous, but it didn't particularly stand out on its own. So our team "hot-rodded" the art. Now we have a bold, easily-identifiable style – a visual signature that is grim, bloody and sexy.

Combat is another example. People loved the action and combat in Origins, but the pace was a bit slow and the mages were highly overpowered. So in Dragon Age II, we kept the tactical elements, big boss battles and the plethora of ability and specializations while revamping gameplay. Now controls are more responsive, each class has a unique and powerful style of play and combat is actively engaging and faster-paced. We also built a strategic, offensive cross-class combo system.

The same applies to narration. In Origins, everyone enjoyed the tough choices and the memorable characters with their own agendas, but the narrative and story took a long time to see the results of your actions. DAII is still filled with interesting conflict and in-depth, realistic characters, but we improved the system by having a framed narrative with a tighter story that responds to your decisions throughout the game.

Gary Conrad, QA: The feedback from QA is also an important part of the design process. This is one of the things that sets BioWare apart from a lot of other developers: QA is there right at the start of a project, working to ensure that all systems are being tested for possible bugs and end-user experience. Being involved from the beginning also means that it is much easier for QA experts to keep up to date with their knowledge of the game. Instead of being thrown into the deep end near the final stage of a project, the testers expand their knowledge of the game in lockstep with its development. This ensures that QA is always up to speed on all the intricacies of a game's mechanics and allows for that extra level of polish.

Chad De Wolfe, QA: Being involved in the creative side of the project also means that we know who to talk to, and we can make suggestions to solve problems or bugs, which helps the other teams with their workload.

On first contact with the early versions of the game, testers didn't necessarily feel challenged. It's only when they got to the end, where they saw how many choices and checks the game made, that they got a sense of the size of their task.

Gary Conrad: There are tons of variables and dependencies in a game as large as Dragon Age II. Methodical testing for such a massive amount of parameters requires legions of spreadsheets detailing all the various combinations of events that have to be tested. These are the times when the testers sit down and work out the most absurd ways possible to break the game. When a title sells millions of copies, this is essential as you just know someone out there will be trying those very same crazy sequences of events.

The Editing Marathon

Chris Corfe, Editor: Editors are an excellent point of contact and liaison between departments because we see so much of the game. We work with writing, technical design, localization, voice-over and cinematic design, and we must view the game through all of these lenses while editing.

Such multitasking has its risks as well as its benefits. This is not too complicated early on as we are focused mostly on story feedback, brainstorming and editing. For DAII, however, we sent the game for translation and voice-over while we were still writing it, so when localization started, we really had to step up. We went through dialogue editing, voice-over and non-voice-over lockdown, bug-fixing and finally the finishing touches: the manual, credits, last-minute text and dialogue tweaks and, of course, the guide!

It took a high-performance machine to pull off a complicated game of this scale that was in constant flux until the last day. This made the project demanding for the Dragon Age team and for external partners like Piggyback, but it was a rewarding experience. We were very fortunate to work with the most talented and dedicated people in the business.

Prologue

Escape from The Blight

1. After choosing your character's class and watching the opening cinematics, you'll be plunged straight into combat against darkspawn. You will always automatically target one enemy in the direction faced, but it's worth noting that you can adjust this by moving the Camera stick, or using the Target Select buttons (D-pad) to cycle through assailants in order. On PC, you have to click on a target to select it. There's relatively little danger in this opening fight, so it's the perfect time to get a feel for the pace of combat.

Follow the onscreen prompts to try out a selection of abilities. Some of these require that you manually select a specific section of the battlefield. Once the targeting system activates, use the Movement stick to select a suitable group of opponents, then unleash your assault of choice (A/X to fire; B/circle to cancel).

Targetting system activating

2. All characters in Dragon Age II have two forms of attack. The first (and most important) is activated abilities. On PS3 and Xbox 360, these are selected via the Radial Menu or, more commonly, the Battle Menu Shortcuts displayed in the lower right-hand corner of the screen. Use the Shortcut button to toggle between the two available sets of three. On PC, you can simply use shortcut keys or the quickbar instead.

The second is a basic, standard assault with the equipped weapon, activated with a press of the Interact button (A/X). If you wish, there is an option in the Options → Gameplay menu that forces your selected character to perform this attack automatically while not following other instructions.

Battle Menu Shortcuts

3. Unlike the infinitely replenished standard attack, the use of all activated abilities is governed by the Cooldown mechanism. It's probably during your fight with the Ogre that this system will first become apparent. You cannot perform abilities (or repeat certain actions, such as using a potion) until the grey Cooldown transparency completes a full 360-degree refresh over the icon used to represent an ability or action (Fig. 3). As you will doubtlessly exhaust your stock of abilities before the Ogre and allies are beaten, this marks a solid introduction to Dragon Age II combat in its most rudimentary form. When enemies attack, this entry-level style of play sees you unleash every available activated ability, then switch to the standard attack while you wait for assorted Cooldowns to expire.

Cooldown transparency cycle

4. When play resumes after the narrative interlude, save your progress via the pause menu. Move along the path to trigger the arrival of a darkspawn party. Losing the stock of abilities at your disposal due to Varric's narrative "flourishes" in the opening sequence can be a shock to the system, especially if you have chosen the mage class; in this instance, save the Mind Blast spell for moments where Hawke is in genuine danger. For all classes, it's vital to ensure that your character isn't surrounded. Even at this early stage, positioning matters. Hawke will level up after the battle ends: see XP & Level Up across the page for guidance.

5. Fight your way along the path until you reach Aveline and Wesley. In the battles that follow this introduction, be wary of darkspawn attacking your party from behind. There is a potentially nasty confrontation as you approach the waypoint marker, in which you face an Emissary Apprentice (a darkspawn mage) along with archers and melee warriors. For this reason, you might want to save your progress before the path opens out at the south of the map. Don't climb the next slope until you have leveled up and scoured the area for collectibles (including a Codex entry – see "Miscellany" on the next spread). The locked chest here is a small reward for those who chose to be a rogue. If you opted for another class, you can sadly do naught but sigh and press forward.

6. This fight with the Ogre and assorted darkspawn is more effortful and less fanciful than Varric's original account, but don't worry: if you fail, there is an autosave just before the confrontation begins. The best strategy is to clear darkspawn when they enter the fray, then refocus your energies on the principle brute in this flashpoint. Once again, this battle underlines the importance of good positioning. If the Ogre stands poised to charge (Fig. 4), quickly move your character out of its path.

Given the increased difficulty of this encounter, you may need to heal Hawke or his allies. To do so on the console versions, call up the Radial Menu, select the ailing individual and pick the Quick Heal option. This option appears on the quickbar on PC. During the closing dialogue sequence, defer to Aveline during an emotional situation to cement a new friendship.

Poised Ogre

7. Once you arrive at the Gallows in Kirkwall, push through the throng of Fereldans to trigger a cutscene, then head for the waypoint further into the Gallows Courtyard. Ensure that all party members have leveled up and save before you approach Captain Ewald, then defeat the waves of deserters in the ensuing battle. The initial group are ripe for an AoE attack from a suitably capable mage at the start, if you wish. As the affray develops, keep an eye on individual party members to ensure they are not surrounded by opponents as the fight spreads to cover the entire courtyard.

The only way to gain entry to Kirkwall is to follow Gamlen's suggestion to enter indentured servitude with Athenril's smugglers (northernmost waypoint), or Meeran's mercenaries. Jump to 8 if you choose Athenril, or 9 for Meeran, though it's worth reading both: there is an opportunity to gain greater rewards by betraying one of them. After honoring a task for either individual, talk to Gamlen to end the Prologue.

8. Speak to Athenril and agree to attend to the job she offers. On reaching Merchant Cavril, you can resolve the situation in a number of ways:
To retrieve the money without conflict, speak to Cavril, tell him that Athenril sent you, then call on Aveline to mediate. Open the Merchant's Chest, collect the coins, then return to Athenril.
The dialogue options "There's no need for violence" or "You need to pay what you owe" both lead to conflict with Cavril's guards. This solution leads to additional XP and the possibility of loot drops.
Extort money from Cavril then collect the sovereigns from the chest after he departs. On your return to Athenril she will be evicted from the Gallows Courtyard. You must now deal with Meeran instead. If you have previously betrayed Meeran (see 9), this option will instead lead to a battle.

9. Speak to Meeran and agree to deal with Friedrich and his men, who can be found in the south of the area. As with Athenril's equivalent task, you can take a handful of different approaches:
Select "I came to kill you" to begin combat immediately. This is a difficult battle, but there is a simple way to make it easier. As soon as combat begins, highlight all three character portraits at the same time (by pressing both Party Select buttons simultaneously on the console versions, or holding the SHIFT key on PC), then use the Move to Point option (available on the quickbar on PC, and via the Radial Menu on consoles). Select a position next to Captain Ewald at the base of the steps in the main courtyard area. Ewald and his templar allies will then lend their aid during the fight.
Select "I came to talk" then "Very well" to receive a substantial bribe. Friedrich will depart, but you must still fight his hirelings; use the same tactic outlined above. His absence makes this battle less demanding. Meeran will not take kindly to this course of action, so you must complete Athenril's task to gain entry to the city.
If you have previously betrayed Athenril, there is no option to negotiate: you must kill Friedrich and his guards.

Prologue
Creating Hawke

The second stage of the character creation process (following the earlier choice of class) is to pick your character's appearance and name, and select a narrative background that encompasses the events of Dragon Age: Origins. You must also select a difficulty level.

Appearance, Portrait and Name

These three options enable you to personalize your character, and have no bearing on Hawke's capabilities or later development. Though you may not notice on first playthrough, your chosen portrait will actually affect the appearance of Hawke's family members.

If you have access to the Black Emporium Premium Content (see dragonage.com/da2/addons), you can change your character's appearance, portrait and name at a later date.

Events of Dragon Age: Origins

Dragon Age II allows you to import information from a Dragon Age: Origins save file stored on your hard drive. The data interpreted by this feature reflects key decisions made by the Warden (the protagonist of Origins), and can influence your adventures in a number of ways. For example:

- Some Dragon Age II quests are only available if you aligned yourself with particular factions or individuals while playing Origins or its expansions. If, hypothetically, your Warden chose to side with the Dalish elves rather than the werewolves, supported Bhelen instead of Lord Harrowmont in Orzammar, or opted to eliminate Sophia Dryden and spare Avernus in the Warden's Keep downloadable content, you can potentially encounter side quests that reflect later consequences. The reverse, with these three instances, is also true. These are just a handful of examples.
- You will also encounter many ambient references to the world you left behind in your save: from a barman referencing the miraculous recovery of Arl Eamon at Andraste's apparent behest, to story summaries in the Journal that offer a precise appraisal of your adventures.

If you didn't play Dragon Age: Origins, worry not: there is a selection of three preset backgrounds that you can choose from.

- Hero of Ferelden represents an optimal playthrough in which the Warden adopted a resolutely noble approach to any given situation. This is the classic "good guy".
- The Martyr , as the name suggests, implies a path where the Warden opted to sacrifice himself at the climax of Dragon Age: Origins. This wasn't a Warden who always favored popular or easy decisions, but Ferelden was ultimately a better place for their actions.
- No Compromise could be described as the opposite end of the spectrum to Hero of Ferelden. It's not that this permutation of the Warden was necessarily evil, though; merely that this particular hard-bitten bastard strode a less flower-lined path through the moral mazes of Origins.

The Hero of Ferelden preset offers access to more reactive events and side quests than The Martyr or No Compromise, and is the option we would recommend for players who didn't play Dragon Age: Origins.

Difficulty

On a first playthrough, we would suggest that the Normal difficulty level is perfectly pitched for the vast majority of players. Higher settings provide your opponents with improved health, damage output, and attack scores and increase the frequency of special ability usage. You can adjust the difficulty level at any time during play, without penalty, and there really is no shame in dropping down to Casual should you hit a brick wall on a particular quest.

We would advise that all players pay the Nightmare setting a wide berth during their first time through the Dragon Age II story. In addition to the expected array of adjustments that brutally favor your opponents, this mode also activates friendly fire, so your party members can hurt each other with their attacks (particularly the AoE variety). This alteration necessitates an entirely different style of play. Only true Dragon Age masters should even consider it – and, even then, after at least one full playthrough.

Miscellany

- We refer to the main protagonist in Dragon Age II as Hawke throughout the guide. Though he obviously shares this surname with his siblings, this is the neatest way to sidestep the issue of millions of user-created forenames and two potential genders.
- The way in which you approach each conversation can affect how your companions perceive you.

Prologue

XP & Level Up

Defeating enemies, completing quests and a host of other miscellaneous accomplishments (such as lockpicking and locating Codex entries) all cause Hawke and companions to accumulate experience points (XP). Once total XP reaches a preset threshold (as represented by the bar near the ability shortcuts), a character will level up. This is indicated by an animated arrow on the relevant portrait in the bottom left-hand corner of the screen.

There are two distinct stages to the level up process. To begin, access the pause menu, then select the Characters option. If you would prefer to have your party members level up automatically, you can use the button command shown at the bottom of this screen to accomplish this instantly. However, we would strongly recommend that you take full responsibility.

Step 1: Attributes

You have three attribute points to spend each time a character levels up. If you are keen to get a feel for the game before you learn more about the intricacies of the leveling system in the Strategy & Analysis chapter, the following short guidelines will suffice for the next few levels:

- Warrior: Invest one point in Strength (to increase fortitude and attack power), one in Cunning (to improve defense), and one in Constitution (to increase maximum health and physical resistance).
- Rogue: Only applicable for now if you actually chose this class: you don't encounter your first rogue companion until Act 1. We'd suggest that you place two points in Dexterity and one in Cunning.
- Mage: Allocate two points to Magic and one to Willpower. This will enhance the raw power of a mage's spells and offer a boost to their mana stocks. An alternative approach would be to put all three points into Magic while the number of abilities at your disposal (and, therefore, average mana expenditure) is low, then redress the Willpower imbalance during a later level-up before frequent mana shortages become an issue.

Step 2: Talents

Raw attributes matter, but it is your choice of talents that makes a character truly unique. There are well over 100 in total, divided into themed "trees", with each character given access to a small selection of these. Talents are unlocked incrementally, and it's easy to lose more minutes than you'd care to admit scouring the assorted trees while choosing a new ability. You only get one talent point for each level, though, so your decisions really matter – and doubly so at this delicate stage in your party's development. We strongly suggest that you turn to page 166 of the Strategy & Analysis chapter to learn which talents might best suit Hawke and his current companions.

Prologue
Companions

Carver

A brash and headstrong young man, Carver bristles at the idea of being recognized as Hawke's younger brother rather than being appreciated for his own merits. His best role in the party is as a warrior focused on inflicting heavy damage with two-handed weapons.

- Unlike most other companions, Hawke's relationship with Carver has a preexisting slant towards rivalry from the very start of the game.
- If you want to secure a friendship with Carver, consult him whenever a suitable dialogue option arises, and just generally attempt to make him feel more than a mere passenger on Hawke's journey.
- The city of Kirkwall is in part defined by the tensions that exist between the powerful Order of the Templars and the mages they are charged to keep in line. As a rule, Carver tends to side with the established authorities on this issue.

Bethany

Hawke's sister Bethany is a mage. Sensitive and thoughtful, she is a more approachable soul than the brash Carver – and, therefore, easier to develop a friendship with.

- Bethany will approve if you speak out against or oppose the subjugation of mages. After a lifetime of concealing her natural gifts, she has a keen awareness of their plight.
- Though it's not as apparent as with Carver, Bethany fears that she lives in Hawke's shadow, and will therefore respond favorably if her opinion is sought.
- She will not tolerate ruthless behavior. Callous actions or words in your dealings with the people you meet will swing your relationship with her towards rivalry.

Dog

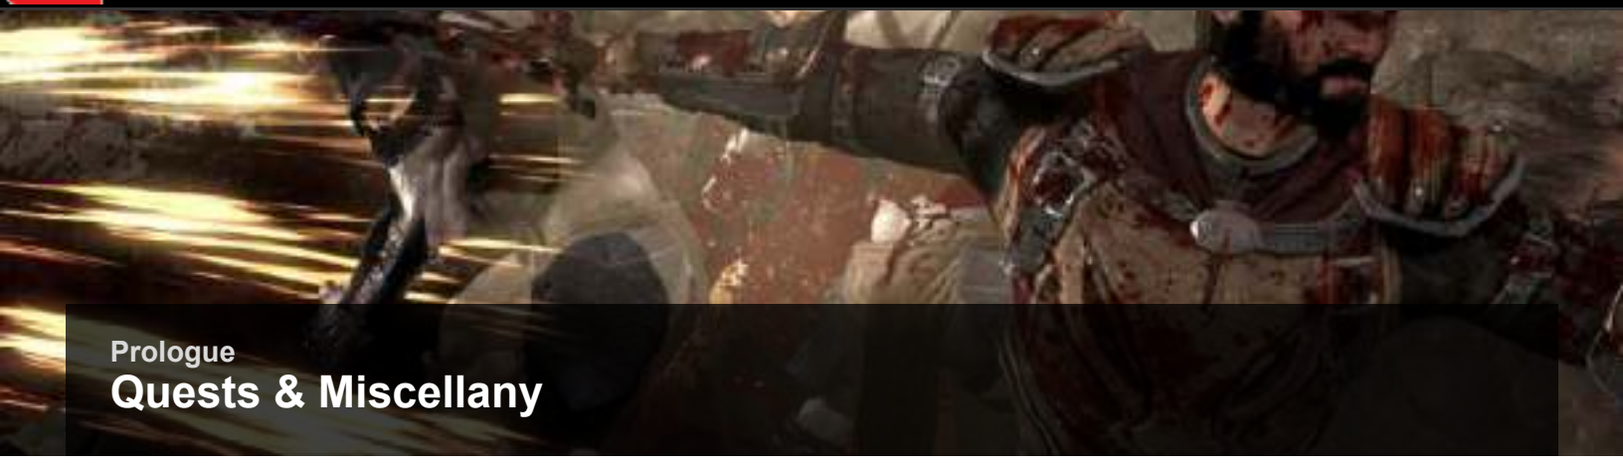
For those who have access to him (visit dragonage. bioware.com for details), this faithful mabari hound can be summoned to act as an ancillary party member.

- If Dog is not present, you can summon him by visiting the Sustained Spells/Talents section of the Radial Menu (or the Abilities menu on PC). He cannot "die" per se, though he will vanish if subjected to extreme punishment by strong enemies.
- Dog acts as a form of "mini-tank", drawing enemy attention away from Hawke and more vital allies. Given that many battles pit you against several foes at once, this service will often come in handy.
- Unlike your companions, the mabari cannot be restrained from leaping into battle with the Move to Point or Hold Position commands whenever precision strategy or discretion are required. In these instances you will find that it makes sense to dismiss him.

Aveline

For all but players who chose to make her role their own, Aveline will become a staple companion in her specialist capacity as the party's tank.

- As a general rule, try to stay on the right side of the law if you want to keep her friendly, and favor an honest approach in your dealings with others.
- It's easy to assume that Aveline has a very rigid stance on law and order, but that's not the whole picture. She understands that sometimes the letter of the law is less important than its spirit: some people really are better dead than jailed. Needless killing or unwarranted viciousness, however, will offend her immensely.
- Don't shake down or pester people for additional payment. No matter how unthreatening your tone may be, this is something she consistently disapproves of (especially blatant blackmail or intimidation). A little humility will also help you to maintain a cordial relationship: she doesn't like posturing.



Quests & Miscellany

The final part of the opening Destruction of Lothering quest is a typical example of the kind of quest that you will encounter in Dragon Age II: there is more than one resolution, which in turn influences a future quest in Act 1, which itself has a “reactive” consequence if you pick a particular path.

Though you can play the vast majority of the main plot quests irrespective of your role-playing decisions, there are many actions that send ripples through Dragon Age II’s three main Acts. These can range from unique follow-up quests, to ambient details such as chance encounters with individuals who you may have helped or hindered in the past. This imbues Dragon Age II with an incredible level of replay value. Though this walkthrough must necessarily offer one path through the main story, the Quests chapter details the consequences of all key branching paths and possibilities for every mission you can undertake.

Most quest start points are denoted by an exclamation mark that appears on the main map or minimap. Unless we specify otherwise, it’s a good idea to seek out and accept all offers of employment. Refusal may lead to a commission being withdrawn entirely, while you are under no obligation to complete active quests that don’t fall into the main plot category.

Miscellany

- The Codex, accessed via the Journal option at the pause menu, offers insights and information on the Dragon Age II game world. Though this stock of reading material expands automatically as you explore and interact with the people you meet, some Codex entries are collectible items that can be found in preset locations (Fig. 5). Interacting with these leads to an immediate reward of 50 XP, and a pop-up window that will offer a short text on a particular subject.

- When you use the Inventory screen, activate the Inspect option (see button instructions at the bottom of the display) to easily consider the relative merits of new weapons, armor and accessories.

- Ignoring automatic story milestones, the two potential “missable” Achievements/Trophies in the Prologue are relatively easy to acquire at a later date. You can unlock both “Nefarious” (choose Athenril) and “Mercenary” (choose Meeran) by creating a save file before approaching either prospective employer, then reload afterwards to complete the alternative option.

Guide

The Deep Roads Expedition

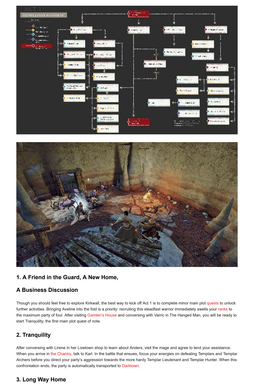
This chapter covers every unique quest in Dragon Age II, with easy-to-follow advice on what you can accomplish and, over the course of the story, what you can't accomplish. Each quest is listed in the order you're likely to encounter it, providing a reference during your first time through the game. It's also tailor-made for later playthroughs where you might choose to take an entirely different path.

Note

While we have taken steps to minimize story revelations, it should go without saying that casual browsing of the pages that follow may result in spoilers.

If you do not wish to follow the path set out in the Walkthrough chapter, use this diagram to plan your route through Act 1. This reveals the entire order for all main plot, secondary and companion quests.

Over the pages that follow we provide hints and tips for all of these ventures, plus guidance for smaller side quests (which usually have their own unique unlock conditions).



1. A Friend in the Guard, A New Home,

A Business Discussion

Though you should feel free to explore Kirkwall, the best way to kick off Act 1 is to complete minor main plot quests to unlock further activities. Bringing Anders back from the fold is a priority; recruiting this steadfast warrior immediately swells your ranks to the maximum party of four. After visiting Gamlen's House and conversing with Varric in The Hanged Man, you will be ready to start Tranquility, the first main plot quest of note.

2. Tranquility

After conversing with Lirene in her Lowtown shop to learn about Anders, visit the mage and agree to lend your assistance. When you arrive in the Chantry, talk to Karl in the battle that ensues, focus your energies on defeating Templars and Templar Hunter. Once the fight is over, Karl's anger is aggression towards the mere hardly Templar Lieutenant and Templar Hunter. When this confrontation ends, the party is automatically transported to Darktown.

3. Long Way Home

After your meeting with Keeper Marethari, visit the Clan Craftsmaker to sell enhancement items, then tell Marethari that you are ready to set off. The Dalish mage acts as a guest party member for the duration of this quest. Though you cannot control her directly, she will contribute to battles as she sees fit. The journey to the Sundermount Passage entrance is punctuated by battles with undead foes, the presence of bodies on the ground is usually a sign of trouble ahead.

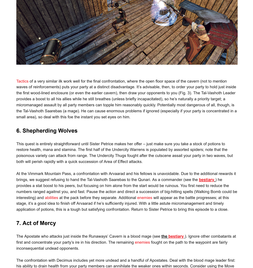
Approach the barrier to trigger a cutscene. Your reaction to Merrill's magic can lead to rivalry or friendship increments. Once the way forward is clear, a fairly hefty combat encounter will start. Beginning with Skeleton Archers, it will grow to comprise Skeleton Warriors, Rage Demons and Fade Spirits. Keep your distance from the Rage Demons, as their melee attacks can enable it to act as a tank while its weaker cohorts inflict great damage. After interacting with the altar (and the resultant conversation), return to the cave entrance. You will be automatically transported first to the Dalish Camp, then to Lowtown for the concluding conversation with your new companion.

4. Wayward Son

This lengthy multi-part quest allows you to resolve situations in different ways, and your decisions will have later repercussions. Our walkthrough here follows the most direct path, but you can consult the Quests chapter to learn about alternative solutions. We recommend that you save before and listen to your Companions.

After accosting the quest from Aneirin, tell Thrask that you wish to help Prysmel, then have Avelline persuade him to accept your aid. The result of this is that Aneirin agrees to accept compensation to reveal the information you seek. Arthura's Private Dock is your next port of call. Switch to Varric and disarm the traps as soon as you enter the main room. Most of the enemies who attack here fall into Arcanaconstructs, though the Murina Enforcer is a more demanding adversary. Lure him until last, then immobilize him by any means at your disposal. The battle with Captain Reiner and the Abomination is much more challenging. AoE attacks work well when the party first confronts of the room where it begins, but Reiner is a slippery foe. If you struggle with this fight, try manually directing your party to the main room and draw opponents to your position gradually. Alternatively, if you have the Arcane Warrior specialization (the mark of a warrior), use the Hideout Lockout trap from the rear entrance, then leave via the area entrance.

Drop into Darktown and confront Danuvy. His initial group of sleaze vibes can be disabled with a couple of simultaneous AoE attacks, but the reinforcements that appear will require a bit of clever stuff. The Shave Shop is a particular danger. Manually positioning your party at the top of the steps is a tactical approach that works well (Fig. 2). Lord Danuvy's remains for the Map to the Wounded Coast, then head to the Hightown Docks to talk to Captain Bran. Once you've dealt with the pirates, head to Javaris to begin the Blackpowder Promise quest. Be sure to collect all items on Hot Jim's pity (cannot return here later), then continue on to your original destination. Talk to Kirkwall Smuggler to reach the Brave Caverns. If you encounter a Dalish Assassin on the way there, see Miscellaneous Activities for further details.

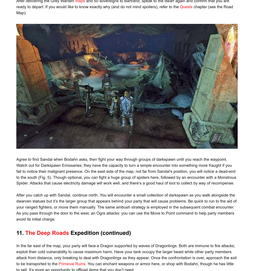


Inside the cavern you will encounter a group of slavers – again pay special attention to the Shriek Mage. When you meet Varvier, the quickest and easiest solution is to immediately call on Isabela to negotiate on your behalf with the mercenary. Retrieve Nalvarin's Pendant from the chest, then return to the entrance to send Fayrriel to the Circle or (his preference) the Dalish Camp. For the purposes of this walkthrough, we'll follow the latter path. We suggest you pick up the Tattered Note. Take the information to Javaris to return to the Wounded Coast. You must relay the news of her son's whereabouts to Ariantir to complete the quest, though you can leave this final task until later if you would rather complete Blackpowder Promise (covered overleaf) while in the vicinity.

5. Blackpowder Promise

At the Wounded Coast, a lone Tal-Vashoth will warn of others of his kind on the path ahead before departing. Fight your way north from this position. The Tal-Vashoth have a moderate resistance to fire and electricity but are extremely susceptible to attacks imbued with cold and to statements (including stones used by your party members – see Maximizing Damage). Use this knowledge to cut their ambushes short, then enter the cave.

The first battle inside the Tal-Vashoth Cavern is fairly uneventful, but the encounter that follows proves much more challenging. Position your party at the top of the steps, then use shackles to gain control of the enemies. If you can create a bottleneck somewhere at the bottom, a mage armed with Curse of Coyir (in addition to other AoE attacks) can make a commanding contribution here.



Tactics of a very similar ilk work well for the final confrontation, where the open floor space of the cavern (not to mention waves of reinforcements) puts your party at a distinct disadvantage. To alleviate this tension, try to enter your party's hold just inside the first wood-lined enclosure (or even the earlier cavern), then draw your opponents to you (Fig. 3). The Tal-Vashoth Leader can be interrupted by stuns, knockdowns and other crowd control effects, though his resistance to fire and electricity makes the micromanaged assault by all party members can topple him reasonably quickly. Potentially most dangerous of all, though, is the Tal-Vashoth Shamblas (a mage). He can cause enormous problems if ignored (especially if your party is concentrated in a small area), so deal with this foe first. Instead you set eyes on him.

6. Shepherding Wolves

This quest is entirely straightforward until Sister Petrice makes her offer – just make sure you take a stock of potions to restore health, mana and stamina. The first half of the Underdeep Miasma is populated by assorted spiders, note that the Darkspawn variety can inflict Poison. Focusing the Darkspawn Corpse Eaters is the best tactic here, but controlling Fade creatures in both will permit rapidly with a quick succession of three-of-their-attacks.

At the Vimmark Underdeep, a confrontation with Sandal and his fellows is unavoidable. Due to the additional rewards it brings, we suggest refusing to hand the Tal-Vashoth Sashimo to the Qunari. As a commander (see the hardest), he provides a clear tutorial to you, focusing his attacks on a single party member before he moves onto the next. Use the numbers ranged against you, and fast. Pause the action and direct a succession of big-hitting spells (Walking Bomb could be interesting) and attacks at him. Be careful of his counterattack. Additional enemies will appear as the battle progresses, at this stage, it's a good idea to hold it because if he's sufficiently injured. With a little astute micromanagement and timely application of potions, this is a tough but satisfying confrontation. Return to Sister Petrice to bring the episode to a close.

7. Act of Mercy

The Apostate who attacks just inside the Runewarys' Cavern is a trivial mage (see the bestiary), ignore other combatants at first and concentrate your party's ire in his direction. The tempering enemies fought on the path to the waypoint are fairly inconsequential undead opponents.

The confrontation with Isabela includes yet more undead and a handful of Apostates. Deal with the blood mage healer first (Fig. 4), then switch between your party members can annihilate the weaker ones within seconds. Consider using the Move to Point command as the battle progresses to position your party on the high ground at the east side of the cavern.

When Grace steps forward at the end of the fight, pledge to help the mages escape, then promise to lie to Thrask. Return to the entrance (there are two further confrontations with undead on the journey back) and leave the cavern. With Varric in your party you can resolve the situation without violence, but there's grave reward to be had by fighting for Grace. Head to the chosen fire 'n friend of the mages' dialogue option. The battle sees your party assailed from both sides. Mentally position your party at the top of the steps, then use shackles to gain control of the enemies. Once you've dispatched the Templar Hunter, the arrival of an assassin-type opponents (see the bestiary) he will break beyond your front lines and attack your weaker party members.

8. Enemies Among Us

After the short cutscene at Wilmod's Camp, your party will be attacked by the hideously mutated Wilmod and waves of Abominations. The last opponent to spawn into the fray is a Rage Demon. This dangerous, fast-moving Fade creature belongs to the assassin archetype, and will cause havoc if ignored. Use cold-based spells (and, if available, suitably frosty weapons) to subdue it and its minions.

Ensure that your party includes at least one mage before you travel to The Gloaming Rose. In the conversation with Idunna, select "You can't control me" if Hawke is a mage, or otherwise call on Anders, Merrill or Bethany to intervene. Question her, then choose to send her to the tempters, you will benefit from this morbidity decision later in Act 2 (see Forbidden Knowledge).

Inside the Sanctuary, fight the Shades and Abominations from the small set of steps close to the entrance. This reduces their opportunities to flank your party, and forces them into a tight group ripe for AoE devastation. Once you've dispatched all you can see, head to the Tal-Vashoth Shamblas (a mage). He can cause enormous problems if ignored (especially if your party is concentrated in a small area), so deal with this foe instead you set eyes on him.

Tanrinia begins the battle at the centre of a pack of blood mages, so this is a good moment to pause and stack up a barrage of AoE attacks before they can separate. An intimidating wave of Abominations will swarm your position, so try to keep your party's back protected by a wall. Tanrinia is a tough foe, but she can be defeated by a party of four. Once you've dealt with her, use a Divine Demise (see Rai Inshiro) – use potions or healing spells as required and leave these two adversaries until last. Speak to Varvier, then meet with Cullen in the Gallows and insist that the young templar is fit to continue in his role (choose "Varvier's fine", or "Varvier should be killed"). Go bring about a happy ending.

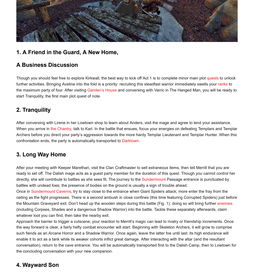
9. Friends in Low Places

If you cannot possibly raise sufficient funds to pay Bartrand the required 50 sovereigns, this is your only opportunity to begin the Deep Roads Expedition. Accept Ocaud's offer, and he will supply the necessary funds – but at the cost of reduced profits and further repercussions in Act 2. See page 66 for more information.

10. The Deep Roads Expedition

Before you go any further, ensure that you have read the Optional Activities section on the previous page. It should go without saying that a little advance preparation will make this quest far easier. A good stock of potions and injury kits, for example, will be of obvious benefit, especially on higher difficulty levels or if you do not intend to include a dedicated healer in your party. Weapons that inflict cold or spirit damage will make short work of many foes. Also consider the companions you have. Note that Varric is locked into the party for the duration of this quest, but this isn't a problem: we'd actually recommend a group consisting of three ranged fighters and a single tank.

Also beware of the gas. Viewing the Warden maps and 32 screenings in Bartrand, speak to the dwarf again and confirm that you are ready to depart. If you would like to know exactly why (and do not mind spoilers), refer to the Quests chapter (see the Road Map).



Agree to find Sandal when Bodahn asks, then fight your way through groups of darkspawn until you reach the waypoint. Watch out for Darkspawn Emissaries; they have the capacity to turn a simple encounter into something much tougher if you fail to notice their malignant presence. On the east side of the map, run for from Sandal's position, you will notice a dead-end to the south (Fig. 5). Though optional, you can fight a huge group of spiders here, followed by an encounter with a Broodmother Spider. Attacks that cause electricity damage will work well, and there's a good haul of loot to collect by way of recompense.

After you catch up with Sandal, continue north. You will encounter a small collection of darkspawn as you walk alongside the deserter-statues but it's the larger group that appears behind your party that will cause problems. Be quick to run to the aid of your ranged fighters, or move them manually. The same ambush strategy is employed in the subsequent combat encounter. As you pass through the door to the west, an Ogre attacks: you can use the Move to Point command to help party members avoid its initial charge.

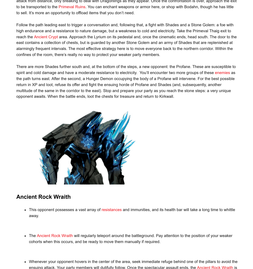
In the far east of the map, your party will face a Dragon supported by waves of Dragontroops. Both are immune to fire attacks, exploit their cold vulnerability to cause maximum harm. Have your tank occupy the larger beast while other party members attack from distance, only breaking to deal with Dragontroops as they appear. Once the confrontation is over, approach the exit to be transported to the Primeval Ruins. You can unload weapons or armor here, or shop with Bodahn, though he has little to sell. It's more an opportunity to offload items that you don't need.

Follow the path leading east to trigger a conversation and, following that, a fight with Shades. Once Sandal is free with Bodahn, continue east to the Primeval Ruins entrance. Head south to the Ancient Crypt, then west to the Primeval Thaig to reach the Ancient Crypt area. Approach the Lyrium on its pedestal and, once the cinematic ends, head south. The door to the east contains a collection of chests, but is guarded by another Stone Golem and an army of Shades that are reinforced at alarmingly frequent intervals. The most effective strategy here is to move everyone back to the northern corridor. Within the confines of the room, there's really no way to protect your weaker party members.

There are more Shades further south and, at the bottom of the steps, a new opponent: the Profane. These are susceptible to fire attacks, but their ability to heal themselves and their allies makes them a dangerous foe. Position your party at the top of the path once more. After the second, a Hunger Demon occupying the body of a Profane will intervene. For the best possible return in XP and loot, refuse its offer and fight the ensuing horde of Profane and Shades (and, subsequently, another multitude of the same in the corridor to the east). Stop and prepare your party as you reach the stone steps: a very unique opponent awaits. When the battle ends, loot the chests for treasure and return to Kirkwall.



Ancient Rock Wraith

- This opponent possesses a vast array of resistances and immunities, and its health bar will take a long time to whittle away.
- The Ancient Rock Wraith will regularly teleport around the battleground. Pay attention to the position of your weaker cohorts when this occurs, and be ready to move them manually if required.
- Whenever your opponent hovers in the center of the area, seek immediate refuge behind one of the pillars to avoid the ensuing attack. Your party members will dutifully follow. Once the spectacular assault ends, the Ancient Rock Wraith is temporarily disabled and becomes far more susceptible to your attacks, but he is joined by a group of Profane. Micromanage your party for the duration of these moments, dedicating three to pummeling the Rock Wraith, while a fourth attends to the Profane.

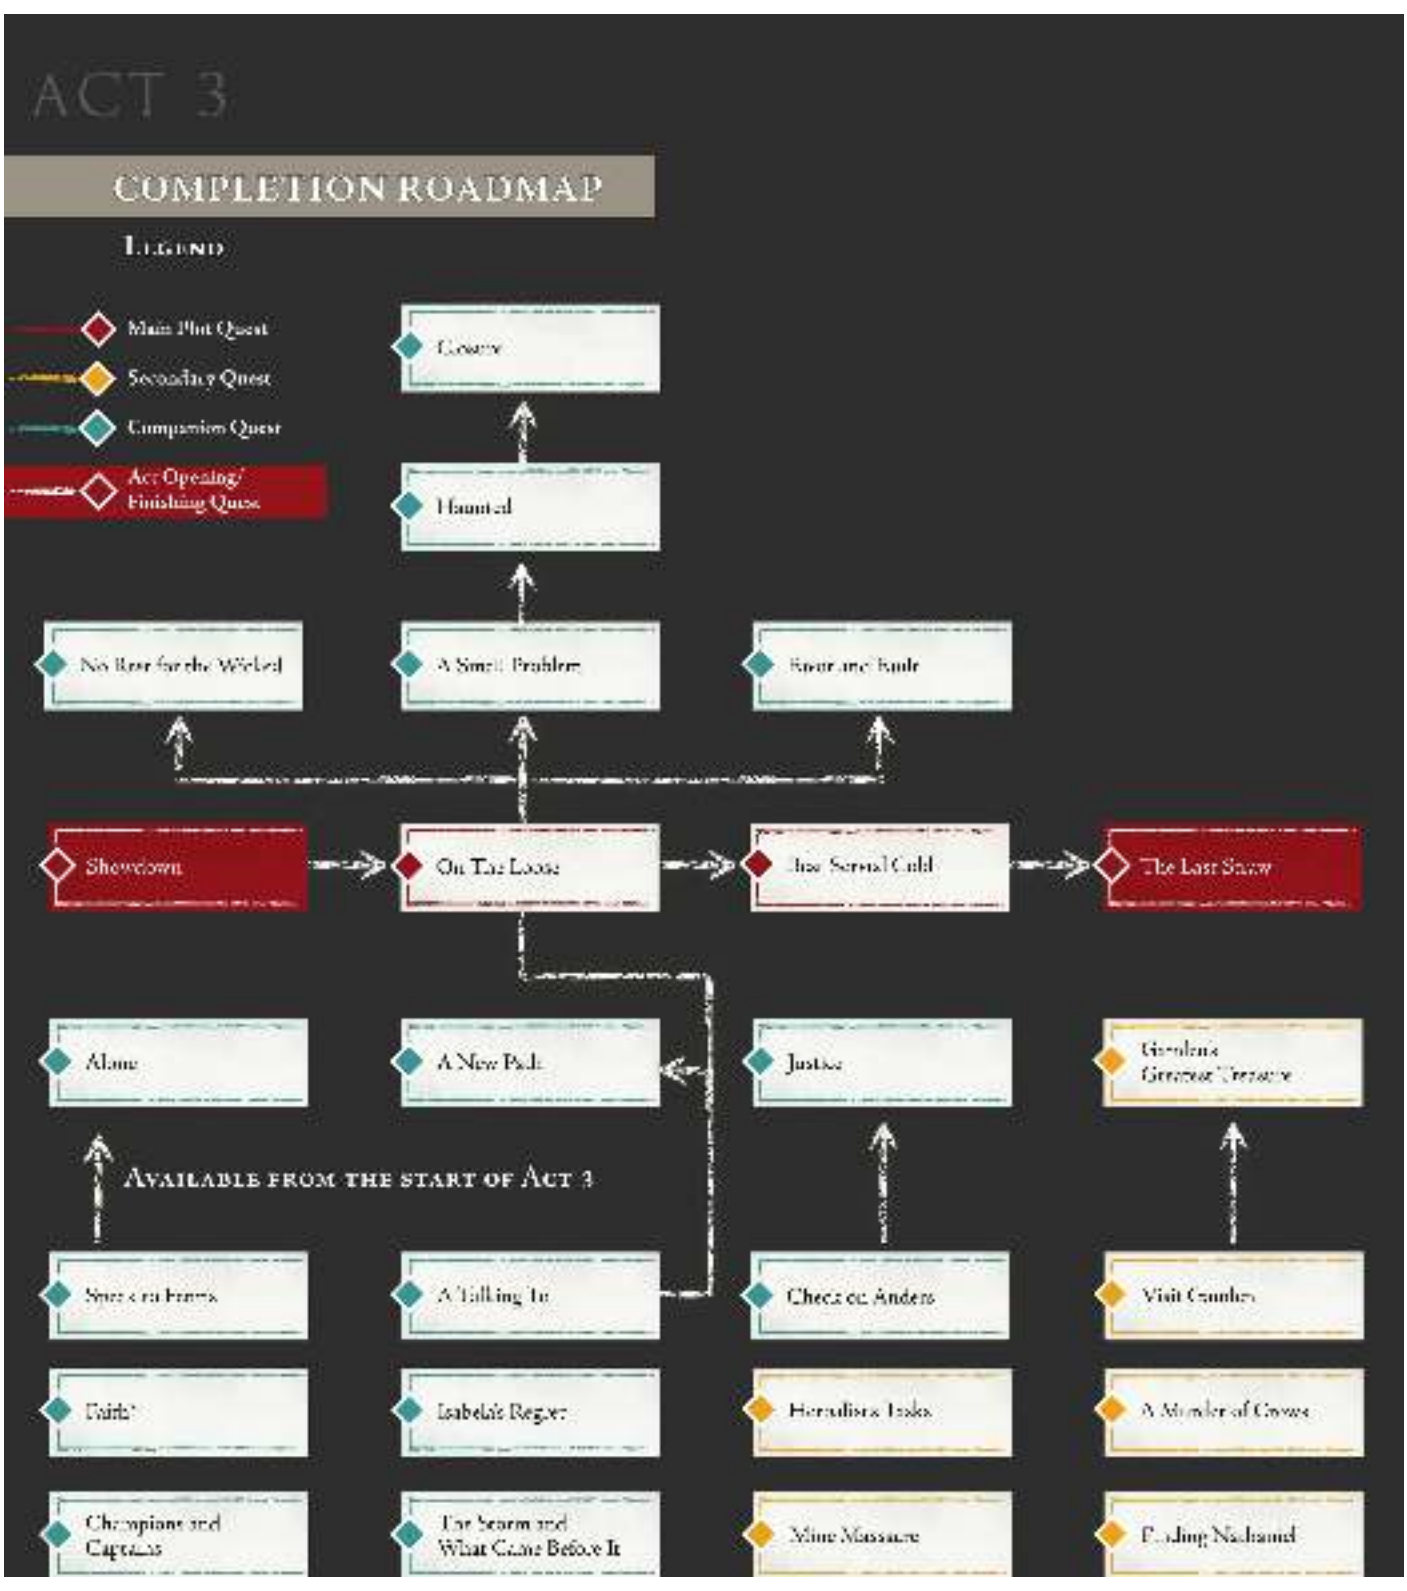
The Last Straw

This diagram will help you plan your route through Act 3 by revealing the unlock progression for all main plot, secondary and companion quests. You will find fact sheets for these in the pages that follow, plus guidance for smaller side quests and their unlock conditions.



1. On The Loose

Note

We would suggest (and will henceforth assume) that you side with Orsino in the dialogue that takes place at the start of Act 3 as supporting the mages makes things slightly easier later on. If you wish to pick a different path, the Quests chapter will – as ever – be your guide to all options and their consequences.

After speaking with Elsa, you must track down each of the three mages in turn.

To locate Emile, speak to Comtesse de Launcet in her Hightown mansion. Feel free to rifle through the building after the dialogue ends. There is an ambush by Blood Mages and Apostate Mages when you leave so be ready to attack with full fury before they can unleash any spells. At The Hanged Man, convince Emile to return to the Circle – though you may permit him a small kindness if you wish.

After interviewing Nyssa, your meeting with Huon is less whimsical than the first apostate. This Blood Mage will summon Shades as support, but these are of no consequence: just hammer the twisted elf with everything your party can direct his way.

Once the conversation with Walter reveals the location of Evelina, fight your way through Shades and Rage Demons to reach the east side of the Sewer Passage. The mage takes on the form of an Abomination at first but can transform into other demonic forms as the battle progresses. Lay down suppressing AoE attacks, then concentrate your fire on Evelina. When the battle ends, open the chest next to the exit, then return to Meredith.

2. Best Served Cold

The battle in Hightown pits you against templars and Circle Mages. As always, it pays to deal with the latter first. There are additional mages among the waves of reinforcements, so keep a watchful eye for these. After collecting the Conspirator's Notes, head for the Secret Meeting Place. The battle that takes place here is an expanded version of the earlier conflict, with the addition of an Enchanter (your priority target) and Templar Hunters. In this fight, concentrate on the weaker foes first to reduce the numbers against you. Leave those with larger health gauges until last. The area is also packed with traps: after the Enchanter falls at the start, consider a brief rush with your most cunning rogue to disarm those in your vicinity. Speak to Keran when the battle ends, then tell him to leave. Be sure to explore the area for loot before you do the same.

At the Wounded Coast, follow the path south from the entrance. When you reach the path that leads to the ruins waypoint, there is a brief battle with templars, mages and corpses before you encounter Samson. No matter what you say to Samson or Thrask, conflict is inevitable.

Grace is by far the most dangerous opponent in this battle. Attack her exclusively until her health is diminished, at which point she transforms into a Pride Abomination. No matter which strategy you opt for (and we would suggest a mages > lesser enemies > Pride Abomination > Lieutenant > Hunter priority order), it's vital that you position your weaker ranged fighters far from the main melee. If you really struggle in this fight, try moving your party far to the north at the outbreak of hostilities. With a little micromanagement, this will enable you to engage each wave in your own time.

3. The Last Straw

Take the time to wrap up any other quests or general activities that you wish to complete as The Last Straw marks the point of no return for the Dragon Age II storyline. Our walkthrough here follows one specific path, but rest assured that we cover all possible permutations in the Quests chapter. Before you begin, ensure that you have a full stock of potions and all other items (such as Mythal's Favor and Fel Grenades) that might be of benefit in the demanding battles that lie ahead.

In the face-off between Orsino and Meredith, side with the mages, then confirm your decision with "I've already made my choice". Depending on the state of your relationship with Fenris and Aveline, one of the two may refuse to follow you from this point forward. Hawke is technically alone but supported by numerous allies in the brief battle that follows. The choice of what to do with Anders is a momentous decision… but if he is your primary party healer, it definitely makes sense to spare his life and ask him to join you for the conflict that lies ahead. This will, however, lead to Sebastian's immediate departure if you count him among your ranks.

After picking your party, proceed through the streets of Lowtown until you encounter a mage cornered by templars. You can stand back and watch the initial part of this battle unfold from a safe distance, perhaps contributing long-range AoE attacks to the fracas, but your complete involvement is assured with the arrival of additional Fade creatures. Unless they actively engage your party members, you will benefit by leaving the templars (especially the Lieutenant) alone: these will distract the more numerous Shades and Rage Demons, which will work in your favor. A mage with Mind Blast could make use of that talent to potentially redirect templar aggression whenever possible.

The next fight is against a Desire Demon and an army of Abominations, with the following confrontation plunging you into a pitched brawl between templars and mages allied to your cause. Making a stand at the top of the steps will subject you to assault from both sides, so you may wish to move down the slope and draw templars to your position.

On arrival at the Docks, a Blood Mage summons a daunting collection of Shades before attacking with typical venom. Smite this particular foe with everything you have, then use AoE attacks to weaken the numerous swarming hostiles as the Pride Demon enters the fray. Turn to page 231 to learn more about this beast's strengths and weaknesses. The most important tips we can offer are to move away whenever it stands poised to charge or if you notice the blue AoE radius that appears prior to its Crushing Prison-style attack.

At the Gallows Courtyard, there is an opportunity to persuade lost party members to return to the fold. Inside the Gallows Prison, you can take a moment to speak with your companions before asking Orsino to advance. Save your progress before you do so (we would recommend that you use a new slot), then make your final party selection. When the templars attack, run forward to engage them on the bridge area. Creating a bottleneck here will concentrate the battle in a confined space, which is beneficial with so many allies fighting alongside you. See the page to your right for information on the battle with Orsino.

There are three simultaneous Rage Demons and even more Shades just inside the Templar Hall. Beyond the door, however, is the welcome sight of Sandal and his improvised store. Buy as many potions as you need, offload junk, then move on. Head south to fight a massive group of templars. Another multi-wave attack awaits you in the central area; in the last part of this fight, Aveline or Fenris may confront Hawke. When the dust settles, leave via the area exit to reach the final showdown with Meredith.

Pirates Outlaws Ports Quests

Magistrate's Orders

Start Location

- Highmoor (Day)

Requirements

- Complete the Birthright conquest

Walkthrough

- Speak to Magistrate Isenard in Highmoor (he's located close to the Chamber's Bound and agree to accept/start the conquest mission

Walkthrough

- Travel to the Abandoned Ruins in the Fire Biome(s). Approach the group of guards at the center of the zone to begin the mission. Speak to Captain Ulfgar and agree to help him. Defeat the Ancient Guardians that spawn in the area. Once all are defeated, there will be a chest to the north to begin loot.
- Enter the Ruined Passage near the zone. Its found to the north(-ish) of the base, predominately East Darkness. It will be a crumbling section of the structure (to the W). Be on it, clear all loot dropped by the enemies, and then one of them summons the Queen Ant Mother (has a queen for the Ancients). Same push, it will be dropping. The queen will be the only one that drops loot, so be sure to kill her last. Once she's dead, loot the chest in the room to complete the conquest.
- Across the world (well, out to the north-western). The target is a Knight-Errant(-ish) agent Sydney Sol (he moves around a lot). Once you've found him, speak to him and agree to help him. Sydney will then begin to escort you to the Ruined Passage. Keep him alive and follow him to the chest.
- If you choose to kill Sydney, you can loot the chest by yourself. Sadly, it's not bound, will leave to disgust when you report in to end the quest. The loot is a random one from a table.

Bait and Switch

Start Location

- Sanctum Portal

Requirements

- Complete A Genuine Declaration

Walkthrough

- Head the Lich Guard Allies on the Wing Biome and Sanctum Portals

Walkthrough

- Travel to Lowtown at night to meet Alex De Corbeil, then head to the Abandoned House adjacent to the southwest corner of the zone. Enter the house and speak to Alex. He'll tell you that he's been kidnapped by Cultists and that you need to find them and rescue him. Head to the Cultist Hideout in the Fire Biome(s) and enter the cave. Kill all of the Cultists and then loot the chest to end the quest.
- After the cutscene, the Sanctum Portal will open. The entire group will receive reinforcements, so be sure to allow your party to heal between waves. Defeat all of the enemies that are summoned. Once they're all dead, the Portal will close and the quest will be complete.

- Meet Rufus in the Highlight Isolate zone, near other Adventurer's Biome. This will be where he stands by his cart. Speak to him and agree to help him find his missing wife. Head to the Ancient Ruins Portal Guardians.
- Fight your way through numerous Ancient Guardians in the Ancient Ruins Biome – a fairly apparent side-quest is triggered by the Ancient Guardians that spawn in the area. Defeat them all, and then loot the chest in the room to the north. Once you've done so, return to the Adventurer's Biome. Return to the large room with the cave because that lead to a mezzanine level. Here, you'll find Rufus's wife, Rosalyn, waiting for you.

- Under the Magister's Chambers is Eagan the apprentice of an Arcane Hand. The cameos says Eagan owes him money, and he's been avoiding him. Head to the Magister's Chambers and speak to Eagan. He'll tell you that he's been avoiding Arcane Hand because he's embarrassed, and that he's been hiding in the Ancient Ruins Biome.
- Head to the back wall of the zone. Ensure that you have collected everything of note, then return to Highmoor. After the automatic conversation with Arcane Hand, the quest there is in done.

- If you refuse to help Hand in your first meeting, regard is still the end of the world. Once you've done the Ancient Ruins quest, you can return to Hand and choose the Help Rufus Find Guardians. you will presumably have the option to send him with the assistance he provided (similar).

Completion Guidance

- There have a deeply ingrained sense of regret, as a Hands weren't in the scenes with who's dead in their first meeting. Hand dies about the end of the quest. If you refuse to help guide Rufus to his wife, Hand will live. Rufus will then head to the Ancient Ruins Biome on his own. Once he's there, he'll find his wife's body and kill himself. Hand's resident and begin acting erratic, progressively more and more in the order for Adventurer Allies. Once he's reached the Ancient Ruins Biome, no one can help you, and he'll disappear if you've refused to help him.

Favors

Though the current board does only have a single quest available, it's a pretty good one. The Crushed Tome is a solid source of Experience, and the Ancient Ruins Biome is a good place to farm Ancient Guardians for Ancient Fragments.

- The events of Rain and Tandori would have provided most players with sufficient insight to appreciate the Crushed Tome as a valuable item. Rain's Tome of Power is a powerful source of Experience, and Tandori's Tome of Power is a powerful source of Gold. Events that do not fall into either category are known as Other Events.
- The Other Events available at Stages 1 and 2 are relatively uninteresting and not a couple of occurrences. Events with the Whitewater are meant as an introduction to the Whitewater Faction, and Events at Stage 3 are the prerequisites of Ancient. more than any other party members, for protection for many of the player. As a rule of thumb, Events that are not mentioned in this section are Other Events. Other Events are not worth the player's time.
- Approximately midway through the trial, an invite to the cultivator equipment, you'll encounter a room containing the Whitewater Faction Leader, Ancient. Ancient will be surrounded by a group of Whitewater Faction Members and will be channeling a powerful spell.
- Prepare your party and set-expertise-rules (usually needed to the boss's AoE Cooldown and the equipped rooster. To the power when prepared, Ancient will cast a spell and eventually gain the ability to summon a powerful companion.

- In addition to other loot, the Ancient Chapter drops the Dragon Tusk, a new resource for the Hanseatic Sea. You can use Dragon Tusk to craft a new piece of gear for the Hanseatic Sea set. Dragon Tusk is also used to craft a new piece of gear for the Sword Guard.
- Return to Highmoor and report to Ancient.

Completion Guidance

- On completion of the quest, Sea Bard is Dark Angels immediately.
- If you choose not to complete The Bone Pit before traveling to the Deep Forest, Hades cannot become a partner in the Deep Forest. Hades will be available in the Bone Pit.
- Next week, you'll be offered secondary quests related to the Ants in Act 2. Decide (and keep the most noteworthy of these quests.

Get Back to Work

Requirements

- Reputation with Ancient

Walkthrough

- Speak to Ancient in Lowtown during the day. You can attempt to charm or intimidate the Ancient when interacting to quest (charisma, or you can offer him a bribe. There is no difference either way.

Companion Quests

Duty

Start Location:

- Highdrawn

Requirements:

- You must have access to the Premium Content entitled The Exiled Prince and have completed the quest of the same name.
- Unlike many other companion quests, this can be completed during Act 1 or Act 2.

Walkthrough:

- The Flint Company Mercenary groups can be found in the Docks at night, close to the main Sundermount entrance, and in the northeast corner of the Wounded Coast. We would suggest that you deal with them when other quests lead you to these locations.
- Once all three groups have been defeated, return to the Chantry and speak with Sebastian to complete the quest.

Consequences:

- Completing Duty leads to the Repentance companion quest, which is available from the start of Act 2. If you have already reached Act 2, Repentance should be playable immediately.

The Way It Should Be

Start Location:

- Viscount's Keep

Requirements:

- Complete the A Friend in the Guard main plot quest by visiting Axeline in the Viscount's Keep barracks.
- Axeline must be in your party when you visit the Sundermount Ambush Site location and for all subsequent stages of this quest.

Walkthrough:

- On arrival at the Sundermount Ambush Site, fight your way through Raiders until you reach the southwest corner of the map. This area cannot be accessed again once you leave, so you may wish to be thorough in collecting loot (there is a crafting ingredient here).
- When the main ambush begins, try to draw enemies to your party's position: there are traps situated around the rocks. Once all hostiles have been disabled, leave the area and return to the Viscount's Keep barracks. Interact with the marked door, then check the duty roster.
- Travel to Lowtown at night. On arrival at the waypoint, kill Guardsman Donno's attackers; be mindful of additional foes that arrive at the alley entrance. Finally, return to the Viscount's Keep for the quest's closing cutscenes.

Consequences:

- If you do not complete The Way It Should Be before you leave for the Deep Roads Expedition (and, therefore, the conclusion of Act 1), Axeline's Act 3 companion quest (Favor and Fault) will not take place.

Birthright

Start Location:

- Garrien's House

Requirements:

- Complete the A New Home? main plot quest by visiting Garrien's hovel in Lowtown for the first time.

Walkthrough:

- Talk to Mother in Garrien's House, then speak with Bethany or Carver as applicable.
- Travel to Darktown, then head to the Arnell Estate Cellar. Hawke's surviving sibling is locked into the party once you enter.
- If Carver is present, visit the store room area to loot the chest for Tobrius's Documents or, with Bethany at your side, the Portrait of Your Mother item. This begins a companion quest related to your sibling; see Consequences. You must collect either item before you depart as it isn't possible to return at a later date.
- This quest may be your first encounter with the Assassin and Mage enemy types. See pages 223 and 230 of the Bestiary chapter for more information on these adversaries.
- Collect the Vault Key from the Master Dozer's remains after the battle in the anteroom, then enter the estate vault to pick up Grandfather Arnell's Will and Testament from the chest. If you haven't fully reconsidered the area for loot, decline your sibling's suggestion that you leave immediately: doing so will automatically transport you to Garrien's House, and there's no way to return here.
- The chest also contains the Fereldan Girded Plating companion armor upgrade for Carver or the Heirloom Arnell Protective Sigils equivalent for Bethany.

Consequences:

- Completing this quest and looting the chests in the store room unlocks Family History if Carver is alive or Portrait of the Past if Bethany survived the Prologue. You can have conversations that reflect on the quest's conclusion with each family member in Garrien's House.
- The conclusion of this quest also triggers Magistrate Varandi's appearance in Highdrawn (he provides the Magistrate's Orders secondary quest), and a letter at Garrien's House that leads to The Bone Pit: a venture with profitable follow-up quests in Act 1 and (predominately) Act 2.

Family History

Start Location:

- Arnell Estate Cellar (during Birthright quest only)

Requirements:

- Carver must have survived the Prologue.
- The Tobrius's Documents item was collected from a chest in the Arnell Family Cellar storeroom during the Birthright quest.

Walkthrough:

- Travel to the Gallows and speak with Tobrius.
- Return to Garrien's House to speak to Carver. Your dialogue choices govern his reaction, but a pleasant tone should yield a sizable shift towards friendship.

Portrait of the Past

Start Location:

- Arnell Estate Cellar (during Birthright quest only)

Requirements:

- Bethany must have survived the Prologue.
- The Portrait of Your Mother item was collected from a chest in the Arnell Family Cellar storeroom during the Birthright quest.

Walkthrough:

- Visit Bethany at Garrien's House after having collected the Portrait of Your Mother during the Birthright quest. Speak to her, and Hawke will offer it as a gift for a high boost to friendship.

Questions and Answers

Requirements:

- Begins automatically on completion of the Tranquility main plot quest.
- Travel to The Hanged Man during the day. The quest ends once you have conversed with Varric. Speak to Isabela at the bar before you leave to begin the Fools Rush In quest.

Isabela's Contact

Requirements:

- Begins automatically on completion of Fools Rush In.
- Travel to The Hanged Man and speak with Isabela: as is her wont, you'll find her propping up the bar. This short conversation formally unlocks the Finders Keepers secondary quest.

Talk to Anders

Start Location:

- Darktown

Requirements:

- Complete Tranquility and return to Darktown to visit Anders.

Walkthrough:

- If Anders is in your current party, you'll still need to enter his clinic in the north of the map to initiate dialogue.
- This is a simple conversation, but it provides the first opportunity to establish a friendship or rivalry and take the initial steps on the road to forging a more intimate relationship with the troublous mage.

Companion Guidance:

- The first aggressive option ("Don't do it again") precludes future relationship opportunities and leads to a high rivalry increase. In general, rebuffing his advances (or otherwise disregarding his feelings) in a cruel or dismissive way will have a similar effect.
- For the highest possible friendship boost with Anders, pick:
- "It happens a lot."
- "You did the right thing."
- When he asks if he is making you uncomfortable: "No".
- Make characters only should follow that with: "I'm sorry".

Welcome Home

Requirements:

- Complete the Long Way Home main plot quest.
- Visit Merrill's Home – it's in Lowtown's Elven Alienage district – and speak with her there. As with other such follow-up conversations, the quest ends once the dialogue is over.

Nice Crime You Have Around Here

Requirements:

- To obtain this mini-quest (actually just a simple but amusing conversation with Merrill at her home in Lowtown), you must fulfill at least one of the following conditions:
- Give Solivitus any of the three ingredients required for the Herbalist's Tasks secondary quest.
- Complete Blackpowder Promise, Wayward Son or The Unbidden Rescue.

Fenris Recruited

Requirements:

- Starts on completion of the Bait and Switch secondary quest if you choose to enlist Fenris.
- Visit Fenris's Mansion (previously Danarius's Manor) and speak with the elf to complete the quest. Ideally, you should do this immediately after the conclusion of Bait and Switch, which leaves you standing right outside his front door. This conversation provides the first opportunity to establish a sexual relationship with Fenris through flirting or to quell the flickering embers of romance before they ever burst into flames.

"Find and Deliver" Side Quests

Grocery of the Apparatus	Sanctuary	Start the Grocery of the Apparatus quest with quest- and plot-enough items (you'll still need the Rattlesnake Special, Kookie's Pommel, and Dead Thane's Remains) Deliver the items to Grandmaster Eudelus in Darktown.

In Act 1, all "find and deliver" side quests lead to a reward of 50 silver and 250 XP.

The Conspirators

Start Location:

- Lowtown (Day)

Requirements:

- Available if you import a save file in which the Silver Order was formed and your character chose to save Vigil's Keep for Dragon Age: Origins – Awakening.

Walkthrough:

- Speak to Sergeant Jashera, who is situated close to The Hanged Man, to accept the task of slaying Anonymous conspirators. If you own the quest on your first visit to Lowtown, you can fulfill the requirements of her conversation before completing certain quests.
- The four groups are located in Redgrave. The Wavering Rose (positioned to Highbridge), the Docks and the west side of Bunkermund. After clearing all four, return to Sergeant Jashera in Lowtown to turn in the quest.

Terror on the Coast

Start Location:

- The Wounded Coast

Requirements:

- Only appears if you are using an imported Dragon Age: Origins save file where you played the Warden's Keep expansion and chose to spare Sophia Dryden.

Walkthrough:

- Walk along the path leading west from the main Wounded Coast entrance point. The quest will begin as you fight the Cave Spiders.
- Sophia Dryden can be found further west from the quest start location. Prepare your party before you approach her she's supported by Mabari and Apostate Mages.
- Given that it's a short walk from the quest start point to its bloody conclusion, the rewards are rather few. Dryden relinquishes the Robes of Hidden Pockets (an interesting armor choice for mages) and a reasonable sum of gold.

Dark Epiphany

Start Location:

- The Wounded Coast

Requirements:

- Only appears if you are using an imported Dragon Age: Origins save file where you played the Warden's Keep expansion and chose to spare Anonymous.

Walkthrough:

- Walk along the path leading west from the main Wounded Coast entrance until you are attacked by Bandits close to a ruins site. Loot the Dark Messenger to begin the quest.
- Use the Avernus's Experimental Engine (located within immediately) this extensive bonus grants two free eldritch pools.
- As you leave the camp site, additional Bandits will attack. You may wish to save after collecting the Grey Warden Documents.
- Hold Lieheart during the duo to find the dead drop, where Maevaroas await your arrival. Defeat them (watch out for attacks from behind), then interact with the marked barrel.
- Travel to Gambler's Haven and read the letter at the Mining Docks to complete the quest.

Secret Rendezvous

Start Location:

- The Hanged Man (Night)

Requirements:

- Only available if you are playing Dragon Age 2 with an imported save file in which you chose to save Anonymous in Dragon Age: Origins – Awakening or if you opted for the hero of Ferelden or The Mabari background options during character creation.
- Complete the Fools Rush in secondary quest.
- Speak to the Suspicious Lady in The Hanged Man at night.

Walkthrough:

- Travel to the Docks at night and head for the Warehouse district.
- To obtain the bonus for eavesdropping on the meeting, stand on the steps above and wait for the conversation to end. You should be automatically detected at this point.
- Kill all hostiles in the area, you may find it useful to order your party to hold at the top of the steps as this will force your opponents to come to your position and reduce the risk of being surrounded.
- Return to The Hanged Man at night and report to the Suspicious Lady.

Last Of His Line

Start Location:

- Docks (Day)

Requirements:

- You must have imported a Dragon Age: Origins save where Bhelen was crowned King of Orzammar or, alternatively, allowed the Mabari as your background option during the character creation process.

Walkthrough:

- Agree to help Hannerstown on the west side of the Docks, then approach the Cyclist Lieutenant at the top of the steps and speak to him to begin the quest. Head to the Docks at night and speak to Ser Cyclist Lieutenant to begin the battle. Defeat the Cyclist Lieutenants. If you agree to side with the Cyclist, simply return and attack Hannerstown. After he and his Dwarven Bodyguards are dead, return to the Lieutenant to receive your payment.
- If you refuse the offer, the Cyclist representatives will attack immediately. They will be reinforced partway through the battle, but this is nothing you can't handle. Travel to the west side of the Docks and kill all Cyclist groups you encounter, then return to Hannerstown.

Consequences:

- Choosing to side with the Cyclist will pay three sovereigns as opposed to Hannerstown's one, but the coded note will keep his promise to deliver additional coin to Hawke at a later date (you will receive five sovereigns and a piece of armor with a name at the start of Act 2). Fighting on Rencin's behalf will also lead to a higher XP gain.

Changing Ova's Nature

Start Location:

- Bunkermouth

Requirements:

- None.

Walkthrough:

- It makes sense to complete this quest at the same time as Long Way Home, which leads you to the northern area of Bunkermouth. After collecting all four items, return to Ciara to receive payment.
- The chest containing Purified Deathroot is directly opposite Ciara.
- The Alchemically Sealed Flask is on the far west side of Bunkermouth in a ruined building, just north of the area exit.
- The Taina Distilled Quicksilver is hidden behind a wall just south of the Bunkermouth Cannery entrance.
- The Elixir Rathbeet shard is in plain view east of the Elixir Graveyard, on the other side of Bunkermouth Cannery.

Miracle Makers

Start Location:

- Lowtown

Requirements:

- You must have imported a Dragon Age: Origins save where you chose to reveal the existence of Andraste's ashes during the Urn of Sacred Ashes quest or, alternatively, selected The Mortal as your background option during the character creation process.

- Visit Lowtown and find a crowd gathered around a watchman in the square. Wait for a while, and a guardsman will arrive to break up the mob. Speak to Sergeant Melinda to begin the quest.

Walkthrough:

- Head for the waypoint and speak to the individual named simply as "Swindler". This will initiate combat. The ringleader is an Assassin, but all other enemies are easy-silenced Cache Thugs.
- Once all enemies have been killed, return to Sergeant Melinda to complete the quest.

Gangs

Visiting Highever, Lowtown or the Docks at night will lead to combat with groups of assailants. Though these skirmishes may seem random at first, they are actually an integral part of a larger set of quests in which Hawke and cohorts can strike a powerful blow to Kirkwall's criminal underworld.

- Gangs encountered on the streets usually consist of a mixture of ranged and melee fighters. The initial group is always encountered in Lowtown, and the second group is encountered in the Docks. Both groups are relatively easy to defeat, even for your opponents to join. Above all else, ensure that your ranged fighters are not surrounded as new adversaries enter the fray.
- You may need to visit the area on more than one occasion to kill a sufficient number of gang members. When you see the required threshold, a text message will scroll the Kirkwall beginning of the side quest. A journal entry will appear, and the faction lookout will be marked on the map. Refer to the appropriate side quest entry for further details.
- After killing your first gang leader and leaving their base, your party will be approached by a strange who possesses rewards for your continued efforts in inciting Kirkwall's gang war. You can visit this individual in The Hanged Man to claim your payment after each gang has been neutralized.
- New gangs will appear during Act 2 and Act 3, some scarcely the same, but different opponents. You must defeat all nine bands as soon as possible to claim your reward.

Night Lies

Start Location:

- Highever (Night)

Requirements:

- Visit Highever at night and kill the groups of enemies known as Guardsmen Pretenders until the quest is awarded in a short cut message.

Walkthrough:

- The Shallowgaard Base is accessed via the marked entrance in northeast Highever.
- As further Shallowgaard opponents arrive via the main entrance once the battle begins, you may profit by manually stationing your party on the upper level of the main room before or after you engage "Captain" Garth.

Poor Pressure

Start Location:

- Docks (Night)

Requirements:

- Visit the Docks at night and kill the gangs of Redcliffe Raiders that appear until the quest is awarded in a pop-up message.

Walkthrough:

- Once the side quest has been awarded, head to the Warehouse entrance in the southwest of the Docks.
- The Redcliffe "Saint" gang is led by a buccaneer named Leech, a brood mage. Make him your absolute priority.
- In the fight, practically ignoring all other opponents and the Saint. Depending on your difficulty setting, you may need to micromanage this battle very carefully, using a considered sequence of debilitating attacks (to prevent or curtail his healing) and defensive spells (to keep your party alive). Alternatively, you may wish to simply rush him down and hope that your offensive spells and attacks overwhelm his defenses. Either way, you'll be victorious. See page 232 for more advice on fighting the blood mage enemy type.
- Further enemies will spawn during the battle, so you may wish to move everyone to the top of the steps (or, safer still, the room beyond it) once Leech has been dispatched in order to reduce the number of foes you face simultaneously.

Sharp Little Pinpricks

Start Location:

- Lowtown (Night)

Requirements:

- Visit Lowtown at night and kill the gangs of Sharps Alphagrowls that appear until the quest is awarded in a pop-up message.

Walkthrough:

- Enter the Sharps base via the entrance marked Hovel on the east side of Lowtown.
- This fight involves fewer enemies than you have seen in other gang-related quests, but takes place in a very confined area. Use the Rain of Stones area-damage Spirits Mana-Drain as however, as intelligent use of AoE attacks will enable you to keep Vigil's Keep safe.

Premium Content

The Exiled Prince

Lost and Found: 4 stars

Start Location:

- Highever

Requirements:

- You must have access to this Premium Content quest. For further details, visit dragonage.com/dlcfaceoff.

Walkthrough:

- This is basic "quest" per se and more of a formal introduction to Sebastian. Approach the waypoint marker close to the Chantry in Highever to trigger a cutscene. Once this ends, approach the Chantry's front and accept the Holy companion quest to wrap up The Exiled Prince.

Consequences:

- Unlocks Sebastian Vael as a potential companion in Act 2 and his related quests. The first of these, Duty, is available immediately.

The Black Emporium

Lost and Found: 4 stars

Requirements:

- You must have access to this Premium Content quest. For further details, visit dragonage.com/dlcfaceoff.
- Read the letter at Gamlen's House to receive a formal invitation to the Black Emporium.

Walkthrough:

- Simply enter the Black Emporium via the main Kirkwall map to complete this quest. Again, like The Exiled Prince, it's merely an excuse to getting you to a particular location.
- The Black Emporium features several combat areas, two shops that contain interesting items (many of which will be unavailable to your party members) and a host of lore. Ensure that you read the books dotted around the various rooms and forest. The contents flow equipment that will give your character a considerable boost during the early stages of Act 2. We suggest that you outfit Hawke with items suitable for your chosen class; keep weapons that you don't need for companions (future or present) then sell unneeded armor at one of the stores to generate funds.
- The Mirror of Transformation can be used to change Hawke's appearance, thumbnail portrait or name. Using it may cause your character to receive their normal headgear, so be sure to remove it before you head out.

Finding Home

Start Location:

- Highseat.

Note: Only activated if Hawke (and Bartrand is full for his part in the Deep Roads Expedition. Unlocks Blackpowder Courtesy and Prime Suspect on completion.

Profit and Loss

Start Location:

- Highseat.

Blackpowder Courtesy

Start Location:

- Dunter Compound in the Docks.

Note: Dorn Dugan to collect the Ship-in-a-Bottle from a chest near the north exit in Smuggler's Cut. This is a gift for Isabela – see page 8.

Consequences:

- Unlocks the Offered and Lost main plot quest, and the Chasers, Mimic image, Air Update and The Long Road companion quests.
- Certain actions in the Blackpowder Courtesy, Offered and Lost and Following the Gun quests can increase or reduce the Admiral's respect for Hawke. These actions are highlighted throughout this chapter. Gaining sufficient level of respect has an effect on the climax of Act 2, and will also unlock a reactive side quest in Act 3.

Companion Guidance:

- Both Avelline and Sebastian will disapprove if you choose to kill the hapless jurors.

Offered and Lost

Requirements:

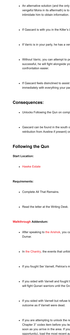
- Complete Blackpowder Courtesy.

Walkthrough: Addendum:

- After speaking with Sereonal Bran, you can make an optional visit to the Arishok to inform him that the Qunari delegates have disappeared. He deeply respects this decision.
- There are a few potential outcomes to the meeting with Oswalt the Braggart in The Hanged Man.
- If you have Avelline in your party, you can call on her to resolve the situation without bloodshed (and gain a medium relationship boost).
- Choose to question Oswalt yourself, and a fight will start. Having Varric Tethras in your party will reduce the number of opponents you face: their faces are well known at this end, and so these jurymen will be foolish enough to join the melee.
- If Isabela is not in your current party and is propping up the bar, she will join the fight as soon as it breaks out.
- If the Forbidden Knowledge side quest is active, an Evil Tome can be found in the south area of the Chantry. Refer to page 36 to learn more about the Chantry and its relationship with the Qunari.
- As the conversation with Viscount Dumar, allow the Test to fail (i.e. Hint/Vote' response to gain maximum respect from the Arishok when you return to him. Burning the bodies, however, leads to an extreme side quest – see Consequences.
- Collect the Shield of the Knight-Errant from the crate to the southeast of the map. This is a gift for Bethany, and will help the companion quest of the same name.

Consequences:

- Only fighting the Qunari (rather than Ser Varnet) will enable you to side with the fanatics who so incite them later in the Act.
- There are optional follow-up conversations to be had with Petrice and the Arishok if you visit the Chantry on Queen Cortrauven after the quest ends. The meeting with the Arishok can feature optional reactions based on your earlier decisions.
- If you sided with Varnet, attempting to lie to the Arishok when he asks about the fate of the soldiers he sent to find the delegates will disappoint him. The bad truth, by contrast, will increase his respect for Hawke.
- If you advised the viscount to burn the bodies of the delegates, the Qunari leader will have specific words to say on the matter. Only returning the delegates in a state that does nothing to conceal the fortune they endured (and doing nothing to deny the valiant fight) will engender his respect.
- Choosing to burn the bodies before they are sent to the Qunari unlocks a side quest called The Test in Act 3.



Prime Suspect

Start Location:

- Hawke Estate.

Requirements:

- Complete Finding Home/Profit and Loss.

Walkthrough: Addendum:

- Accept the letter from the Shining Blade.

Walkthrough Addendum:

- Avelline makes a sizable contribution to the opening conversation with Emeric if included in your party.
- The DuPuis-Estate features a collection of pet "vices", some of which are Codex entries. If Merrill or Anders are present as your allies, they will offer an insight on the Fade-affiliated pet they own.
- When you meet Davenant, there are two paths you can choose from:
- If you offer to help, he can potentially play a rather significant role in the All That Remains quest.
- If you refuse to believe his explanation, you will be forced to kill him.
- When Mons asks if Davenant is responsible for Emeric's death, confirming her suspicions will forestall his involvement in All That Remains. Selecting 'I don't think so' is the best choice in terms of Mons' relationship.

Consequences:

- Unlocks Inside Job, Ink Goodie and (with Offered and Lost completed at a point later) the All That Remains main plot quest.

All That Remains

Requirements:

- Complete Prime Suspect and Offered and Lost.

Walkthrough: Addendum:

- You can optionally report Leandros's disappearance to Mons in the Sailbow, though doing so has no lasting effect.
- There are two ways to gain entrance to the Dark Foundry:
- If Davenant is alive, you can find him in Darktown. Tell him to perform the ritual. Perhaps reflecting the gravity of the matter, Leopoldine will usually respond badly to blood magic and the one instance (see without comment) in Darktown. Alternatively, the instant transition to the Dark Foundry. Davenant will accompany your party through the area.
- An alternative solution (and the only available path if Davenant was killed during Prime Suspect, or hunted by a vengeful Mons) is to attempt to bribe the Dark Foundry's caretaker, Argyll. Speak to him in the entrance and allow your Inventory to be shown information. Follow the blood trail to the Dark Foundry entrance.
- If Davenant is with you in the Mother's Lair for the meeting with Gamlen, there are three possible outcomes:
- If there is no poor party, he has a very interesting reaction.
- Without Varric, you can attempt to persuade Gamlen to leave town by current path via a diplomacy option. If successful, he will leave Kirkwall alongside you in the battle with Quentin. Having this blood mage on your side should make the confrontation much easier.
- If Davenant feels disinclined to assist Hawke, he will join Quentin for the final battle. In this instance, target him immediately with everything your party has: you do not want him alive when the first Dactor Demon appears.

Consequences:

- Unlocks Following the Gun on completion, and The Captain's Condolences companion quest.
- Davenant can be found in the south of Darktown if he survived the quest. You can opt to let him go (via a little light persuasion), or to kill him. Doing so will have consequences in Act 3 – the second of the Act 3 if you spare him.

Following the Gun

Start Location:

- Hawke Estate.

Requirements:

- Complete All That Remains.

Walkthrough: Addendum:

- You can optionally report Leandros's disappearance to Mons in the Sailbow, though doing so has no lasting effect.
- There are two ways to gain entrance to the Dark Foundry:

Following the Gun

Start Location:

- Hawke Estate.

Requirements:

- Complete All That Remains.

Walkthrough: Addendum:

- Read the letter at the Writing Desk.

Walkthrough: Addendum:

- After speaking to the Arishok, you can optionally return to the Viscount's Keep to update the increasingly despondent Dumar.
- At the Chantry, the events that unfold are determined by your actions in Offered and Lost.
- If you fought Ser Varnet, Petrice's now will attack immediately.
- If you sided with Varnet and fought the Qunari, you have the opportunity to side with Petrice. In this event/reality, you will fight Qunari warriors and the Qunari Elder alone. This is the only path in which Petrice can survive the battle.
- If you sided with Varnet but refuse to support Petrice at this juncture, her Righteous Mob will attack. It's the same outcome as if Varnet were dead.
- After speaking to the Arishok to inform him that the Qunari delegates have disappeared, you can make an optional visit to the Arishok. He deeply respects this decision.
- There are a few potential outcomes to the meeting with Oswalt the Braggart in The Hanged Man.

- If the Forbidden Knowledge side quest is active, an Evil Tome can be found in the south area of the Chantry. Refer to page 36 to learn more about the Chantry and its relationship with the Qunari.
- You can only fight the Qunari at Ser Varnet's Refuge if you have been playing as an "oppressive" Hawke (see page 34) and pick the "Here's your proof" bonus dialogue line. This path influences your future options in Following the Qun.
- In the conversation with Viscount Dumar, allow the Test to fail (i.e. Hint/Vote' response to gain maximum respect from the Arishok when you return to him. Burning the bodies, however, leads to an extreme side quest – see Consequences.
- Collect the Shield of the Knight-Errant from the crate to the southeast of the map. This is a gift for Bethany, and will help the companion quest of the same name.

- At the Chantry, the events that unfold are determined by your actions in Offered and Lost.
- If you fought Ser Varnet, Petrice's now will attack immediately.
- If you sided with Varnet and fought the Qunari, you have the opportunity to side with Petrice. In this event/reality, you will fight Qunari warriors and the Qunari Elder alone. This is the only path in which Petrice can survive the battle.
- If you sided with Varnet but refuse to support Petrice at this juncture, her Righteous Mob will attack. It's the same outcome as if Varnet were dead.

Demands of the Qun

Requirements:

- Finish To Catch a Thief if Isabela was not recruited in Act 1, completing Following the Qun will suffice.

Walkthrough: Addendum:

- A reminder: entering the Qunari Compound really is the point of no return for Act 2. If you have anything else you wish to attend to, do so beforehand.
- On arrival in Lowtown, the Charger Party screen will appear. This is your last opportunity to select your party for the battle ahead. Choose wisely: you will not be able to change your party for the final push, meaning Prime is the party's only way to engineer one of the three possible resolutions.
- You will encounter a party of Grey Wardens while travelling through Lowtown. If you are using an imported save game or power point background screen, Alistair remained in Weisshaupt: Dragon Age: Origins. He will be the leader of this party. If you have a Grey Warden in your party, you can choose to be the Grey Warden at the crossroads of the Deep Roads Expedition, and will also meet them here.
- Rather than going straight for the manifest root in Lowtown, continue on south to the fight against an army of Lowtown. The majority of these are pitifully weak, but the Codex Regular (an Assassin) that joins partway through the battle is a more noteworthy threat.
- If Bethany joined the Circle, or Carver signed up with the templars, you will cross paths with them in Highever.
- When you approach the Viscount's Keep, you have a choice on how to gain entrance:
- If you accept the offer of a distraction, you are transported to the Keep without further conflict.
- If you choose to fight, there is an additional battle with the Qunari warriors assembled in front of the entrance.
- The Arishok's address to the terrified nobility is always funny-sounding nonsense interesting. After the brief aside where you fight the Qunari, there are two possibilities: either Isabela makes a timely return to the hall (which is only possible if she has completed the mid-stage relationship quest; see page 36), or she remains imprisoned in the dungeons.
- If Isabela returns, you have two options: defend her, or hand her to the Arishok.
- If you choose to stand by the wayward rogue, you must confront the Arishok – either in a duel, or alongside his Qunari.
- Altering the Arishok to take Isabela back to the homelands instead of you to end this Act without further violence – but at the expense of losing her as a companion.
- If Isabela is not present, or if you opt to defend her, you can resolve the situation in one of two ways.
- If you have gained the Arishok's respect, select the 'Or the battlefield' option when he asks how Hawke would resolve the conflict, to begin a one-on-one duel.
- All other dialogue options lead to a more conventional fight against the Arishok and his entourage. However, if Petrice is present, he will put forward a new for a duel. Accept this, and you can battle the Qunari leader alone: refusal leads to the Righteous Mob attacking.

Companion Guidance:

- If you choose the duel, note that this is by far the most difficult conclusion to the Act. Make gradual use of abilities and spells that might incapacitate the Arishok throughout the battle, avoiding those that expedite his mobility or a flattering lifeforce around the pitiless Qunari to his assaults until you are ready to show your aggression. Another tactic that works well is to have a character with a Taunt ability (Aveline, Sebastian, Varric) engage the Arishok while the rest of the party stands back from attack as he passes. He will automatically target the nearest party member, so be prepared for an extended encounter.

Consequences:

- The manner in which you defeat the Arishok has an effect on the closing cutscene of the Act.
- If Isabela does not return at the eleventh hour, or is taken away by the Qunari, she really is gone for good.

Companion Guidance:

- If you disagree with Avelline's command ("That doesn't excuse murder!") during the opening dialogue with the Arishok, you will experience a rivalry increase with her (and, if present, Sebastian as well).
- Allowing Isabela to be taken by the Qunari will lead to rivalry increases with Avelline, Merrill and Varric. Delivering her to the Arishok will lead to rivalry increases with Aveline and Sebastian. The latter depends on how your relationship with the Viscount's Keep has been affected.
- There is a moderate rivalry increase with Petrice if he intervenes to arrange a duel and you refuse the offer, the opposite applies if you accept.

Night Terrors

Start Location

- Hawks Kodak

Requirements

- Accept the letter from the Shining Duke.

Walkthrough

- Speak to Master's Lieutenant's after accepting the letter.

- You can complete these "puzzles" to get a feel of how attitude points for Hawks before you continue with the quest line. The objective here for it is very easy.

- Puzzle #1 (Spoiler): In the room that you arrive in, interact with the floating book to get a single attitude point. In the Soul Reliquary, interact with the Soul Reliquary and choose the first "yes" when it asks you if you want it.

- Puzzle #2 (Diagram): 3. In the corridor to the east you will find the first of two "word puzzles", where you must rearrange the word pieces to a specific order in order to open a number of doors. If you fail, you lose the attitude points. The first puzzle is found in the corridor to the east of the Soul Reliquary. The solution is to arrange the pieces in the order: love one another, hate violence, and strive for the truth.

- Puzzle #3 (Diagram): 4. There is another puzzle in room to the east. The objective here is three-fold only the doors on either side of the room. You must interact with the levers in the order of the numbers in the puzzle. The order to choose is centre-one, left-one, left-two, left-three, centre-two, centre-three, right-three, right-two, right-one.

- Having claimed the available weapons, proceed into the southern corridor. You will be greeted by the Stern Doctor (Sayer), who has a proposal. If Hawks can help him to possess Thyrnok, he will offer a large reward.

- If Hawks is in your party, he will object to your proposal and call the doctor. If you choose the "Back off, Kodak!" option, Hawks will leave your party. If you choose the "Let's hear what he has to say" option, Hawks will stay in your party but start with less maximum attitude points — see: Consequences.

- If you choose to negotiate, the doctor can fulfil one of three potential desires unique (four Attribute Points), Uncommon (two Attribute Points) or Common (one Attribute Point). Choose the Uncommon option to receive the greatest option if desired. Hawks' interests will not be affected by your choice! Once actually done control of the Soul Reliquary, you will receive your reward. Hawks will also leave your party if he is in it. Return to the Shining Duke to complete the quest.

- If you refuse the Stern Doctor's proposal, you must fight him and his cohorts immediately.

- You reform within this shrieking realm where Pazuriel's mortal details, his count disharmony and resolutions his power. The goal is to ensure that he suffers as little impact as possible. Now that Pazuriel's mortal form has been destroyed, he is vulnerable to your attacks.

- Save your progress. Now head into the east room first, the door marked Pazuriel's Disorder. In the room that follows, there are three mechanisms.

- If you attempt to use powerful Pazuriel to go with his father (or notify the Cleaner Demon, Caimeas), his vulnerability will immediately increase.

- If you try to convince Pazuriel that the count is not real, his instability will increase marginally.

- To avoid an instability increase entirely, convince Pazuriel to repent for failure.

- In the aftermath of the dialogue, the Demon Caimeas will reincarnate with Hawks.

- If Hawks is in your party, she will succumb to the Doctor Demon's promise and turn on Hawks, hitting her with level ten from the Fade.

- If Hawks is not in your party he leaves, so she will turn on Hawks instead.

- You must defeat Fiery Hell Hawks of Hawks. Follow up immediately by defeating the Hawks themselves. Especially if you have been interested to engage in unnecessary combat. Unite with your most effective attacks and aim to at least incapacitate Hawks before you defeat the Hawks themselves. Hawks will be easily more thorough the most to ensure he survives.

- As with the earlier scenes, the final you choose is the source of demands will affect Pazuriel's state of mind.

- If you play along with the Pride Demon's attempt to make Pazuriel accept his destiny as a Hawk, you will receive an additional reward from the Shining Duke.

- Attempting to break the true nature of the situation will lead to a overall instability.

- Knowledge Pazuriel to reject his "destiny" and raise concerns over what being a Demoner could represent for Hawks's future.

- The demon will not take kindly to Hawks's interference, and will start a very personal form of retribution before circumstance! unmask these. This will occur in the same way as the equivalent situation with the Pride Demon (Hawks).

- If Mercie is in the party, she will accept the decision of Hawks.

- If Fiona is in the party but Merrin is not, he will succumb to Wynd's promises instead.

- If Fiona is in the party but Merrin and Fiona are not, the storyteller will turn on Hawks.

- As with the earlier scenes, the final you choose is the source of demands will affect Pazuriel's state of mind.

- On your return to the normal room, the central final greets you in is dependent on your choices throughout the quest. If you made a clean sweep, Hawks does not remember a thing.

- If Hawks's mental state is poor, Hawks will remember his experiences in many interferences. Fiona will be incapable of possessing any of. It will share Hawks, Hawks of its inability to complete its part of the task.

- You can engage in the duel to save Pazuriel, but their losses fighting the demon and forgiving the reward (approximately 1,000 XP).

Consequences

- If Hawks's mental state is poor, Hawks will remember his experiences in many interferences. Fiona will be incapable of possessing any of. It will share Hawks, Hawks of its inability to complete its part of the task.

- You can engage in the duel to save Pazuriel, but their losses fighting the demon and forgiving the reward (approximately 1,000 XP).

Companion Guidance

- Hawks's mental state is poor, he will engage in Hopper Age: Digital — Reddenning, or if you chose the Hero of Threnden character background during the Prologue.

- Hawks is Human and starts with a Human design. He belongs to privacy in the Fade will need to speak to Hawks at their home or magical town this quest quest. The possible results of these short companion quests are detailed below.

- If Hawks possesses Feyrwild, you get a very different concluding cutscene and will have access to a reactive event in Act 3.

- A third scenario ensues up to enables if Pazuriel is made Tainted. The reacts to no follow-up events at all to see to the Fade.

- With Hawks, there is a big friendship increase if you select "It was a war" being spared Pazuriel at the end, you will receive a small friendship increase if you choose "It was a war" but Hawks dies. Hawks will not survive if you choose "It was a war" and Hawks dies. Interestingly, Nolvaston is incorruptible in the Fade, which is very useful in the Act 3 battle.

Herbalist's Tasks

Start Location

- Gathorn Courtyard

Requirements

- You have never completed the quest during Act 1.

- Speak to Gathorn and offer your assistance once again.

Walkthrough

- The Herbal's Mount Flower is located in the Woodland Creek. It is found in front of the cave that you enter to find the Ancient Ruins of Threnden.

- Gather Tallow Ink can be acquired from a dead inside the Goblin Camp at the base of Jackhammer. You can talk to the Goblin Shaman in the Goblin Camp to receive the Tallow Ink without killing him.

- The Ivalmer Heart is obtained from the creature found on the east of Merrill's companion quest, Mirror Image.

- Return the ingredients to Gathorn in the Gathorn to pick up your payment.

Fort's Gold

Start Location

- Highpeak

Requirements

- Any available Pathfinder task which is associated to Dragon Age: Origins – Awakening, or if you chose the Hero of Threnden character background during the Prologue.

- Speak to Norhan and agree to help.

Walkthrough

- After accepting the quest, set out for the Outer Roads via the West Way. Ideally, try to equip your mages with Fire Resistance and aim to start casting! Be Vulnerable Well.

- When you reach Fort'ya, you are greeted by a group of Bandits who are standing around a fire. Talk to the Bandit Leader and choose the first option to start combat. There is a very subtle but obvious hint in the dialogue that the Bandits are not actually bandits. That is why they're so easy to defeat.

- Once you have defeated the Bandits, you will receive the Fort's Gold. Return to the Outer Roads and head back to Highpeak. Now head south to the Dwarf Ruins and enter the Outer Roads Portal.

- Head to the Dwarf Ruins and speak with Jordan to be transported to your base.

- The Lost Deadly appointment in the battle is 57 Drow. In stage 2, he is battered a Drow Inscriber, surrounded by Drow Warriors and Drow Priestesses. Use your crossbows to pick off as you can. Close round the Healer if she escaped (which begins the stalled quest), and the Fort Drow – Quartermaster Pellam which signals the deaths.

Consequences

- If you complete the quest, the leader of Fort Maraudine may attempt to assist revenge during a raid for Woodland Creek Act 3.

Inside Job

Start Location

- Gathorn Courtyard

Requirements

- You must have completed The Bone Pit Act 1.

- Complete Prints Support.

- Read the letter at the Writing Desk.

Walkthrough

- Speak to Gaston in Highcrown. Accepting the quest will automatically transport you to a location where Gaston has a meeting with a Bandit Leader. Gaston will be attacked by the Bandit Leader and his bodyguards. Gaston will flee from the location of the stolen goods. After you decide the protection's fate, there is another automatic area transition.

- Arrive at the Outside Ambush map there is an ambush that is about to commence. Once the small wave for celebrations is defeated, the Bandit Leader will arrive with his bodyguards. Gaston will flee from the location of the stolen goods. Gaston represents part of your business in high town, so aggressive actions by additional NPC.

- A small group of thugs await just outside Beldeber's Retreating, but these can be disobeyed with ease. The second group attacks in Dwarven Ruins, Gaston's Ambushed. If you don't, he will likely depart to the upper level and will abandon them upon you party. The battle against Beldeber at the equipment stands tactics, but once you've commenced on the Bandit Leader, they will flee from the quest, and not all of your allies will be happy about that at you.

- Leave the area via the nearby exit and return to Gaston.

Companion Guidance

- Accepting the letter from the Shining Duke also causes Hylea's The Door to Greek to trigger.

- Unlocks a linear sequence of quests based around the Sun Elf Allies. The begins with Coast Crawling, if you were able to listen and Aasimar with him nothing but kindness, you'll be given them a chest with your own set the Aasimar's Gift.

Cave Crawling

Start Location

- The Bone Pit

Requirements

- Complete Inside Job.

- Talk to Bound Spirit approach Jansen.

Walkthrough

- After speaking with Jansen, collect the Fire'Red Human Flag! From a sack south of the mine entrance to begin the Jansen's Search Flags side quest.

- Enter the Bone Pit Mines. The Queen Nasher is just inside the entrance and is supported by a few swarm of Fire Ants. Exploiting the poor accessibility damage will reduce the Ants considerably. Assuming the Ants do not Tear Gaze and reach 0, remain.

Consequences

- Ultimate Cream of Dead.

Act Three Quests

Main plot quests

Showdown

Consequences:

- Though it does not appear as a Journal entry, your choices in the opening dialogue of Act 3 have an influence on who will contact Hawke for the Best Served Cold quest (Oriana if you favor the mages, or Meredith if you sympathize with the templars).

- If you pick a strictly neutral path through this conversation, the letter will most likely be sent by Orsino.

On The Loose

Start Location:

- Hawke Estate

Requirements:

- Accept the letter from the Writing Desk.

Walkthrough Addendum:

- If you have started The Lost Swords, you will find one of the ten Qunari blades in the northeast room of the De Launoit Mansion. Even if he's not a regular traveling partner, it's worth taking Varric along just to see his brief reaction to the Comtesse.

- When you meet Emile, you can actually let him go free. This counts towards the "Arcane Defender" Achievement and Trophy. The other options are to insist that he returns immediately or to first permit him the night of passion he craves.

- If you chose the option to give money to Walter, it will cost five sovereigns. You can find the Rune of Devastation design in the chest next to the Sewer Passage exit.

- Those who opted to let Emile go free can brazenly admit this to Meredith at the end of the quest for a furious reaction or claim that they killed the misguided mage.

Consequences:

- If you encouraged Emile to return to the Circle, the Comte de Launoit will send gold tokens of his appreciation via a letter at the Writing Desk. Emile will then make a cameo in a later quest.

Companion Guidance:

- If Anders is in your party, he will take umbrage at the knight-commander during the closing conversation. Supporting his argument leads to a moderate friendship increase; telling him to be quiet evokes an equivalent increment in rivalry.

Best Served Cold

Start Location:

- Hawke Estate

Requirements:

- Complete On The Loose.

- Accept the letter from the Writing Desk.

Walkthrough Addendum:

- The quest giver depends on your choices in the Act's opening set-piece equable. See Showdown for further information. In all other respects, the actions you perform are identical.

- The Templar Lieutenant you fight in Hightown relinquishes Protection of the Faith, the final armor upgrade for Sebastian.

- After discovering which hostage the conspirators have taken, you can free Karan, threaten to report him, or kill him on the spot. Collect the Blade of Mercy from the nearby chest (a gift for Fenris – see page 104) and the Sigil of the Mage Underground armor upgrade for Anders from the northwest room before you leave.

- The party member who is kidnapped is chosen in the following order of priority:

- If Bethany or Carver survived, they are the conspirators' primary target.

- If Bethany or Carver died in the Deep Roads, the conspirators will kidnap Anders or Merrill if you are in an active romance with either – but only if they are not in the current party.

- If you are in a romance with Isabela or Fenris, they will be taken if left at home for this quest.

- If none of the above conditions are met, the kidnappers will simply snatch the companion with the highest friendship rating who is not accompanying Hawke when you speak to Karan.

- If you completed the Raiders on the Cliffs quest during Act 2 and the trip to the Wounded Coast is your first of Act 3, an individual named Evelis will attack when you arrive.

- All conversations with Thrask lead to the same narrative destination. How you get there is purely a matter of playing the role of Hawke as you see fit.

- Cullen will ask if Hawke has a recommendation for Meredith. "Be merciful" will lead to no further deaths, while "Kill them all" will see the conspirators executed. "Give Samson another chance" will lead to the Fereldan being restored to his position as a templar. If you choose this option, he will appear in a later quest.

The Last Straw

Start Location:

- Hawke Estate

Requirements:

- Complete Best Served Cold.

- Accept the letter from the Writing Desk.

Walkthrough Addendum:

- Be sure to wrap up any outstanding quests before you read the letter as there's no going back once you arrive at the Gallows. You should also note that any items stashed in the Storage chest at the Hawke Estate can be retrieved at a key stage in this quest. If you are playing on higher difficulty levels, placing extra potions inside may be useful.

- There is a lot of notable loot (including some valuable weapons, armor and accessories) in this quest, so don't assume that there's no need to forage for treasures. You may find them useful in future downloadable content, for instance.

- The heated confrontation between Meredith and Orsino in Lowtown places you at a crossroads: no matter which dialogue options you choose, you must commit Hawke to one side or the other. Your decision determines how the next section of the quest will play out and may cause one or more companions to leave Hawke's side.

- If you side with the mages, Fenris will leave immediately unless you have completed all companion quests and his final-stage relationship conversation, Questioning Beliefs. If Fenris leaves, Aveline will stay no matter what happens. If Fenris stays, Aveline will only depart if her friendship level is below 50%.

- If you side with the templars, Anders will leave the party.

- After choosing a side, you must either ask Anders to come with the party, set him free or execute him on the spot.

- Unless you execute Anders, Sebastian will leave permanently. There is no further negotiation on this issue.

- If you set Anders free, those siding with the mages will have an opportunity to ask him to rejoin later in the quest. Players who favor the templar path will have a very different encounter.

- If you kill Anders, he plays no further part in the story.

- If Bethany or Carver joined the Grey Wardens and you completed the Finding Nathanel quest during this Act, they will arrive as you make your way east through Lowtown. You can either let the surviving sibling join up or send them away: in the latter instance, they're gone for good.

- If you side with the templars, you take the same path through Lowtown and the Docks as you would if you sided with the mages, but templars will be your allies, not your foes. This makes the first fight in Lowtown rather easier.

- When you reach the Gallows, there is one last opportunity to persuade companions to stand by you in the final battles.

- Aveline will rejoin if you are on the friendship path, but only if she didn't resign as captain after the events of Favor and Fault.

- Fenris or Merrill can be swayed to come back if you are on the friendship path.

- After you've regrouped with whichever side you are supporting, you have one last chance to speak with Hawke's friends and rivals before the last part of the quest. If you are in a romance, this is the opportunity to "complete" it by speaking to them (and, if all conditions have been met, unlock the "Romantic" Achievement or Trophy). If Anders was set free earlier, he appears in the Gallows Prison and can be invited to rejoin the party. If Bethany survived the Prologue and joined the Circle, she will also be in attendance (in a pro-templar playthrough, you can then have her killed by Meredith in a special scene after the battle against Orsino).

- There is a special dialogue option available if you side with the templars and Aveline remains captain of the guard after Favor and Fault. Speak to her in the Gallows Courtyard after Meredith has addressed those assembled and select "The guards must fight with us". This will lead to additional help from allies in battles ahead.

- Mage sympathizers must battle from the Gallows Dungeon to reach the Gallows Courtyard, as detailed in the Walkthrough chapter. If you side with the templars, you must instead fight through the Templar Hall to reach the Gallows Dungeon, where Orsino awaits.

- The first area of the Gallows Dungeon is lined with Circle Mages who snipe at your party from raised vantage points as you fight numerous Fade creatures. Unless you reduce the number of mages quickly, this becomes one of the most difficult battles in the game – far harder than the equivalent confrontation if you sided with Orsino.

- The first area of the Gallows Dungeon is lined with Circle Mages who snipe at your party from raised vantage points as you fight numerous Fade creatures. Unless you reduce the number of mages quickly, this becomes one of the most difficult battles in the game – far harder than the equivalent confrontation if you sided with Orsino.

- After the confrontation ends, you can choose to kill or spare certain mages. Even on a pro-Meredith playthrough, it's worth allowing these to live just to see the look in her eyes.

- There are more Circle Mages, Blood mages and Fade denizens in the east room, though the confined area makes this an easier fight.

- No matter which side you pick, the Templar Hall has a selection of optional battles. The two small rooms on the east side of the map both contain enemies to fight; the one to the north is a trap. To escape, have a rogue pick the lock on the door or defeat the Rage Demon. The area on the west of the map has two discretionary battles, including one where you face two Pride Demons simultaneously. You can collect some very fine rewards in these areas.

- You can also be confronted by Fenris, Aveline, Merrill or Anders at the Templar Hall if they left the party earlier. Though Aveline will leave, unwilling to draw her blade in anger, the others will attack.

- On a templar playthrough, Orsino is a more demanding foe. Unlike a mage playthrough, you have fewer allies to keep him occupied, so you'll need to micromanage your party and keep them in good working order. Also pay more attention to the Corpses that appear: they're more than a mere nuisance here, and dispatching them swiftly is essential. Perhaps acknowledging the greater challenge that this fight poses, you can shop with Sandal before you return to the Gallows.

- You can have up to eight allies active in the final battle against Meredith:

- Hawke and the three members of the active party, plus Cullen: a mandatory fixture.

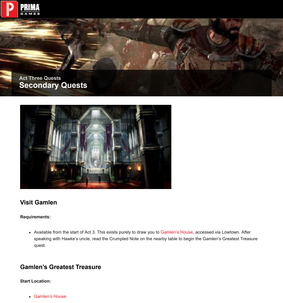
- Dog counts towards the total, so you might wish to send him away in order to see other cameos.

- As Meredith's health falls throughout the battle, additional companions can join the fray. In order of priority, these are Bethany, Carver, Varric, Anders, Aveline, Fenris, Isabela and Sebastian.

- Finally, there are three additional cameos that can occur if you have completed specific quests: Donnic (if you completed The Long Road and have Aveline in the party), Zevran (A Murder of Crows) and Nathanel (Finding Nathanel).

Consequences:

- After the final credits, Dragon Age II creates a "Post-Campaign" autosave. If you have just completed an optimal playthrough, it may be a good idea to load this and save a manual backup in anticipation of future downloadable content adventures.



Secondary Quests

Visit Gamlen

Requirements:

- Available from the start of Act 3. This exists purely to draw you to Gamlen's House, accessed via Lowtown. After speaking with Hawke's uncle, read the Crumpled Note on the nearby table to begin the Gamlen's Greatest Treasure quest.

Gamlen's Greatest Treasure

Start Location:

- Gamlen's House

Requirements:

- Read the Crumpled Note in Gamlen's House.

Walkthrough:

- Speak to Gamlen, then head for Darktown and approach Merkel. This unsavory fellow and his henchmen will attack no matter which dialogue choices you favor. Rifle through Merkel's remains to find a note entitled The Wallop Mallet.
- Return to Gamlen's House. Speak to Hawke's uncle, then examine the Wallop Mallet on the north wall. Leave the house and head to the elven alienage, then interact with the tree.
- Travel to the Docks at night and enter Smelly's Fish Gutters. The container you seek, a red crate marked Shipment 1023, is on the raised area directly opposite the entrance. After the trap has been sprung, move your party out of the affected area, then slay the Mercenary Commander and his cohorts. Collect the Note for Gamlen item from the leader's corpse, then leave the area and journey to The Sink a new location in the Free Marches.
- On arrival at The Sink (see map on page 130), you are ambushed by Corpses, Skeleton Archers and – after a brief delay – a wave of Giant Spiders. Save your magic! AoE attacks for the arrival of the latter. When the path branches further south, the route to the well could be described as an "undead end"; you can fight a few Corpses and Skeleton Archers, then pick up a few pieces of loot, but the door further south is sealed. Backtrack and take the east path to meet with the mysterious Charade.
- When Veld attacks, deal with him first: removing him from the conflict swiftly will deprive his allies of his buff effect. The benefits of doing so will become apparent as the battle progresses, with successive waves of enemies (including Maliket and a Mercenary Assassin) arriving in an attempt to grind your party down.
- In the post-battle dialogue, your decision in the final set of conversation options determines the conclusion of the quest.
- "You should meet your father" is the diplomatic answer and the choice to make if you'd like to wrap this quest up with a heartwarming finale.
- Selecting the "Give me the gem" or "I don't care" options will anger Charade, who will leave in disgust after relinquishing the Gem of Keroshek.
- Return to Gamlen to end the quest.

Consequences:

- If you told Charade to speak to Gamlen, she will be present on your arrival at his house. In this conclusion, the happy ending should be its own reward. You will also find a letter from Charade when you next return to the Hawke Estate.
- For those who prefer a more tangible payment for their labors, engineering immediate estrangement with the long-lost cousin will allow you to keep the mildly interesting Gem of Keroshek (see page 207) when Gamlen later decides that he does not want it. Choosing whether to tell him how you obtained the amulet or not is at your discretion: the end result is the same.

Mine Massacre

Start Location:

- Hightown/The Bone Pit

Requirements:

- If you completed The Bone Pit and Inside Job in previous Acts, speak to Hubert in the market area. Alternatively, the quest begins automatically if you arrive at the Bone Pit area.

Walkthrough:

- First things first: preparation is key for this battle, especially for those playing on the Hard or (heaven forefend) Nightmare difficulty levels. Stock up on Potions, draft in Anders to act as a healer (unless you adopt that role yourself), and consider applying poisons to all weapons. It also makes sense to take a tank along. If you have a mage with the Elemental Weapons spell, equipping a staff that inflicts cold damage will make a real difference (see page 199 to find out how to obtain Cold-Blooded or Mutiny for example).
- Jump headlong into the battle and see how it develops. If your first foray is humiliatingly truncated, that's probably the time to think about backtracking to invest in specialist equipment (such as armor, accessories or Runes that offer fire resistance).
- The High Dragon attacks the moment you reach the open space in the lower portion of the map. This is a multi-stage confrontation against an opponent with extremely high endurance and some truly vicious attacks.
- The battle begins with the High Dragon facing your party on the ground. Keep ranged fighters well clear of the beast and spread out. If you brought a tank along, this character (most probably Avelina) can maintain its attention throughout this stage. Having to heal one character at a time is much less difficult than addressing an assortment of wounds.
- The High Dragon will change position suddenly throughout this fight. When it lands on a perch overlooking the bash, successive waves of Dragonlings will enter the battle. These are not particularly challenging: the dangers lies in the High Dragon's tendency to snipe at party members with homing fireball attacks. These inflict splash damage, so be ready to heal characters who get hit. The High Dragon will also occasionally breathe fire in a cone-shaped area of effect (for example thanks to a Rune of Fire Warding) makes a huge difference. Be ready to use Potions and healing spells at a moment's notice, especially when weaker mages are targeted. An efficient strategy in these instances is to have two party members (especially melee fighters) focus on the smaller enemies while the other pair continue to bombard the main target.
- Once the Dragonlings have been defeated, the High Dragon returns to the lower level, and the cycle returns to the beginning. However, future Dragonling waves can also feature at least one Dragon. When these appear, it makes sense to direct all your aggression at them immediately.
- When the High Dragon eventually falls, its valediction is an incredible haul of loot – more than adequate recompense for the grind you have just (probably barely) survived. Of particular interest are the Dragon's Blood (a unique ingredient for crafting Runes – see page 214), the Enchanted Resin armor upgrade for Ferris, the Champion cheatpiece, and the High Dragon Fire Gland.
- If you accepted this commission from Hubert, return to him now; otherwise, the quest ends here. No matter your choices in the final dialogue, if applicable, there is no further reward other than a final XP increase.

Consequences:

- Collecting the High Dragon Fire Gland unlocks the final short stage of the Herbalist's Tasks quest.

A Murder of Crows

Start Location:

- Hightown

Requirements:

- If you have imported a Dragon Age: Origins save game, Zevran must still be alive.
- We strongly advise that you complete A Murder of Crows before you embark on Merrill's Act 3 companion quest, A New Path. If you choose to tell the Dalish before they tell you where to find Zevran, the A Murder of Crows quest cannot be completed.
- Speak to Nuncio outside The Blooming Rose.

Walkthrough:

- If you can still count on Isabela's support, bring her along for this quest: her presence makes a big difference.
- Travel to Dustermount. If this is your first visit to the area in Act 3, you are ambushed by thieves shortly after you arrive. Plunder the Thief Leader's remains to obtain the Sylvanwood Ring, a gift for Merrill. You can also collect the Aeergan Scroll from the path that leads to the Dalish Camp to start The Aeergan Scrolls: Third Aspect.
- Speak to Vairel and select the "I'm here for the Antivan" option, then head for the Mountain Cave via the path that leads northwest from the Dalish Camp. There is an Ogre supported by Hurlock Bolters near the Recently Opened Passage entrance, and a ferocious collection of Mean Spiders outside your destination. Collect the Rune of Valence Design from the pile of bones as you journey between the two battles.
- Inside the Mountain Cave, there is a multiple-wave attack by assorted spiders; pull back to the top of the wooden staircase to force them to approach in single file. Once the last arachnid has expired, loot the pile of bones to obtain the Boiled Leather Plates armor upgrade for Isabela.
- At the far north of the cave (up on the map), a Vartenal will attack. You should be familiar with this opponent from your visit during Merrill's Act 2 companion quest but, if not, consult pages 83 and 226 for further details.
- In the conversation with Zevran, you can choose to take him back as a prisoner to Nuncio or let him go free (see Consequences). If Isabela is in your party, she and Zevran will engage in coquettish banter; Zevran may also playfully engage with Hawke. However, if you are using an imported world state from Dragon Age: Origins in which the Hero of Ferelden ended the game in a relationship with Zevran, his approach will be rather less flirtatious.
- Inside the Mountain Cave, there is a multiple-wave attack by assorted spiders; pull back to the top of the wooden staircase to force them to approach in single file. Once the last arachnid has expired, loot the pile of bones to obtain the Boiled Leather Plates armor upgrade for Isabela.
- After making your decision, loot the nearby treasure piles and leave. Travel to the Antivan Camp. After the cutscene, the Antivan Crows will attack. Deal with Nuncio first, or at least disable him while you reduce the number of blades and bows ranged against you. This battle is rather tough at the outset (and more so if you chose to take Zevran captive), but settles down after an initial difficulty spike. When the dust settles, speak with Zevran to conclude the quest.

Consequences:

- If you allow Zevran to leave the Mountain Cave, he will return to fight alongside Hawke when you reach the Antivan Camp. He also offers the player a rather fine dagger as an additional reward. Bind and deliver him to Nuncio, though, and he cannot participate in the combat that ensues. He is not particularly offended by this outcome but offers no additional expression of his gratitude.
- On the strict proviso that Zevran was not in a relationship with the Warden (living or dead) in an imported Dragon Age: Origins world state, there's additional fun to be had. If Isabela is in your party, she will proposition Zevran. Select the "All right, I'm game" option if you are currently romancing the Rivaini to initiate a threesome.

Herbalist's Tasks

Start Location:

- Bone Pit Mines

Requirements:

- Slay the High Dragon to complete the Mine Massacre quest and claim the High Dragon Fire Gland.
- Visit Sothvia at the Gallows to claim a unique prize: Uzawa's Tooth, a very powerful amulet.

Finding Nathaniel

Start Location:

- Hightown

Requirements:

- To play this quest, you must be using an imported Dragon Age: Origins world state in which you played the Awakening expansion, recruited Nathaniel, and he was not killed in the siege on Vigil's Keep. This is also available if you selected the Martyr preset world state during the initial character creation process.

Walkthrough:

- Agree to help Delilah Hawe near the Chantry in Hightown, then set off for the Deep Roads. Ensure that you have an adequate supply of useful potions before you depart as this quest has a demanding finale. You will encounter Nathaniel Howe besieged by darkspawn. Nathaniel will accompany you as a guest party member for the duration of this quest. If he and Anders were acquainted from your Awakening playthrough, there are additional scenes and snatches of banter to enjoy as you progress through the area – so it's definitely worth bringing the brooding mage along.
- After speaking with Temmeric Glavonal, continue forward to trigger a battle with assorted darkspawn and an Ogre. The piles of rubble in this area make it easier to avoid the latter's charges, so be sure to take advantage of them. Pull the lever to open the way forward, then continue to the lower level.
- If Bethany or Carver joined the Grey Wardens during the Deep Roads Expedition, they will be waiting here and will join in the ensuing battle.
- If not, Nathaniel laments that his companions were killed; after this, it's straight into conflict.
- The climactic confrontation begins with waves of darkspawn attacking from multiple directions. Don't be too quick to congratulate yourself as they fall with little effort. After this easy start, two Ogres arrive and a third follows when these two have been dispatched. Direct most of your party's fire at one Ogre while using your tank and AoE attacks to suppress the surrounding darkspawn. If all else fails (including causing explosions with the levers), retreating to Temmeric's position at the start of the battle will enable you to face the waves of enemies in a more controlled manner.
- The battle over, Nathaniel (and Hawke's surviving sibling, if present) will bid the party farewell. Search the area for treasures (in particular the Drakeskin Leg Straps – the final armor upgrade for Varric), then depart via the door to the west.

Consequences:

- If Carver or Bethany joined the Grey Wardens, completing this quest means that they can make a further (and more substantial) appearance later in the Act.

Social Cats

- As with the start of Act 2, the main character is headed to her prominence begins with a selection of short companion quests that enable you to work on with friend's allies.

Notes

- If you have satisfied the conditions, speaking to Fenris will begin his Act 2 companion quest immediately.
- Any ongoing romantic relationship with Aveline or Merrill may have let's them moving in with Hawke between Acts 2 and 3. If this is the case, there will be an opportunity to interact with the appropriate quests at the end of the Act.
- If you have Dog (the dog/companion/pet), a quest notification (Breeder of Dogs) will pop up when you find that Hunter Easter. To complete this, interact with hawke's hound in the meantime.

Quest	Location
The Good and Wise Cache Before It	The Hanged Man (Varric)
Check on Anders	Darktown Clinic
Champions and Captains	Viscount's Keep Barracks (Aveline)
Speak to Fenris	Fenris's Mansion
Ask Merrill to Stay	Merrill's Clinic
Isabela's Report	The Hanged Man

Faith

Requirements

- You must have the Exiled Prince downloadable content (see dragonage.com/dlc/bioware).

Walkthrough

- Speak to Sebastian in the Chantry and agree to help him. Travel there by using the "Chantry Welcome" Achievement or Trophy, use the first the mapped-out volume in the south of the map.
- Travel to Highever at night and enter the Viscount's Keep. Approach the Throne Room and go through the door. A cutscene will play in which Sebastian confronts Bann Teagan. Choose "I'm here to help" when Sebastian asks for help in the brand new. After speaking with Leliana, return to the guard door in Throne Room.

Companion Guidance

- There is a big friendship increase from Sebastian purely for accepting this quest.
- Return to Elthina and say "You won't leave?" followed by "Please reconsider" for a high friendship increase with the Seventeenth rank. Pick "You must be safe" followed by "First, But don't force you to journey" for a large many boost.

Aloma

Start Location

- Fenris's Mansion

Requirements

- Fenris must be an active companion, and you must have completed A Bitter Pill to Act 2.
- Complete Speak to Fenris.

Walkthrough: Addendum

- During the conversation with Danarius, there are a handful of options to choose from. If you select "Take him", a cutscene will play in which Fenris and Danarius fight and Danarius is killed. If you select "Leave him", the cutscene will end in a conversation, and a further reward in a letter at the Hiring Desk. All other options lead to negative outcomes.

Companion Guidance

- Choosing the conversation with Danarius, there are a handful of options to choose from. If you select "Take him", a cutscene will play in which Fenris and Danarius fight and Danarius is killed. If you select "Leave him", the cutscene will end in a conversation, and a further reward in a letter at the Hiring Desk. All other options lead to negative outcomes.
- In the closing dialogue, you can intervene and prevent Fenris from killing his sister. The determines how the quest ends and is very much a matter of personal preference.

Companion Guidance

- Refusing Fenris's wish to begin nearly increases with Aveline and Sebastian, with moderate no from Merrill and Varric. Isabela's friendship increases regardless of what you choose. Fenris's love for each to lose out many. Initially refusing to support him, then changing your mind, can cause the most friendship boost.
- The "Ain't no one a slave" option will please Aveline and Fenris. Expect a large loyalty boost from this all if you attempt to negotiate with Danarius.
- Selecting "You deserve to die" when Fenris is asked to execute Varania leads to a large friendship boost. If you instead ask for a pardon, the conditional response "Impossible" argument will lead to a hasty increase. Let with the "You're listening magic?" dialogue choice in the middle.

Justice

Requirements

- Anders must be an active companion.
- Complete Check on Anders.

Walkthrough

- Speak to Anders at the clinic. Agree to help him if you want to undertake this quest, an refusal will end it immediately + see Consequences. The next area you see, you have to talk to bring a type along.
- Take a stroll to the south of Darktown and enter the Sewers. The objective here is to interact with all Slave Prince statues. The first statue is located in the first room you enter. Interact with it to begin a cutscene. Next, you will encounter statues of the Guard Captain and Florence Lemoine, as obviously, bringing you to the end to see you with. The Florence Statue first seeks to the south is particularly tricky. An movement and attack speed debuff is applied to you when you get close to it, so you must be careful not to get too close to the statue when attacking it.
- After collecting the final statue's reward, return to Anders's Clinic in Darktown. If you pledge to help him in one last task, travel to the Chantry. Otherwise, return to the clinic and speak to Anders. Choose the option to help him. Travel to the Chantry and enter the door on any type that takes your fancy. After Anders intervenes, you are automatically returned to Darktown. Speak to the mage to end the quest.

Consequences

- Refusing to help Anders at the product points in this quest the start and the point when you return to the clinic after collecting the statue rewards and it immediately.

Companion Guidance

- In the opening dialogue, agreeing to help Anders escalate to a moderate rivalry increase with Fenris, expect a friendship boost if you have the option.
- If you agree to friendship with both Anders and Sebastian, it's advisable to have the Darktown cells behind for the next section of the quest. Agreeing to help Anders makes the Chantry by defending the grave cause all areas the Templars and the Circle. The Anders and Hawke's missions in Darktown will become unlocked. Once you are once you have completed this section.

Haunted

Start Location

- The Hanged Man

Requirements

- Complete A Small Problem.

Walkthrough

- You must hear Varric in your active party to begin this quest. On arrival at Bartrand's Estate, visit the corner in the northeast of the mansion to take a cutscene. This unlocks all nearby doors. Head into the central area and enter the door to the north.
- Manually position your party in the lower area of the room where the Orlesian Guard attacks. This will allow you to avoid the Guard's Area of Effect attacks and focus on the Ghosts. Kill the Ghosts and the Guard. Search the corpse of the fourth ghost to Bartrand's body. Use the Journal to read all letters in its stash. Use a corpse of it will attacks to banish them, then search the corpse of each. The Shamed Centre is a heavy Letter, but is easily traversed by a couple of hits. Kill the ghosts ranged Banshee by means of Undertow to end your mission.

- With the Golem dispatched, entering Varric to get rid of the wood leads to the latest dead (see Consequences). All that remains of the quest is to return to the Hanged Man and inform Varric that the job is complete. Speak to him and choose the first option to end the quest. The Journal will lead to Isabela's Mission at Lowtown. Once you are once you have completed this section.

Consequences

- If Varric kept the Lyrium Shard, he obtains Blood Ironclaw three additional Runs shot. He quest ends once you leave the mansion. If he shard kills Varric's possession, then he is lost. Once that step is complete the quest, visit the Hanged Man and speak to Varric. Choose the option to tell him that the job is complete. Varric will then offer to give you a reward. Choose the option that will take his cash gift or significant attack quest instead. Once that step is complete, the Hanged Man will become unlocked. Varric's gift is of the shard leads to the corner chosen. If Varric kept the shard, he obtains Blood Ironclaw three additional Runs shot. He quest ends once you leave the mansion. If he shard kills Varric's possession, then he is lost. Once that step is complete the quest, visit the Hanged Man and speak to Varric. Choose the option to tell him that the job is complete. Varric will then offer to give you a reward. Choose the option that will take his cash gift or significant attack quest instead. Once that step is complete, the Hanged Man will become unlocked. Varric's gift is of the shard leads to the corner chosen.

Companion Guidance

- Return to the Hound's Keep to receive the captain's gratitude or advancement.

A New Path

Start Location

- Merrill's Hut

Requirements

- Complete A Talking To and Till The Lower.
- Visit Merrill.

Walkthrough

- After speaking to Merrill and travelling to Sundermount, you can have an optional conversation with Keeper Marethari before you begin a trial in the Fade. Choose the conversation option you like or most.
- Try not down on Hawke first, you suggest that you complete two of the Harlequin Scrolls side quests during that race to a game.
- There is a battle against spiders, Shades and a Shadow Dragon to defeat near the Sundermount Cosmetic unit. Destroy them in that exact order.
- Use the pedestals you can interact with guides. Three contact two: two are simply and not appear a series of enemies when you interact with it. Expect Corpses, Skeleton Archers, a Shadow Warrior and, finally a deadly Shadow Dragon. Once the Shadow Dragon is defeated, you will receive a reward. Also obtained the Shadow Dragon's set of armour is a deadly weapon.
- After a profitable bout of proceeding, interact with the shrine for an optional outcome before you continue. There are Dragonlings and a Dragon as you approach the upper reaches, while Corpses and another Shadow Assassin await you at the summit. Defeat them all to receive a reward. Also obtained the Dragon's set of armour is a deadly weapon.
- Once inside Flemi's Exit, collect the Fasiculars to see crafting ingredient, then interact with the statue.
- When the Pride Demon spawns, brace yourself for a demanding confrontation. This opponent can alternate between two forms, each with distinct strengths and weaknesses. Use page 223 to study these. In the first part of the battle, it favors melee attacks that have an AoE range. Keep your party spread out to minimize collateral damage.
- The Undermeld ability summons two facsimiles of Merrill's former Dalish clan that each have her throughout the first stage of the battle. Ignore them and focus your attacks on the Pride Demon. Once you have dealt enough damage, the Pride Demon summons two facsimiles of Merrill's clan that have her fight.
- In the second stage, the Pride Demon favors its Crushing Prison attack. This is telegraphed by the appearance of an Arcane statue, so briefly pause your movement to quickly run to the danger zone before you receive damage.
- Once the Pride Demon falls, select the "You said you had to ask" option to bring the battle to a close. Picking the "I'm not sure I can" option will result in the Pride Demon regaining its health and forcing you to fight it again. Choosing the "I will not be swayed by a vanity demonstration" option will result in a game over.
- When the confrontation ends, respectfully punish items from the Keeper's corpse, including the Helm from Bodkin +. Merrill's final arrival upgrades - before you leave the cavern.
- The remaining Dalish meet the party with wandering suspicion and hostility as you near and enter Sundermount. A cutscene will play in which Merrill's former clan members attack her and flee. The other two dialogue options lead to a disadvantageous battle with minimal rewards.

Consequences

- If you do not complete this quest, you cannot reach the final stage in a romance with Merrill.
- Should you accept comfort with the Dalish after defeating the Pride Demon, returning to Sundermount with Merrill in your party will cause the world to be altered without further provocation.

No Rest for the Wicked

Start Location

- Fenris Estate

Requirements

- Only available if talkette was recruited in Act 1 - returned to the hall at the close of Act 2, and was not surrendered to the Templars.
- Speak to Isabela in The Hanged Man.
- Complete On the Lowes, then visit the Hunter Estate to find Isabela standing at the Writing Desk. Speak to her to begin the quest. If she is not there, return at a later date.

Walkthrough

- After speaking with Isabela at the Hunter Estate, travel to The Blooming Rose on Highhaven with the Reason in your party. Approach the assassin to trigger a conversation, then enter the room and fight a talkmage. Any talkmage will do. Search the corpse to obtain the Key to Isabela's Cage, then return to the Hunter Estate.
- Use the Gather Your Party point to travel to Isabela's entertainment complex, then locate the entrance. Walk over each Isabela's Trail marker to activate three that follow until you reach the northwest area and. Set off the Lockdown Switch. Stock Isabela's Cage and free the talkmage inside. Speak to the talkmage and choose the option "Leave Isabela to her fate" and return to the Hunter Estate to end the quest.
- After entering the area, head through the north door and use the Disarming Switch. Ask for the key sequence to end it. Now bring the talk to collect the Key Isabela. Enter the northeast room and fight the talkmage. Search the corpse of the Lyrium Shard to obtain the Key to Isabela's Cage. Free the talkmage and return to the Hunter Estate to end the quest. If you are unfamiliar, then visit the interior of the entrance to the south to find the Hot Immunizing Accessories.
- Return to the main room to meet Isabela. Choose the last positive to end the quest.
- Agree with Isabela's plan ("Let's find the sexy one next") and Comfort with talk free. The quest ends immediately.
- Vet Coalition.

- If you are in fight Isabela's romance against her wishes, tell the Raider Archer on the central walkway to the north, he is attacking on a presence can find achievement in the area of the Hanged Man's room. Moving the entry point by the spawn area (and, ideally, the room where the archer is located) makes the fight much, much easier. Deal with the archer before you engage the Shadow Dragon.

Companion Gifts

- These are a list of additional gifts to find in Act 2. These are necessary to take romances with Merrill, Fenris and Isabela to their optimum conclusion.

Companion	Quest Name	Gift Required
Merrill	Generation of the Clan	Bandaged Dog Found in the remains of the Thief Leader in Sundermount during A Talking To and Till The Lower
Fenris	Rebel of Magic	Sigil of Mithra found in a chest in the Secret Meeting Place near during Bad Business
Isabela	A Person Talkman	Rivaini Women Turned Inside the Classed Passage, accessed via the Docks at night.

Final-Stage Relationship Quests

- If you have completed all quests for a particular companion and have also reached a full 100% friendship or rivalry, the quest Final-Stage Relationship for that character becomes available to you. Completing this quest unlocks the loyalty of that ability during Dragon Age: Origins.

Companion	Quest Name
Fenris	Questioning Beliefs
Anders	Questioning Beliefs
Varric	No Acrimonious
Isabela	Questioning Beliefs
Leliana	Questioning Beliefs
Merrill	Merrill, Friend or Foe
Sebastian	Questioning Beliefs

The Awiergan Scrolls: First, Second & Third Aspect

First Aspect

Start Location:

- The Wounded Coast

Requirements:

- Collect the Awiergan Scroll from the dead end just south of the main Wounded Coast entrance.

Walkthrough:

- After collecting the scroll, continue along the path to reach the far western side of the area. When Corpses suddenly rise from the ground, you'll know that you've found the right spot. Proceed up the coast slowly and defeat each successive wave until Meitan (an Arcane Horror) appears, then spread out and devote your energies to slaying this nineteen strength slave.

Consequences:

- If this is the last Aspect completed, you can embark on the main Pride Unbound quest.

Second Aspect

Start Location:

- Sundermount

Requirements:

- Collect the Awiergan Scroll hidden behind a wall just south of the Sundermount Caverns entrance.

Walkthrough:

- Travel through the caves to the upper section of the mountain area.

- The party is attacked by a Corpse named Byomor and two Revenants: Gifre and Beacon. Dispatch Byomor first - with a careful approach, you may be able to lure it down the slope before its allies notice you - then direct your aggression at a single Revenant at a time. Set everything you can to impede their movement and attack capabilities, favoring electricity and spirit damage wherever possible. On Nightmare difficulty, they are immune to nature and cold, though you can still enervate or impede them temporarily with Winter's Grasp and Cone of Cold.

Consequences:

- If this is the last Aspect completed, you can embark on the main Pride Unbound quest.

Third Aspect

Start Location:

- Sundermount

Requirements:

- Collect the Awiergan Scroll from the path leading from the main entrance to the Dalish Camp.

Walkthrough:

- After collecting this scroll, head for Sundermount Caverns. You will encounter an Arcane Horror on the path just before the cave entrance. Though initially alone, it will be joined by a huge number of Shades as the battle progresses. Keep these under control with a blanket of suppressing AoE attacks while you direct the majority of your firepower at the primary target. The battle will not last long once it falls.

- The Second Aspect scroll can be found just behind a low wall after the battle ends.

Consequences:

- If this is the last Aspect completed, you can embark on the main Pride Unbound quest.

The Awiergan Scrolls: Pride Unbound

Requirements:

- The Journal entry for this quest is completed by collecting The Awiergan Scrolls: First Aspect, Second Aspect or Third Aspect. However, you cannot access the Hidden Dungeon in Darktown until you have completed all three.

Walkthrough:

- Enter the Hidden Dungeon via the door (marked on the map as "Hidden Lair") in the northwest of Darktown, just south of the clinic.

- Hybrids is a resilient and highly dangerous Pride Demon. Though it initially fights alone, it is joined by Shades and Rage Demons as the battle progresses. Crowd control, then, is a mandatory task until Hybrids is reduced to his final slivers of health. At this point, it's better to pour everything into finishing him off, then deal with his minions afterwards.

- Beating Hybrids unlocks the "Demon Slayer" Achievement and Trophy.

King Alistair

Start Location:

- Hawke Estate

Requirements:

- Only available if you chose the Hero of Ferelden or The Warden world state options during initial character creation or imported a Dragon Age: Origins save in which Alistair became king.

- Complete On The Loose, then accept the letter from the Writing Desk.

Walkthrough:

- Travel to the Viscount's Keep to meet with King Alistair. The more devoted Dragon Age: Origins players will enjoy the references to Ferelden and events past. The quest ends once the interview with the king is complete. Both Hawke and Anders have short reactions to Alistair if they are present.

The Lost Swords

Start Location:

- Hightown

Requirements:

- You must have gained the Archon's respect during Act 2 (see Blackpowder Courtesy on page 72 for details).

- Speak to Taarbas outside the Hawke Estate.

Walkthrough:

- Taarbas asks Hawke to retrieve ten Qunari Swords from locations throughout Kirkwall and the Free Marches. Use the table below to find each one.

- You can turn in swords to Tarbaas at any time. He will ask if you require gold for your services. Unless you have no intention of collecting all ten, you should refuse this the payments are nominal. However, handing over the entire collection without a reward in coin will lead to him to give a unique gift, the Bastard's Katta. This is an extraordinary weapon tailored to Hawke's class.

- The XP reward for collecting the Qunari Swords is bestowed on a per-sword basis, not as a final quest award – so those without a master lockpicker (or the dedication to find all ten) can still profit from this venture.

Qunari Sword Locations

Area	Location
Hightown	Purchase from Kunoa's Blades.
Lowtown	Purchase from Weaponsmithy.
Lowtown (Night)	Hidden in a pile of rubble in the Foundry District.
The Gallows	Purchase from the Weapon Shop.
Darktown	Inside a crate at Anders's Clinic.
Docks (Night)	Found in a pile of bones in the Harbormaster's Office area.
Docks (Night)	Inside a chest with a Master-grade lock in the Warehouse District.
De Launcet Mansion (Nighttime)	Found in the northeast room of the building during your visit for the On the Loose main plot quest.
The Wounded Coast	Travel west from the main entrance until you can proceed no further, then head south (through a corridor) to a dead end. The sword is hidden in a pile of bones.
The Wounded Coast (Night)	Found among a pile of bones in the northwest of the region – you should remember this area as being near the Tal-Vashoth camp from Act 1.

Reining It In

Start Location:

- Docks (Night)

Requirements:

- Fight the Slave Hunters in the Docks until a pop-up message appears. Repeat visits may be required.

Walkthrough:

- Slave Hunter groups consist of melee fighters and archers, though the latter tend to be less efficient than usual in the narrow streets and piers of the Docks – they're usually in range of the main pack if you lay down an AoE attack.

- After the pop-up notification, enter the Run Down Alley area. The gang leader (Jess "Lasehmaster" Varvel) is a mage, so deal with her immediately after dispatching the initial group of Slave Hunters from the safety of the steps.

Kind of Want

Start Location:

- Lowtown (Night)

Requirements:

- Fight the gang members in Lowtown at night until a pop-up message appears. Repeat visits may be required.

Walkthrough:

- This gang boasts melee fighters and numerous archers, with an occasional Assassin popping up when you least expect it.

- After the quest notification appears, enter the Decrepit Alley. Fight from the top of the stairs until gang leader Hanker appears, then run down to kill her immediately.

Consequences:

- Once you have dealt with the three gangs in Act 3, return to The Hanged Man to claim your final prize. There is a special bonus if you have eliminated all nine.

The Last Holdouts

Requirements:

- You must have sided with Meredith during the Showdown conversation at the start of Act 3.

- Talk to the Barmaid in The Hanged Man at night, then speak to Ser Mellin and agree to help.

Walkthrough:

- Travel to Darktown and enter the Hidden Sewer. Always deal with the Blood Mages first and the other enemies will put up very little resistance. Once you've defeated all hostiles, collect the four Blood Mage Dispatches, then journey to the Hawke Estate and accept the new letter from the Writing Desk.

- Take a locksmith to Sundermount as your destination features a locked chest with a worthwhile reward inside. Travel through Sundermount Caverns to reach the Blood Mage Base entrance. Ser Mellin and Ser Agatha fight alongside the party for the first two battles in this area. Head north to face Bancroft and a handful of Apostate Mages. Bancroft is a vicious Blood Mage, so incapacitate him instantly. You can ignore the other mages until he dies. When the combat ends, you have a choice.

- If you attempt to persuade Ser Mellin to show mercy to the mages ("Mellin, stop") or express ambivalence ("Not my problem"), he will attack immediately. Ser Agatha will fight alongside the party.

- If you support the templar ("Mellin is right"), you must fight Ser Agatha and her supporters. Mellin is grateful, though he offers no additional reward.

A Noble Agenda

Requirements:

- You must have sided with Orsino during the Showdown conversation at the start of Act 3.

- Speak to Ser Marlon Sellnech in Hightown and agree to help.

Walkthrough:

- Travel to Darktown, taking your favored locksmith with you as there are two secured chests with noteworthy loot, and enter the Hidden Supply Depot. Defeat the mercenaries that lie in wait when you arrive and the templars on the west side of the map.

- Visit Lowtown and approach Ser Mellin. Once he acknowledges the arrival of Hawke, he and his archer allies will attack. Try to kill Mellin quickly before a small wave of reinforcements (including a hunter) arrive.

- Return to the Hawke Estate to collect a letter detailing the next step, then head back to Lowtown at night. Approach Marlen, then fight off the templar ambush. This is a tough battle, so have a tank present and keep your weaker party members at a safe distance. Neutralize the dangerous Ser Edgett the Hound, the Templar Hunter and the Templar Lieutenant immediately. A subsequent wave of enemies features two more of the latter enemy type, so aim for survival over aggression if you experience difficulties (and don't skimp on Potion use).

Red Run Streets

Start Location:

- Hightown (Night)

Requirements:

- Fight the Bloodsinger Thrall enemies in Hightown at night until a pop-up message appears. Repeat visits may be required.

Walkthrough:

- This gang is possibly the most challenging so far, as each group also features a mage (known simply as Bloodsinger) in addition to archers and melee fighters. As their title suggests, these individuals employ blood magic – and should, therefore, be your exclusive target at the start of each fight.

- Once the final quest stage has unlocked, enter the Suspicious House. Jaleson "The Bleeder" Hall is the gang leader; launch the most vicious offensive you can muster to neutralize him before the blood magic begins. In addition to the rank and file, another Bloodsinger mage arrives near the end of the battle, so keep a watchful eye on proceedings and act swiftly.

Miscellaneous Activities

Additional Encoutners

The following section details a small assortment of optional cutscenes, conversations, events and activities that you can encounter during the three main Acts.

Act 1

- There is a special reactive event at the Wounded Coast that only occurs if you play with an imported Dragon Age: Origins save file in which you sided with the elves in the Nature of the Beast quest, or if you chose the Hero of Ferelden or The Martyr world states during the Prologue. On arrival in the area, take the south path to meet a Dalish Assassin remonstrating with a human.

- Corff the Bartender has news to share if you speak with him in The Hanged Man. Certain lines will reflect decisions you made in Dragon Age: Origins if you imported a save file.

- There is a Donation Box inside Lirene's Fereldan Imports. Placing money inside leads to a small XP reward: 50 XP for 50 silver, 100 XP for one sovereign and 200 XP for five sovereigns.

Act 2

- You can hire a prostitute in The Blooming Rose… with amusing results. If you are in an active romance and they are in the active party when you do this, there is a rivalry increase.

- If you sent Feynriel to live with the Dalish in the Wayward Son quest, there is a reactive event when you visit Sundermount for the first time in Act 2. You will encounter templars arguing with Dalish warriors. You can intervene and resolve the situation in many ways.

Act 3

- If you completed Magistrate's Orders and chose to kill Kelder, pay a visit to the elven alienage during the day to meet Lia, the young elf you saved. This brief cutscene is extended if Aveline is in your current party.

- Visit Sundermount at any time in Act 3 to explore the Hidden Dungeon. This "optional" map is not part of any quests and features a small selection of undead and high-rank Fade creatures to fight en route to the central area. On arrival you can shop with the Nexus Golem, who has a handful of remarkable items to sell. Use the nearby door to return to Sundermount.

- If Feynriel was possessed at the end of Night Terrors (the automatic conclusion if you did not undertake the quest), you will encounter an unusual scene in Lowtown's market area if you visit at night, where Feynriel appears to have become a Dream Stalker.

Quests

The Exiled Prince

Premium Content

The Exiled Prince

Start Location:

Hightown

Requirements:
You must have access to this Premium Content quest. For further details, visit dragonage.com/da2/addons.

Walkthrough:

This is less “quest” per se and more of a formal introduction to Sebastian. Approach the waypoint marker close to the Chantry in Hightown to trigger a cutscene. Once this ends, approach the Chanter’s Board and accept the Duty companion quest to wrap up The Exiled Prince.
Consequences:
Unlocks Sebastian Vael as a potential companion in Act 2 and his related quests. The first of these, Duty, is available immediately.

The Black Emporium

Requirements:

You must have access to this Premium Content quest. For further details, visit dragonage.com/da2/addons.
Read the letter at Gamlen’s House to receive a formal invitation to the Black Emporium.

Walkthrough:

Simply enter the Black Emporium via the main Kirkwall map to complete this quest. Again, like The Exiled Prince, it’s merely an exercise in guiding you to a particular location.
The Black Emporium features several Codex entries, two shops that contain interesting items (many of which will be wildly beyond your financial reach) and, of greater import on your first visit, a collectible marked Discarded Weapons and Armor. This contains free equipment that will give your character a considerable boost during the early stages of Act 1. We suggest that you outfit Hawke with items suitable for your chosen class, keep weapons that you don’t need for companions (future or present), then sell unneeded armor at one of the stores to generate funds.
The Mirror of Transformation can be used to change Hawke’s appearance, thumbnail portrait or name. Using it may cause your character to remove their current headgear, so be sure to reequip it before you head out.

Extras
Achievements & Trophies

Story Milestones

These accomplishments are all unlocked by completing main plot quests and cannot be missed.

Icon	Name		Trophy	Unlock Conditions
	Tale Within a Tale	5	Bronze	Defeat the Ogre during the opening section of the Prologue.
	Immigrant	5	Bronze	Complete the Prologue.
	Full House	10	Bronze	Recruit four companions. This will unlock once you complete the Tranquility or Long Way Home quests during Act 1.
	Stone Cold	5	Bronze	Defeat the Rock Wraith during the Deep Roads Expedition in Act 1.
	Delver of the Deep	10	Bronze	Leave the Deep Roads area during the final quest of Act 1.
	Friends in High Places	15	Bronze	Unlocked late in Act 2 when you meet the final member of Kirkwall's ruling elite.
	Conqueror	15	Bronze	Defeat Meredith at the end of Act 3.
	Champion of Kirkwall	20	Silver	Complete Dragon Age II; the narrative conclusion isn't important.

Optional Story Accomplishments

This selection of Achievements and Trophies can only be obtained by completing certain optional quests or by making specific decisions at critical points in the main storyline.

Icon	Name		Trophy	Unlock Conditions
	Nefarious	10	Bronze	Choose to work for Athenril at the conclusion of the Prologue.
	Mercenary	10	Bronze	Choose to work for Meeran at the conclusion of the Prologue.
	Birthright	15	Bronze	Complete the Birthright companion quest. This must be completed before you set off for the Deep Roads during Act 1.
	Financier	10	Bronze	Pay Bartrand to join the Deep Roads expedition. This does not unlock if you accept a loan from Dougal.
	That Thing Has Legs	25	Bronze	Kill a Varterral. You can encounter this creature during the Mirror Image companion quest during Act 2 (see page 83).
	A Worthy Rival	25	Silver	Earn the respect of the Arishok before the conclusion of the Demands of the Qun main plot quest in Act 2 (see page 72).
	King of the Hill	10	Bronze	During the Demands of the Qun quest (see page 75), you must engineer an outcome where Hawke defeats the Arishok in open combat (either in a duel, or alongside his fellow warriors). This will not unlock if you choose the "diplomatic" solution whereby Isabela is taken back to Par Vollen as a prisoner.
	Exorcist	25	Bronze	Find and kill the undying Xebenkeck. This enemy is encountered during the Forbidden Knowledge quest in Act 2 (see page 88).
	Spelunker	25	Bronze	Visit any 10 caves in and around Kirkwall while completing quests. If you finish most secondary and companion quests, you should unlock this during Act 2.
	Arcane Defender	25	Silver	Side with mages in five separate quests from the following list: Wayward Son, Act of Mercy, Enemies Among Us, Night Terrors, Best Served Cold, On the Loose and Showdown.
	Mage Hunter	25	Silver	Support the templars in five individual quests – consult the list above for details. Naturally, it is only possible to unlock Mage Hunter or Arcane Defender during a single playthrough.
	Dragon Slayer	25	Silver	Complete the Mine Massacre secondary quest in Act 3 (see page 97).
	Demon Slayer	25	Silver	Kill the ancient demon Hybris after completing steps in a very special quest: see page 105.
	Crowning Achievement	25	Silver	Side with the templars in the climax of Act 3. See page 94 for details.
	Epic	50	Gold	Complete Dragon Age II twice, or finish a single playthrough where you import a Dragon Age: Origins save during the character creation process.
	Mass Exodus	25	Bronze	Complete the Prologue with all three classes on separate playthroughs. You do not need to finish the entire game, just the opening section up to and including the transition to Act 1.

Gameplay Milestones

Players will obtain these minor gameplay accomplishments during the course of a standard playthrough.

Icon	Name		Trophy	Unlock Conditions
	Talented	5	Bronze	Select a talent upgrade while leveling up.
	Darkness Falls	5	Bronze	On the World Map screen, toggle the Kirkwall map display from day to night.
	Explorer	5	Bronze	Leave Kirkwall to visit a location in the Free Marches for the first time.
	Craftsman	5	Bronze	Acquire your first crafting recipe. Effectively impossible to miss as you'll pick one up early in Act 1.
	Specialized	25	Bronze	Acquire two specializations for Hawke. These are awarded at levels 7 and 14, so you should unlock this during Act 3 at the latest.
	Dedicated	15	Bronze	Reach level 10. Even on a sprint through main plot quests only, ignoring all optional asides, you should unlock this during Act 2.

Special Accomplishments

These Achievements and Trophies all reward very specific feats and, as such, require at least a little effort to obtain.

Icon	Name		Trophy	Unlock Conditions
	Legendary	50	Silver	Reach level 20. Players taking a fairly comprehensive path through the story and all optional quests should unlock this during Act 3.
	A Friend in Need	5	Bronze	Collect or purchase an armor upgrade for a companion. The first one that you can acquire for free is found at the end of the Birthright quest (see page 63).
	Enchanter	5	Bronze	Use a rune on a piece of equipment with an available rune slot. See page 214 for details.
	Master Craftsman	25	Silver	Find all available recipes for one of the three crafting "disciplines" (runes, potions or poisons and bombs), then create every item within that category. See page 213 for details.
	I Got Your Back	25	Bronze	Upgrade a single companion's armor to its maximum level. See page 211 for further details.
	Weapon Master	25	Bronze	Unlock all abilities and upgrades in a single weapon-specific talent tree: Weapon and Shield, Two-Handed, Dual Weapon or Archery.
	Tag Team	5	Bronze	Perform a cross-class combo by switching between party members. See page 174.
	Unstoppable	50	Silver	Complete an entire Act without a party member being knocked out. Possible (though tricky) on Normal difficulty level, we'd suggest that players obtain this by completing the shorter Act 3 on Casual.
	Mogul	25	Bronze	Accumulate a total of 100 sovereigns in your purse. If you can bear to ignore the lure of shopping opportunities, this is easily accomplished if you complete the majority of quests in Act 1 and refrain from paying Bartrand until the very last minute.
	Gift Giver	5	Bronze	Give a gift to a companion. See page 161.
	Flirtatious	5	Bronze	Flirt with a companion to initiate a romance. See page 161.
	Romantic	25	Bronze	See a romance with a companion through to its conclusion. See page 161.
	Friend	25	Bronze	Earn the friendship of a companion. See page 161.
	Rival	25	Bronze	Establish a rivalry with a companion. See page 161.
	Great Minds Think Alike	50	Silver	Have four companions in a state of simultaneous friendship or four active rivalries. This requires a little forward planning and management. See page 182 for further details.
	Treasure Hunter	25	Silver	Open 50 containers.
	Knowledgeable	25	Bronze	Unlock 100 codex entries. You should receive this during Act 1 on a completionist-grade playthrough.
	Supplier	25	Silver	Find all possible crafting ingredients during your travels. See page 215 for further details.
	Archeologist	50	Silver	There are four "special" Codex collectibles per Act signed by the "Band of Three". Collect three out of four of these in each Act to unlock this. • Act 1: The Bone Pit, The Gallows, Viscount's Keep, Lowtown (Night). • Act 2: Chantry, Darktown, Gallows Dungeon (during the Dissent quest), Docks (Qunari Compound). • Act 3: These are all found during quests: two during Justice, one during Garrlen's Greatest Treasure, and the final one at the Docks during the Last Straw.
	Chantry Historian	25	Silver	Collect all four chapters of "The History of the Chantry" by Brother Genitivi. Three of these are found in the Chantry during a daylight visit, one per Act. Chapter 3, however, can only be collected during the Following the Qun quest: see page 74.
	The Ultimate Reward (PS3 only)	-	Platinum	Unlock all the other Trophies.

The Exiled Prince

You must purchase and install The Exiled Prince (see dragonage.com/da2/addons for details) to access storyline elements related to these accomplishments.

Icon	Name		Trophy	Unlock Conditions
	Retribution	25	Bronze	Complete the Duty companion quest in Act 1 or 2.
	Avenged	25	Bronze	Complete the Repentance companion quest in Act 2.
	Cloak and Dagger	25	Bronze	Complete the Faith companion quest in Act 3.
	Memento	25	Bronze	Find the Starkhaven Longbow during the Repentance quest and present it to the prince (see page 81).
	Loyalty of the Prince	30	Bronze	Establish complete friendship or rivalry with Sebastian.

Dragon Age Encyclopedia

The Continent of Thedas

Orlais

Ambitious and wealthy Orlais is the most powerful single human nation in Thedas. Under its current ruler, Empress Celene I, Orlais has a large aristocracy famed for its culture and extravagance. Celene shares the expansionist dream of Orlais' founder, Kordillus Drakon, that the nation's borders should stretch to the edges of the continent.

Many Orlesian nobles belong to its renowned knightly order, the Chevaliers. The martial training of the Chevaliers is legendarily harsh, instilling in the knights a fierce discipline and code of honor that takes precedence over the value of their own lives. The Chevaliers know no fear and their loyalty is absolute. The penalty for dishonor is death, something that a Chevalier welcomes if he or she has failed their lord.

Another characteristic of the noble class is their penchant for high fashion, often copied in other lands such as Nevarra and the Free Marches but always at its most extreme within Orlais. Both men and women wear ostensibly corsets, but with subtle differences that indicate social standing; in public, they are also prone to wearing very elaborate masks. These are hereditary and identity one's family almost as uniquely as the heraldry on a crest.

The capital city is Val Royeaux, which boasts the University of Orlais: a major center of learning that attracts young nobles from all over Thedas with the best education one can buy. The University is a relatively modern institution, whose liberal-minded professors have already clashed with religious conservatives over the content of their classes. This is likely to become a much larger issue in the future.

Tevinter Imperium

Formerly an empire that stretched the entirety of Thedas, all that survives of Tevinter is a decadent remnant, centered around Minrathous in the north. This fabled city, once the jewel of the entire continent, is governed by powerful magic users through a form of magocracy.

Tevinter is almost universally reviled by other nations. Its nobility is famously debauched and slavery is still practiced. The Imperium is the center of the black market, smuggling (including the harboring of magic fugitives from other lands), and slave trade. While it might seem in decline, the Imperium is still a very powerful nation with considerable military might. Without a doubt, it would turn on the lands it's the attention were not diverted by the constant wars with the Qunari, in Seheron and Par Vollen.

The ancient magister lords ruled the Imperium as a group, maintaining a tight hold over the people through the power to infiltrate their dreams. These lords are no more, but even today some mages are quietly acknowledged as the most proficient dream-walkers and dreivers.

The Imperium draws a variety of soldiers from its territories to form its impressive army. Two features of the Tevinter military, however, are considered legendary and are known throughout Thedas. One is the use of elephant mounts, these huge creatures having been imported into Tevinter for centuries through the coastal colonies near the northwestern jungles. The other is equally impressive: a trio of gigantic war golems purchased from the dwarves, which are known as the juggernauts.

The Tevinters have left their mark all over Thedas, still felt in the ruins and roads of the fallen empire. Though the tales are now told to scare children, the truth of their excesses could still shock the hardest heart.

Ferelden

Ferelden is a relatively temperate nation in the far southwest of Thedas populated by a barbarian, militaristic culture that has only begun to civilize in the last few centuries. Still considered a backwater by other nations – especially the Orlesians, who controlled and occupied the Ferelden valley for centuries – the Fereldans have made great strides in recent years. A proud and independent people, they resent being considered "primitive" and are well on their way to becoming a power on the continent.

Ferelden borders the Orlesian Empire to the west, with whom it continues to have a very tense relationship. The Frostback Mountain range divides the two nations and prevents hostilities from being more frequent. Orzammar, the last kingdom of the dwarves, rests in the Frostbacks.

Ferelden cities are considered anarchic by most standards. The Fereldan desire for freedom has engendered a laissez-faire cultural attitude towards law enforcement and behavior in general. While the worst offenses are quickly put down, many others are ignored and citizens are often left to make their own justice. Petty theft is common, as guardsmen will only go out of their way to deal with major crimes. Commerce is largely unregulated as long as taxes are paid: businesses such as brothels and gambling halls are not only tolerated, but expected.

Lothering and the Imperial Highway
The Hawkes made their home in Lothering, a village north of the ancient fortress of Ostagar. The settlement arose on a crossroads of the Imperial Highway, starting out as a trading post and supplying goods to Redcliffe and the merchants of Orzammar. In time, the settlers became self-sufficient through mills and farmland.

The Imperial Highway is an ancient architectural wonder that was originally built by the Tevinter Imperium. Constructed from stone quarried by slaves in Kirkwall, this elevated road ran from Minrathous down to Orlais and then east to Ferelden. The intended project was never finished, and many sections have fallen into disrepair over the centuries. Nevertheless, it remains useful to many travelers fearful of wolves.

The Free Marches

The Free Marches is a collective name given to the group of wealthy city-states in the central part of the continent. The "Marchers" are independent descendants from tough barbarians, their cities standing in a loose confederation that rarely unites on any matter unless one of their larger neighbors becomes aggressive. In this event, the Marchers assemble a unified military front even the greatest power cannot ignore.

The Free Marches is best known as the breadbasket of Thedas, its farms along the banks of the great Minanter River being the source of much of the continent's food. Starkhaven is the largest of the cities, welcoming visitors on the waterway to its regal central square.

Kirkwall

The last of the great Imperium cities, Kirkwall was founded in 620 Ancient by archmage Ermenia Krayven. Elven slaves were shipped in by the thousand to quarry the stone, enduring brutality that would find mark Kirkwall's Qunari history. Built on the foundation of suffering, the "City of Chains" became the center of the imperial slave trade and the destination of those taken captive by Tevinter raiders. It is now one of the larger Free Marches cities.

Approaching by sea, it is impossible to miss the imposing black wall that gives the city its name. Leering from the cliff face are the carvings of the Old Gods, a pantheon of profane idols smugly provoking the waves. Despite the best efforts of both the Chantry and the weather to eradicate them, the constant presence of these vile guardians seems assured for centuries to come.

Marine access to the harbor is via a narrow channel, also carved into the cliff, and flanked by colossal bronze statues – the Twins of Kirkwall. By breaking a chain from the lighthouse to the Twins, the city is able to close off the only navigable sea lane and extort duties from passing ships.

The Gallows

Perched on a plinth, the many statues of tortured slaves pay no tribute to those sold into bondage. Instead, this city entrance and its high-walled courtyard are legacies of Kirkwall's cruel past. The magisters intended the Gallows to crush the spirit of new arrivals, allowing no trace of their former identities to survive the city. Owners and traders alike came to see the corpses as a visceral reminder of the only way a slave might one day find release. Stepping from the pitch-black hold of a galley to be marched along the docks toward the Gallows, today's Fereldan refugees might feel the same enfeebling sense of utter hopelessness.

Lowtown

In the days of the Imperium, this area was an enclosure for the slaves. Living conditions may have improved – slightly – but there's no mistaking Kirkwall's geographical divisions of social class. An endless labyrinth of shantytowns, alleyways and makeshift buildings, Lowtown is home to the characters both colorful and occasionally poignant. It's been alleviage to the largest of many ghettos, where despair at the squalid conditions is occasionally swept away by the evident pride of the close-knit communities.

The residents can at least take heart that they are not at the bottom of the social ladder: the poorest of all resort to making their beds in the sewers below, and in such numbers that Kirkwall's underground tunnel network has earned the nickname of "Darktown".

Hightown

Constructed for the local elite at the height of the Imperium's fortunes, the mansions and places of Hightown still have the power to impress. Ascending the narrow staircase, visitors in the past would have entered a more decadent, extravagant playground than the refinement that greets them today.

Both the Keep and the Chantry now stand as symbols of Kirkwall's respectability. Both are converted from the lavish residences of magister lords who accrued wealth from the slave trade. The original masters imagined that Hightown's elevation would isolate them from events below. When the uprising came, they were unprepared for the self-sacrificing determination of those who had absolutely nothing to lose.

Nevarra

Originally one of the larger Free Marches city-states, Nevarra benefitted from its position and has aggressively expanded over the last two centuries, becoming a power to rival Orlais itself. When a king war with the Orlesians wrested control of the mineral-rich hills to the west, the victory ensured Nevarra continued prestige in addition to its wealth.

While the capital lies in the original city of Nevarra, the city of Cumberland's location on the Minanter River makes it a natural and busy point of trade with the rest of the Free Marches and beyond.

The Nevarrans can boast many legendary heroes in their past, with names that are still worshipped by the modern populace. Statues of these men and women are common, their bodies preserved in palatial tombs. Ancestors of the ruling Pentaghast family were once famed as dragon hunters, driving the beasts to near-extinction.

The Anderfels

The Anders people were the first humans to fight the darkspawn, and it is from their language that hurlocks and genlocks received their names. In this desolate landscape, centuries of fighting have decimated expanses of the steppes that it is said the corpses of the fallen never decay. The people of the Anderfels are known for their stubbornness. A history of repelling darkspawn incursions has hardened the proud inhabitants of this poor, remote nation with a steel spirit and grim determination. Their priests are the most devout, their warriors the most feared throughout Thedas.

The order of the Grey Wardens was founded in the Anderfels to drive back the first Blight, and it retains its headquarters at Weisshaupt fortress with a strong military force. Though a king sits in the capital of Hossberg, the Wardens are also treated as lords and barons. While their political power has waned elsewhere, the old order can still wield influence wherever the people are beset by the constant menace of invasion.

Antiva

Enjoying a warm north-eastern climate, Antiva is a nation of prodigious vineyards and good living. It possesses a respected noble lineage that can be traced back over millennia, though it is unofficially a private plutocracy. In reality, the authority of the existing monarchy has been in decline for decades, a trend that battle the Qunari invasion has only accelerated. Among merchants in Antiva, possessing sufficient capital to resolve any external diplomatic quandaries with a well-aimed purse or threat of withdrawn trade.

Despite the lack of a strong military tradition, there is another reason why Antiva has rarely feared invasion: the infamous House of Crows. Contemporary Antivans may not boast a distinguished reputation on the battlefield, but they produce some of the deadliest assassins in Thedas. Were a conquering general to make this land his own, how long would he enjoy it before death arrived in the form of a wine glass, a loose balcony or a delicious cake? Such is the reputation of the Crows, to have kept whole armies at bay. Should you ever do something to ingrat in dickie Antiva, understand that you have entered a land of daggers.

Deep Roads

Any dwarf today can tell you tales of the Deep Roads as they once were – a grand network of tunnels that joined the thaigs, the caverns where settlements were built in honor of the Paragons. These subterranean highways were works of unparalleled artisan achievement, with centuries of planning and engineering demonstrated in the construction of their walls. Statues of the Paragons watched over passing travelers, and channels carried a flow of lava that fed the Deep Roads lit and warm.

This once-proud creation is now the source of much lament for what they have lost. Today, only two thaigs even remain inhabited: Kal-Sharok and Orzammar in the Frostback Mountains. When the darkspawn first appeared, the dwarves sealed off the entrances to their cherished roads, abandoning everything that lay beyond, and retreated. With each passing year, the fearless spreads a little further.

Though they were ousted from the Thedas mainland by the Exalted Marches, the Qunari held Par Vollen and regard it as part of their empire. It remains their strongest foothold in the region. Contact with their homeland has been intermittent at best across the turbulent northern oceans and there is doubt as to whether a ship has made contact in many years.

It is said that another people known as the Fex also inhabit Par Vollen, though little is known of them.

Par Vollen

Some scholars believe that the first humans in Thedas came from the rainforests of Par Vollen many thousands of years ago, migrating south from the archipelago. The pyramids they built still stand to this day and are regarded by travelers to the region as true wonders.

Three hundred years ago, circa 6.30 Steel, the first Qunari warships landed. Clad in armor and bearing cannons, the invading force swiftly overwhelmed the native people in a brief but decisive bloodbath. A colony was established and the settlers built a strategic base on the southern coast. Qunandar is now a glittering capital city, famous for its great domes and aqueducts.

Rivain

The Rivaini are unique among the humans of Thedas in regard to their appearance and their culture. They are olive-skinned or darker and often distinguish themselves further with tattoos and body piercings – the more elaborate the decorations, the higher one's social standing or rank. They have a cordial relation with the elves, from whom the practice may have been adopted. They are not commonly followers of Andraste, and some have even converted to the Qun, the Qunari religion.

Seheron

While Par Vollen remains comfortably in the grip of the Qunari, Seheron is an island in dispute. It was part of the Tevinter Imperium until it was claimed by the Qunari sixty years ago, though the battle for dominion continues. Adding to the turmoil is the significant presence of the Tal-Vashoth, bands of the horned race (known as the kossith) who have rejected the Qun.

Seheron's most impressive features date back to the glory days of the ancient Imperium, but its legacy has turned against it. Many elven slaves have willingly converted to the Qun and now hold office within the Qunari ranks, helping the invaders to oust their old Tevinter masters. Some humans who remain also feel abandoned by the Imperium. Because the Tevinters never signed the Llomeryn Accords, it is here that the Qunari invasion continues to be fought. Seheron is still katherah in Qunari eyes – a land to be conquered and converted, literally "those who need to be taught".

Kyrnin
Races and Religion

Humans

The most numerous, yet the most divided of the races. Humans have their fate ever united under a single cause, and it has been many centuries since the last. Religion and The Chantry play a large part in human society. It distinguishes them from the elves and dwarves more than anything else. While the other races decline, humanity has thrived and continues to survive.

Humans in times past worshipped a draconic pantheon of Old Gods, dragonlords that supposedly once ruled over Thedas and now slumber beneath the earth. But the people would come to suffer indeed under the yoke of the Tevinter Imperium, a land of powerful magisters and slaves. The Old Gods were abandoned, and the Imperium spawned new challenges from the south by Tevinter rune, city of wonders to the north by Nathrakh and his wife, the prophet Andraste.

Andraste brought the teachings of a new god, the Maker, and her word spread quickly. The oppressed masses of the Imperium rose up in rebellion to support the invading barbarians and eventually most of the south fell to their might. Andraste was not stopped in her Exalted March until she was betrayed by her husband Justice of her power. Maleficarum lured Andraste over to the Tevinter side and burned her at the stake in 1:Dragon:0.

The Chant of Light would say that the Maker turned his back on humanity when she died. He would only return and make the world whole again when the Chant of Light was lost to the ears of mortals. And so it was, and the Chantry began its work.

The decline of the Chantry were oppressed until the beginning emperor Drakon of Orlais converted and took on their cause, and Orlais rose to power. Other nations followed suit, and the Chantry has spread throughout the world.

Dwarves

It is well known that dwarves are a stout, bearded race, often making up in skill what they lack in height. The stereotype also includes a propensity to hoard wealth, a thought to be true among the dwarves of Kal-Sharok. But their proximity to the dalmagaan means their numbers are dwindling – a low fertility rate, combined with the steady rate of fatalities in battle, means the dwarves of Kal-Sharok are in decline. Their society is ruled by a theocracy of priests.

Their steadfast nature has been a blessing and a curse. It has granted them the mental fortitude to survive in conditions that would drive other races to madness, but it has also made them slow to change. Dwarves are traditionalists and conservatives, and they have been known to cling to their ways even when they are clearly wrong. Their society has changed little since the Golden Age, when they were at the height of their power. Their culture is centered around the concept of honor, which is a rigid code centered on ancestry. Dwarves are ranked according to their ancestors' deeds, and honor is the means by which they climb or fall in rank.

The dwarves don't have a religion, per se; nor do they believe in gods. Instead, their philosophy promotes excellence and an unshakable faith in the Stone. They call their ancestors the Paragons, and they are revered and admired as heroes of old. They are the Stone's children; they respect her, they fear her, they cherish her, and they give thanks to her for protecting, nurturing, and providing for them.

Worship is reserved for ancestors. The greatest dwarves from the stuff of legend, their achievements earning the status of Paragon. In death, Paragons are revered as gods, and their spirits are said to watch over their descendants. Dwarves usually, a part of the foundation upon which all dwarven society rests. In the King of Orzammar, enormous statues of past Paragons line the Proving Grounds, and the Paragon's Hall of Ancestors is reserved solely to warriors: some of the greatest Paragons have been smiths and artisans, commoners as well as kings.

Elves

When they were the first and only race, the elves are said to have been immortals who lived in harmony with nature. Then came humans, and the elves were driven to the edges of the world, where they lived in the forests and caves. Many of the elves of Thedas perished, whose lives thinned to by an instant, were considered no more than a pest. But too late did the elves discover that unlike all other races, humans did not die of old age. Instead, they lived on and on. Their numbers grew, and grew still. As I horrified at this, they withdrew to their home of Dirthamen before humanity's relentless expansion and broke off all contact.

In 361 Ancient, the Tevinter Imperium took the act of adoption as hostility and declared war. The fabled elven city of Arlathan was destroyed, and the elves were driven from their homes. Their gods were abandoned and forgotten. Their culture was shattered. Their people were enslaved. Their civilization was destroyed. The elves were enslaved and all evidence of their ancient culture was lost.

Despite being freed upon the Imperium's collapse, the damage was done: the elves had lost their immortality, much language and history, and they blamed humanity for it. They attempted to rebuild a homeland in the Dales, but their pagan practices were banned by the Chantry, and they were driven out. Many fled to the alienages of the human cities, where they lived in squalid ghettos beneath the notice of their masters. Others became nomads, wandering the countryside, living in caravans, and eschewing anything to remind them gods and maintain their traditions. The other elves became bitterly resigned to their fate and now live amongst humankind as "city elves", second-class citizens, servants, and laborers who have all but forgotten the proud folk they once were.

Qunari

Bronze-skinned giants who exist from a land far beyond the Boiric Ocean, the Qunari are a mystery to most. Technologically advanced, they reached the shores of The Vother in fabulous ships and immediately embarked on a conquest of unprecedented scale. They are a race of warriors and philosophers, and their society is ruled by the Arishok, a military leader, and all children are handed to the Tamassran to be raised in the Reeds and Rushes. The Tamassran educates the talents of their wards and assign them a station in life at the age of twelve. Gender proscribes neither roles, so only men may become Tamassran and only women may become Arishok. Those who do not fit into the roles of the Qun are considered to be tangled among roles as a Ben-Hassrath.

The Qun philosophy regards magic as a corrupting influence, at odds with self-discipline: the more you attempt to master it, the more it masters you. The Qunari do not practice magic, and those who do are exiled and shunned. Mages who are captured are bled and enslaved to a handler or arrested. If found practicing forbidden magic, their tongues are cut out to prevent them casting anything.

To the Qunari, humanity is a lesser race still unchosen.Northern mages and would benefit from the tighter order that the Qun brings. To become a Qunari and embrace the Qun would entail a life unfathomable to humanity. The Qunari view the delicate peace exists currently between the Qunari and humanity, factors aggression is almost assured. the Qun is an implacable doctrine that will be forced.

Nature and History of Thedas

Darkspawn & Blight

Darkspawn is the collective name for the corrupted creatures that dwell underground. Infesting the Deep Roads and occasionally finding their way to the surface. Wild and savage, these creatures have presented a threat ever since they were first discovered by the dwarves.

In times of Blight, an ancient evil arises that can marshal the twisted darkspawn into an organized army. Thousands swarm from the deep, destroying all life and leaving their land across the world.

The horde's presence brings the Blight disease, a plague that can leave the land tainted and blackened. Even when slain, the darkspawn's corruption lingers in the land and the wounds of the survivors. Ash Sanctum is Darkspawn and physical darkness, and affects those exposed to the corruption. The Blight disease is ultimately fatal.

The darkspawn invade the world, the taint they leave behind is the most dangerous threat of all.

The Old Gods, dragonlords who reigned as a corrupting influence, at odds with self-discipline: the more you attempt to master it, the more it masters you. The Qun

The Hurnist was formerly called the beautiful city became known as the Qunari after the prophet Kostan bestowed upon them the Qun philosophy and religion. The teachings of the Qunari that favored society into a model of efficiency and order. That order meant an unity, so they declared a state of perfection.

Rigorously structured, Qunari society has dispensed with the family unit. Couples are paired for breeding purely to reproduce, and all children are handed to the Tamassran to be raised in the Reeds and Rushes. The Tamassran evaluate the talents of their wards and assign them a station in life at the age of twelve. Magic

Magic is hard work, demanding learning and discipline to achieve specific, supernatural effects that are often carefully formalized as spells. A mage cannot simply make a wish and push a finger.

As a matter of fact, not everyone can cast magic, and many a the talent ability that defines a mage. Often inherited, it is a potential that may lay hidden until a moment in the mage unless drawn out by another. But those who possess such a potential are called mages, and they are feared and hated by the common people of Thedas. Magic is a mysterious force of nature, and only its internal workings from the Fade, and the energy is expended in the practice of magic. Just as the Fade can be reshaped by those who have grasped its nature, so this wound can be manipulated by magic.

Lyrium

Also called precious of exuberance, lyrium is a catalyst for enhancement and amplifies activities. Hazardous in its raw form, lyrium can be refined into potions and poultices used by mages and templars alike. It is also the main source of magic within wrists and deep natural deposits. the dwarves' resistance to lyrium and their unparalleled expertise in mining underpins a thriving trade with the surface world. Lyrium is also a powerful addictive, deadly when withdrawn. Lyrium addicts will do anything to get their next dose.

The legendary separation of dwarven weapons and armor was to their Smith Caridin's talent for working lyrium into steel. It is said that Caridin's secret died with him, and the mining in resentment in the practice of magic. Lyrium consumption strengthens a mage's relation to the Fade, thereby boosting their power. The lyrium weapons are said to indulge its use for the purpose of artifacts.

Forbidden Magic

Blood magic is the art of fueling spells with the force, specifically in the form of blood, instead of mana. It was common knowledge among the Tevinter Imperium, and the practice was so widespread that the rune would spells of blood magic, and the Chantry would burn those who practiced it.

Over time, however, the Imperium discovered types of spells that could only be worked by blood. Although torn will allow a mage to ward his consciousness against the forces of the Fade, and the Chantry would declare it forbidden. Only the use of blood in dreams, and even influence or dominate their thoughts. Just as treacherous, blood magic can also be used to allow demons access to the physical world.

The use of blood magic was criminalized with the inception of the Circle of Magi, as common wisdom holds that there is no way our blood magic can be practiced in secret with the blood mages who lay their own blood that is used for the power of others, or find a need to control minds or summon demons.

Forbidden Magic

While maleficarum practice forbidden magic, spookiness, by contrast, are those practicing normal magic outside the sanction of the Circle of Magi. All mages outside the Circle's control, even those not practicing the forbidden arts, are considered maleficarum by the Chantry. Those who are discovered are hunted down by templars and given the choice of Harrowing or the templars. Only a handful of apostates flourish in the Fade, and they must constantly be on the run from the templars. Any mage's demon summoning in order to escape.

Those who still, however, practice the forbidden arts perform maleficarum and apostates exist quietly in or disguise. In some remote areas, ancient folk-magic traditions persist: the shamans in tevinter villages, the local alchemist who makes love charms, the hermit witch who specializes in curses. Most maleficarum and apostates are hunted down by templars without Circle training. Some of these magic users are aware that they are apostates or maleficarum in the eyes of the Chantry and thus tend to be secretive and reclusive. Others believe these individuals are sanctioned to persecution, take of witches and sorcerers going mad are quite common.

The Fade

Where do we go when we dream? The Fade is the spirit plane, the realm of thought and the source of all magic, only accessible through the dreams of sleeping humans and elves. The Fade is a realm of pure spirit and thought, and it is the source of all magic. Spirits dwell here, and they are the beings that power the spells of mages. Demons also live here. Malevolent, they are spirits endlessly re-shape their world from whatever they glimpse in ours. Only a magic with the aid of lyrium, may learn to access the dreamworld and enter the Fade. Only a mage can consciously enter the Fade, and only a mage can remain there for any time in the Fade upon waking, mages are cursed to recall it.

The Fade and Dreams

Sleeping victims of the Fade realm first their most comforting thoughts share the watchful presence of benign inhabitants. Then, as the dreamer sinks deeper into unconsciousness, the Fade reflects the fears of the dreamer, and demons begin to gather, faint and hope can object voices and promote those experience in their mind realm.

The world of the Fade is a place of fascination and terror. Its inhabitants, the demons, are the source of the fear regarding mages and forbidden magic. Common lore says the spirits were the Maker's first children, beautiful but flawed, and that some spirits were cast out of the heavens and became demons. Others say they were born of sin.

In times past, the Tevinter lords summoned demons to do their bidding against their enemies. Such pacts now count as maleficarum, and the Chantry would declare it forbidden. Only the use of blood in dreams, and even influence or dominate their thoughts. Just as treacherous, blood magic can also be used to allow demons access to the physical world.

Demons can possess the bodies of any susceptible creature, both the living and the dead, if the host between the world and the Fade is the easiest to enter. It is between them that the most frequent contact occurs. Any creature that can cross between the Fade and may be lured by their whispers. But demons are most empowered when they can feed on emotions, specific with, hunger, desire, and these determine the form and manifestation.

The abomination is the most powerful and destructive form of sin, occurring when a demon possesses a living being with magical ability. It is the most dangerous of all demons and is a favored prospect the entertainment of the Circle of Magi, where mages could be contained and monitored – called, if necessary – to prevent an outbreak.

Ecumenity and Money

Although the central appearance of coins vary from nation to nation, they follow the same system. One hundred copper pieces are worth one silver piece, and one hundred silver pieces are worth one gold piece. At one time, the size and purity of coins was regulated by the Chantry, but this is no longer the case. Many nations still mint coins that are made of pure gold or silver, but the Qunari mint coins of standard weight and purity, and the Orlesian Empire mints coins of gold-plated lead. Most nations quickly converted. Particularly expensive transactions may be completed in "bank" (solid bricks) and "checks" (promissory notes), but coins are the most common form of currency.

The Landsmeet

When Fereldan was divided among barbarian tribes, the banns (or barons) recognized that issues affecting them all required a common decision. The Landsmeet was the solution, during which each bann was guaranteed safe passage and a forum throughout the meeting.

In the Landsmeet, the banns have chosen to fight against the occupation of the Imperium, to repel the werewolves, and to defend the Dales from the Chantry. Each bann has a vote, and a majority vote is required to pass a motion. Only the bann has the right to bring up any matter of concern. The Landsmeet is standard and traditional, and it is the duty of the bann to attend.

Long ago, the location changed with each Landsmeet, but since the crowning of the first king, they have taken place exclusively in Denerim. The Landsmeet occurs at least once a year, although more King Bann wounded to the throne, it has begun to meet once per season. Most noble families thus maintain an estate in Denerim to house themselves and their entourages when they are in the Landsmeet.

The Templars

Dragon Age II takes its name from the Chantry calendar, adopted to replace those of Tevinter and the individual states. The Dragon Age is 0 and counting, and it is the birth age. Each age spans one hundred years, and the current year is 9:Dragon:0. The epoch endlessly re-shape their world from whatever they glimpse in ours. Only a magic with the aid of lyrium, may learn to access the dreamworld and enter the Fade. Only a mage can consciously enter the Fade, and only a mage can remain there for any time in the Fade upon waking, mages are cursed to recall it.

Mages and Templars

The Templars are the Chantry's military branch, founded to protect the world from the mages. Each Circle of Magi is overseen by a Knight-Commander, who is the templars' commander. The Knight-Commander is the highest-ranking templar in the Circle, and he is also responsible for the mage's education. Templars are also stationed permanently within the Circle, and they are

Spoiler Alert!

The following pages contain character profiles that reveal the personal secrets and motivations held by the main characters of Dragon Age II. Because these facts are normally revealed through companion quests and conversations, it is strongly recommended that you do not consult this section until you have played the game and explored the possibilities for yourself.

Hawke

The one certain fact about Hawke is that he or she ends up as the Champion of Kirkwall. Players opting for a female lead will become Marian Hawke by default, otherwise taking the male default of Garrett Hawke. The rest of the aspects of Hawke's personality, appearance, actions and interactions with others are freely determined by the player. Whether Hawke is merciful and generous or ruthless and mean, supportive, dismissive, or always looking for the humorous response, in favor of the mages or the templars, all of these choices are entirely up to the player and determine the outcome of most of the events that occur throughout the storyline.

Hawke's Lineage

Hawke's father was no less than a Fereldan mage, a practitioner whose apostasy forced the family to relocate to the quiet outskirts of rural Lothering. Keeping a low profile and always looking to stay one step ahead of the authorities, Malcolm Hawke was able to keep the family together and raise his offspring in a manner that nurtured their individual talents. Malcolm died three years before the events of the game's prologue, leaving the future Champion as head of the household.

The Champion can also cite a noble bloodline, if a discredited one, from his mother, Leandra Amell. Leandra was supposed to marry a noble in Kirkwall, one Comte de Launcet, but she fell in love with Malcolm Hawke – a Fereldan apostate – and moved away with him. It is Leandra who was meant to inherit her parents' estate when they died, but as she was in Fereldan, Gamlen took it and eventually squandered it away with his gambling habit.

Carver

The Champion's brash younger brother, Carver signed up for military service immediately after his father died. Raised in a family of apostates but never showing any sign of the magical talent that made his twin sister Bethany special, he hid his feelings of inferiority behind clowning and risk-taking. Worse, any attempt to prove his own worth was always eclipsed by Hawke.

If your Champion is a rogue or warrior, Carver will not survive the Prologue. His life is also in peril if he catches Blight disease during the Deep Roads expedition, and he must become a Grey Warden to survive. Otherwise, his future rests with the templars. He will distance himself from the family as a consequence, but with the passing of years it is possible to develop a mutual respect that will again find the two brothers fighting side by side in times of crisis.

Bethany

Bethany is the Champion's sister and also Carver's twin. In this generation, be it gift or curse, Bethany inherited the bloodline's distinct aptitude for magic. She can turn her skill to any mystical discipline, given the right opportunities, but the Hawkes have chosen to keep Bethany's talents hidden away from the prying eyes of the templars and the Circle of Magi.

If your Champion is a mage, Bethany will not survive the Prologue. Her life is also forfeit if she accompanies Hawke to the Deep Roads unless she joins the Grey Wardens, thereby becoming a Blighted figure who patrols the far reaches of civilization. Otherwise, she is outed by templars in the Champion's absence and inducted into the Circle of Magi.

Varric Tethras

Born into a merchant family, Varric is the youngest child of the noble House Tethras. While his brother Bartrand is old enough to remember life in Orzammar, Varric was raised on the surface after the family was exiled. A "skyer" by birth, and a city-dweller to boot, he has been tempered to a dwarven homeland and wouldn't know how to work the Stone if his ancestors were standing over him.

Outwardly, Varric gives the impression of a flamboyant dilettante, all mouth and chest hair, a rascal son from a wealthy family whose accidental inheritance now sustains many a tavern. True enough, he does enjoy spinning a fanciful yarn and expects a full tankard to keep the vocal chords moist throughout the telling. But Varric has found the perfect cover for a shrewd systematic his network of contacts feeding him inside knowledge of everything happening in the city.

In time, even Varric must come to terms with taking on his brother's responsibilities. Everyone involved with the Champion's rise to power finds their lives unexpectedly altered in some way.

Aveline Vallen

Aveline's father was a proud Chevalier, forced to flee Orlais when his patron became a victim of court intrigue. Reduced to running a Fereldan farmstead, he named his daughter after the legendary first female knight and invested far more in her than the gift of his training in chivalrous combat. But on seeing her long fall at Ostagar, then her husband Wesley claimed by Blight, Aveline would form her own opinions of loyalty, honor and sacrifice.

Aveline puts her talents to good use in defending Kirkwall as an officer of the city guard, eliminating the corruption of her superiors and asserting the viscount's authority to maintain the peace. Her idea of duty extends to protective feelings about Hawke, though it is solely in a solitary sense.

In time, Aveline can forgive herself for Wesley's death and even come to love another in guardsman Donnic Hendyr, though this is one area in which Aveline feels less than adept. It will take the Champion's involvement to ensure that she doesn't make an entire mess of things, as Aveline's knowledge of matters of the heart has too long focused on how to run a blade through one.

Isabela

Pirate by birth, pirate by profession, trouble by nature: Isabela has the kind of reputation that doesn't simply precede but also chases her, hurriedly, from port to port. Marooned in Kirkwall, the swashbuckling scoundrel has instead been making waves on land in pursuit of treasure and kicks. But her stories of shipwreck prove to have as much veracity as Varric's yarns after a fifth tankard of Garbold's quaffing ale, and she may come to play a crucial role in the city's Qunari affair.

Her vessel was actually scuttled by cannon fire while fleeing the Qunari dreadnought – the accepted international greeting for someone who has just stolen the Tome of Koslun from the Arishok. Isabela imagined that the relic could pay off her debt to the scheming Antivan merchant, Castillon – not that it would cause a crisis with the Qunari.

Dragon Age: Origins players who previously 'encountered' Isabela in the Deneirim brothel, The Pearl, will know that she's always interested in a profitable dalliance. Those who disappoint her eventually feel the coldness of either her twin blades or her tongue, with some dispute over which can cut the deepest.

Merrill

Dry tradition was certainly never enough for Merrill. We first met her in the Dalish Elf path of Dragon Age: Origins, where her apprenticeship to the Dalish Keeper versed her in the old ways. Merrill has come to believe that the elves hold themselves back by refusing to reclaim the magical powers they once commanded. She believes passionately in what she is now doing, even if it leaves her branded an outcast by the very people she strives to protect.

If the player chooses to become involved in her plight, even romantically, they will discover that Merrill walks a tightrope. She has made a demonic pact to acquire powers of forbidden magic, hoping that she can restore an arcane elvuian mirror and learn more from its study.

Anders

As a gifted adolescent, Anders was captured by the templars many times but always managed to escape. Persecution planted in him a seed of rebellion that has since grown into a consuming political activism.

Becoming a Grey Warden during the events of the Awakening expansion, the idealistic Anders appealed to the spirit of Justice not to ignore the plight of the world's mages. Torn from the Fade and lost on the wrong side of the Veil, this wandering spirit warrior agreed to merge with Anders in his pursuit of a noble cause.

But the bargain was also a curse, twisted by the Grey Warden's zeal and anger once invoked. When Hawke chances upon him in Kirkwall, Anders appears to be leading a life of charity and atonement that gives little hint of the after-ego that is Vengeance. He has fallen in with the mage underground movement and his beliefs are propelling him along a dangerous path, finding no solution without violence. Healer or killer? Anders is able to unleash a terrible rage that is just as likely to claim innocent lives.

Fenris

Indentured to the Tevinter Magister Danarius while still a child, this elven slave was destined for a lifetime of servitude. Luminescent tyrium tattoos were agonizingly burnt into his skin through a painstaking process, wiping his memory and forging him into a magical weapon as if he were living, malleable metal to be shaped and enchanted with runes. Fenris was kept as a bodyguard, a killing machine, a hound on the leash of his owner's until his escape.

The tragedy of his condition is that Fenris chose it for himself, fought for it, in sacrifice for a family he has since forgotten. Fenris is eventually led to face his old master and discover a betrayal. If the Champion intervenes to spare the sister, Varania, then Fenris may learn the truth of his past – but it cannot prevent him feeling alone in the world.

Sebastian Vael

Gambling, drinking and womanizing were Sebastian's first salvation: if his family hadn't committed him to the Chantry in an effort to clean up his act, he would have been killed alongside them. Sebastian was once the playboy prince of Starkhaven, a neighboring Free Marches state, but he has been forced to endure exile since the ruling Vaels were assassinated in a bloody coup d'etat.

The Champion was Sebastian's second salvation, taking up his cause and tracking down the mercenaries who deposed his family. Realizing they were no more than hired hands, Sebastian confronted the power behind the coup – the Harimanns of Kirkwall – and discovered a desire demon at the root.

Sebastian's third salvation was the Maker Himself, as he now finds a strength of faith in the vows he once took half-heartedly. He's still at liberty to assist the Champion wherever called on, though Grand Cleric Elthina isn't entirely convinced that the exiled prince is ready to re-enter the Chantry, and she appreciates his somewhat earthier view of the secular world.

Bartrand Tethras

On first meeting, Bartrand shows little interest in granting the Champion a place on his Deep Roads expedition. It takes Varric to explain that the fastest way to his brother's heart is with a sound cash investment.

Unlike his sibling, Bartrand was born in Orzammar and vaguely remembers his childhood in a noble dwarven household. The shame that led to his family's exile only robbed him of his birthright, but Bartrand's wistful longing for that privileged existence has turned to bitterness. Resentful of the human society he must now endure, Bartrand's passion is for money and the relief it can bring. He has established many lucrative enterprises and useful contacts through the old dwarf network of the kalinas and has set about creating a small empire as if the ceiling of Orzammar were still above him. If it will make surface living more bearable, anything that can buy a taste of the old place is worth the sacrifice.

Following the expedition, possession of the tyrium statue begins to warp Bartrand's mind even further. Exposure leads to madness, though it is the Champion's involvement that determines whether Varric takes pity or revenge.

Knight-Commander Meredith

The Order of Templars exerts considerable influence in Kirkwall, though its warriors are merely the steel gauntlet that sheathes the knight-commander's political grip. A crusader to her core, Meredith's strength springs from her belief that what she does is right and just. If left unconfined, mage would throw the world into chaos or expose it to demonic invasion. Harsh actions are thus justified if it protects the people from the corrupting influence of forbidden powers.

In the end sequences of the game, it is revealed that Meredith was the purchaser of the tyrium statue found during the Deep Roads expedition. She has had it reshaped, forged into a weapon with which to smite magic. Knowing Bartrand's fate, the player can surmise that Meredith's erratic behavior isn't entirely down to her conviction.

First Enchanter Orsino

As the first enchanter, Orsino holds the unenviable position of being in command of the Circle of Magi – in reality, and certainly in Kirkwall, a title granting little more power than that of prisoners' representative. It is a testament to his sense of duty that he tirelessly defends his quarantined wards against templar accusations, even while some regard him as a traitor and apologist.

Orsino is determined to make life better for his charges by standing up to Meredith and demonstrating that the Circle can act for the good of the people. As both a mage and an elf – still a slave race in this part of the world – he understands how fear leads to oppression. But he is also quick to overlook the threat posed by the knight-commander's entrenched Rights of Annulment, and is perhaps too willing to excuse the transgressions of his initiates as a consequence.

Grand Cleric Elthina

Perched in Kirkwall's Highttown, the Chantry looks down on the city with the lofty distance of the Maker himself. A similar sense of permanence surrounds Elthina, the grand cleric in charge, whose mollifying presence has often resolved the city's power struggles. Many squabbles between templars and the Circle have been pacified by Elthina's interventions down the years, and it's testament to her earnest good nature that she has managed to retain the utmost respect of all concerned while holding the post for as long as anyone can remember. But while she is loved by the people, Elthina is not always strong or decisive on their behalf. Ultimately, the grand cleric bears a responsibility for relinquishing too much authority to the more aggressive knight-commander.

Cassandra Pentaghast

Cassandra belongs to an exclusive order within the templars called the Seekers of Truth, as indicated by her uniform's insignia of an all-seeing eye. While ordinary templars are the Chantry's martial enforcers, policing the realm for magical apostasy, the Seekers are its investigators and inspectors. They uncover the hidden practice of magic and seek to stamp out its corruption, even within their own ranks.

As her surname reveals, Cassandra is a member of the royal family of Nevarra. She can trace her ancestry back to the figures of legend who, hundreds of years ago, nearly exterminated the dragons once and for all. Introduced in this game as the skeptical audience for Varric's oft-unreliable account, Cassandra is likely destined to play a much greater role in the future.

The Arishok

A Qunari dreadnought ran aground near Kirkwall after a fierce storm, stranding an entire crew of warriors and their general, the Arishok. They quickly established a makeshift camp in Lowtown, supposedly waiting for ships from the main fleet to collect them. Under the peace treaty with the Qunari, the city could hardly ask them to leave: but it is fair to say that their presence has been difficult and undesirable.

In truth, the Arishok cannot leave. He has lost a holy relic, the Tome of Koslun, and returning home without it would bring a dishonor worse than death. But the discord and unruliness of human society offends his Qunari sense of harmony; testing his patience and his tolerance of the heathen races.

"Arishok" is actually a title for a military leader, not a name, and it is an aspect of Qunari culture to define self-identity by one's assigned station or purpose. Qunari generals are also warriors rather than tacticians, leading from the front, so the Arishok outranks his troops by a measure of strength, physique and prowess. Supremely confident, he elicits total obedience from his men.

Flemeth

Many tales are told about the Witch of the Wilds, a very old and powerful sorceress. Some of the tastier ones are even true, as Flemeth has lived long enough to make them happen. Hawke may not realize he has cut a deal with a shapeshifter whose guile is more dangerous than her dragon form, but the fates are hard by when your life is saved by a figure of legend.In Dragon Age: Origins, Morrigan recovered Flemeth's black grimoire and learned the dread secret of her mother's longevity. For centuries, the Witch had seduced and slain the menfolk of the Chasind tribes until she produced a suitable girl. She would dutifully raise the child until it came of age. But when the time was right, Flemeth would steal the daughter's body as a vessel for her own spirit, extending her life through successive generations.

King Calan Theirin & Queen Anora

Son of the respected King Maric, Calan was the first of his line to oversee a land free of foreign rule for two generations. At peace with Orlais, Fereldan began to flourish and prosper as an independent nation. But peacetime did not always sit so agreeably with Calan; a good man, but one who longed to make his name by heroic deeds. Sensible governance and diplomacy were more the forte of his shrewd consort, Queen Anora. The young king thus jumped at the chance to quash a Fifth Blight, marshalling his own regiment at Ostagar in his eagerness to fight darkspawn alongside the Grey Wardens.

Calan was betrayed by his general and Anora's father, Teyrn Loghain, who withdrew the support of the main army. Hawke, Carver, Aveline and Wesley were among the few survivors to make it out of the massacre in Ostagar that night. Their king did not.

Alistair Theirin

Alistair was enlisted by the Grey Wardens before taking his templar vows, though it's uncertain that he fully possessed the requisite mindset for a dedicated mage-hunter. As the companion of the Hero of Fereldan, and one of the main characters in Origins, he was disposed to see the good and the bad in all of the factions united against the darkspawn by the ancient treaties.

Several canonical versions of the storyline reveal that Alistair was the bastard son of King Maric, granting him a stronger claim to the crown than Loghain's daughter, Anora. King Alistair accedes to the throne of Fereldan following his part in the defeat of the archdemon and the repulsion of the Fifth Blight. Other versions find him still a Grey Warden, or even a weakwilled up drunkard.
